

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, 1905

NO. I

ANOTHER college year, Princeton's 159th, opened auspiciously on the afternoon of Thursday, September 21st, with the usual exercises,—the academic procession of trustees and faculty, in gowns and hoods hastily taken from dark closets and antimoth nostrums; the brief opening address in Marquand Chapel by the President, and the benediction by the Rev. Dr. J. Addison Henry '57 of the Board of Trustees. On the following morning, the regular recitations and lectures were started in the several departments of the University, and on the campus and contiguous territory the more informal but not less invigorating "opening exercises" which unwritten law imposes on Princeton undergraduates, and especially on the sophomores, has again transformed the place from its summer stillness to the more or less interesting young life of clash and color, wherein willing performers step lively to the chorused clamor of "Hit it up, freshmen," "Go on, hit it up," "Take that hat off," etc.,—which is not hazing, but merely "horsing."

IN HIS OPENING ADDRESS President Wilson '79 had the unusual pleasure of welcoming to Princeton (in addition to one of the largest freshman classes to enter) the men who are to initiate the new preceptorial system, representing by far the largest increase in the faculty ever made at one time. By their accession Princeton's teaching staff is augmented by over fifty per cent., making its total about 160 members. The first business of the authorities of the University at this opening is the successful introduction of the new system of instruction, and to that end the energies of the faculty are now turned. There are many details to be worked out in its application to the established curriculum, but after frequent conferences and much committee work in the departments to which it applies, a beginning has already been made, the preceptors have created a very favorable impression as a group of unusually attractive men, capable scholars, and practical teachers, and they are entering upon their important work with enthusiasm.

IN ADDITION TO THE NEW MEMBERS of the faculty who come as preceptors (and whose names and departments were mentioned in our last number in June) it gives us much pleasure, on behalf of the alumni, to welcome to Princeton James Hopwood Jeans from Cambridge University, England, quite the most distinguished of the younger authorities on mathematical physics, who has just come to us as Professor of Mathematics; also to welcome Dr. Charles Henry Smyth, Jr., late of Hamilton College, who comes to Princeton as Professor of Geology; Dr. Hamilton Ford Allen, of Washington and Jefferson, who succeeds Dr. Grant Showerman as Professor of Latin; Dr. George Augustus Hulett '92, late of the faculty of the University of Michigan, now Assistant Professor of Chemistry at Princeton; Lucius Hopkins Miller '97, the new Assistant Professor of Biblical Instruction, and the following new instructors: In philosophy, Mortimer P. Mason; in history, jurisprudence and politics, Arthur Crosby Ludington; in classics, Charles H. Jones and Charles Rufus Morey; in English, Morris W. Croll and Louis Wardlaw Miles; in modern languages, Charles Edward Lyon, Charles E. Mathews and Alfred E. Richards; in mathematics, C. R. MacInnes, Emerson Boyd Morrow '04 and A. L. Underhill; in physics, Royal E. Trone '05, Herman E. March and Clinton J. Davisson; in geology, William J. Sinclair; in civil engineering, Joseph Rudd Greenwood '05, and in astronomy, Henry Norris Russell '97.

George L. Raymond, Arnold Guyot Cameron '86, and W. M. Reed; instructors W. H. McLauchlan, J. S. Van Nest '97, O. D. Kellogg '99, H. N. White '01, John P. Hall '97, H. M. Kallen, R. P. Anderson '03, F. C. Smith '04, C. S. Hudson '01, H. C. Rentschler '03, and D. W. Richardson.

THE CLASS OF OUGHTY-NINE shows a marked increase in numbers over last year's freshmen, though it may not quite reach the 400 mark. The rolls now show 391 freshmen, and the first year specials ranking as freshmen will make the gross total say 410. From this must be deducted the usual number who pass the examinations but, for various reasons, do not matriculate,—this year perhaps as many as twenty-five—which would give a net total of nearly 400 freshmen. Last year's catalogue shows 348 regular freshmen, 146 in the A.B. department, 202 for the science degrees. This year there are 191 enrolled for the A.B., 112 for the B.S. and Litt. B. (undifferentiated in freshman year) and 84 for the C.E. The gain, therefore, is entirely in the academic department, showing a reaction from the tendency of recent classes. And '09 ought to be a strong class intellectually, for this year the faculty has cut out reexaminations for the weak brethren who fail to pass muster at the established trials. On the football field the new Princetonians have not made a startling impression, but they give promise of better things in baseball and on the track. Also, they have already divided with the sophomores the honor of winning the rush, and on a similar occasion, at their first class election, they showed that they were fairly able to take care of themselves. Their President is George Henry Fryer of Pottstown, Pa., their Vice-President, Percy Waller of Skaneateles, N. Y., their Secretary and Treasurer, Henry S. Chapman of Pittsburgh.

TO THE RETURNING PILGRIM, scanning the distant horizon for the Towers of Princeton, the usual reminiscence of academic repose gives place this fall to a lively impression of something doing, by the time he alights at the Junction. And the impression grows apace as he is rumbled over the sinuous three miles to the campus. For the ancient snake trail of more or less glorious memory, which has given Princeton bumptious access to the busy world time out of mind, is yielding to the spirit of modern improvement, and by the time the welcome thousands descend upon us for the annual Army and Navy football game, perhaps sooner, a double track, sans twists and tumbles, will connect this sequestered seat of learning with the main line of the Pennsylvania railroad,—a consummation long and devoutly wished. The rails have already been laid from the Junction to Penn's Neck, and the builders are now busy on the bridge over the Canal and on the terminal tracks below Brokaw Field, for use when big crowds come.

AS ONE CROSSES the moat and drawbridge (vulgarly known as the canal and railroad bridge) to "the castles of our dreams," a gaping scar in the landscape to the right shows where the diggers have been busy on the old swamp along which the translucent billows of Princeton Lake will be breaking before snow flies,—according to the contract. The clearing seems to be finished, the excavating is progressing, and the dam at Kingston is under construction. After the dam is completed, the breakers will begin to break.

ON THE CAMPUS ITSELF, several additional improvements have been made and others are under way. Along the east side of Brokaw Field, the walls of the Alumni Dormitory given by the ten classes from '92 to '01, the cornerstone of which was laid last June by the Class of '95, very informally, are now up to the second floor, giving a fine impression of the style and dimensions of the building, the material and architecture being in harmony with Blair and Little Halls and the Gymnasium. The interior of Nassau Hall is being changed in accordance with the action of the trustees last June, the museum having been removed to provide a suitable place for the meeting of the University faculty. On Nassau street the Fitz-Randolph Gateway has been completed and the house occupied by Professor Cornwall has been moved from the lot adjoining the First Presbyterian Church, leaving a green stretch of campus in front of Alexander Hall. Electric lights, instead of the old gas lamps, have been distributed over the campus; Brown, Dod and University Halls have been repainted, etc., etc. Curator Bunn has had a busy summer,—and the campus never looked better.

ON UNIVERSITY FIELD, where the Army-Navy game is to be played on December 2d, the work of enlarging the stands is in progress. By extending the west stand both in height and length, it will seat between 9,000 and 10,000, the north stand will hold 2,000, and with the big east and south stands, to be put up later, Princeton will be able to welcome and provide seats for over 25,000 spectators on December 2nd. Due notice of the time and method of distribution of Princeton's allotment of the seats will be given in these columns. The Army and Navy together are to have 15,000 seats, leaving perhaps 11,000 for Princeton. These are to be put on sale for the benefit of the relief societies of the Army and Navy, with a limit of not more than two seats for each Princeton alumnus applying, and not more than four contiguous seats on joint application of more than one alumnus. The Yale game being scheduled for New Haven this year, the Cornell game will doubtless attract the largest crowd of the fall to see Princeton play on University Field.

Opening of the Football Season

ABOUT sixty candidates are out for the football team this fall, a few less than usual. But this ought to be enough to turn out a good team, if there were a fair average of unusually heavy players such as are required for the sort of push-and-pull football which the rules committee failed to reform by their unimportant changes last spring. The kind of players needed for the modern development of the game has not been brought in by the freshman class. Princeton's chief reliance this fall, therefore, must be upon the meagre remnant of last year's eleven, and the substitutes who have not heretofore made good. It is anything but an encouraging outlook.

Of last year's eleven, Captain Foulke, half-back, Short, guard, Crawford, end, Burke, quarter, King, substitute half-back, and Ward, substitute end, have been graduated; Rulon-Miller, perhaps the strongest man back of the line last year, has been obliged to leave college on account of ill health; and Stanard, tackle, and Ritter, half-back, both fell victims to the strenuous February examinations, though Stanard is back in college and may be eligible next fall. Of the men who played in the last Yale game there remain only Captain Cooney '07, left tackle, and Dillon '07, left guard, who are both playing their usually strong game; Tooker '06, right end, Dutcher '07, center, McCormick '08, substitute full-back, and Tenney '07, substitute quarter.

Although the situation demands unusual new material, the only heavy freshman who has made a good impression is Waller, the Lawrenceville guard (a brother of Waller '06) who weighs considerably over 200 pounds, and may fill one of the gaps in the line. He has been tried at guard and tackle. The other freshmen who may prove available are Dillon from Exeter, who is a fast quarter-back and will give Tenney a race for the position; Fryer from Hill School and Wasserman from Columbia Grammar School, both ends, and Moscrip from Mercerburg, full-back or half-back.

For the line, Captain Cooney must depend largely upon substitutes, including Carothers '06, who weighs about 185 pounds and is being tried at center; Rafferty '06, who is again out for guard and is doing better than heretofore; Waller '06, also at guard; and Herring '07, Baker '07, and Brown '07 at tackle. For end the leading candidates are Tooker '06, right end on last year's eleven; Brasher '06, Munn '06, who has been tried back of the line for three years, and Fryer, the Hill School freshman.

In the back-field the situation is fairly bad. All of last year's regular backs are out of college. McCormick '08 has the first call for full-back, and Tenney '07 is being given the first chance at quarter, with Dillon, the freshman, and McClintock '08 as understudies. At half-back Bard '06 and Daub '07 are being tried. They are both strong, heavy men, and Bard especially has been doing well so far. Simons '08, Pfeiffer '08 and Willock '07 are fast candidates for half, and Simons is keeping up his good work on end runs,—a style of offense, however, which, unfortunately, has not proved particularly useful in the big games of recent years.

From present indications Princeton is also going to be weak in kicking this year. No first-class punter has appeared so far to take Rulon-Miller's place. McCormick is only a fair punter and neither Bard nor Tenney, who are both being coached in kicking, is better. Cooney is kicking the goals from touchdowns, and in the Villa Nova game he lost only one out of seven.

A. R. T. Hillebrand '00 is again head coach, and the other regular coaches on hand are W. H. Edwards '00, A. W.

Kelly '98, H. H. Short '05, and T. J. Burke '05. J. B. Riggs '92, John Baird '99 and W. W. Roper '02 have been assisting in the preliminary coaching.

PRINCETON 41, VILLA NOVA 0

In the opening game of the season Princeton beat Villa Nova 41-0 on University Field, Sept. 27th. Villa Nova proved very weak, and the game gave little chance to judge of Princeton's strength. Princeton's goal was in danger only once, when Villa Nova secured the ball on a fumble in the second half, and O'Connor made a good try for a field goal from the thirty-five yard line, which barely missed. Princeton made several bad fumbles, and the team work was more or less ragged.

Princeton scored four touchdowns and three goals in the first half, and three touchdowns and goals in the second. McCormick kicked off for Princeton. Villa Nova could not gain, and lost the ball on downs on their thirty-yard line. Bard went around left end for twenty-five yards, and Daub was pushed over for a touchdown after four minutes of play. Following the next kick-off Princeton rushed the ball within striking distance of the goal three times, only to lose it on fumbles, but McCormick was finally pushed over for the second score. After that it was easy, Bard and McCormick each making a touchdown in rapid succession before the half closed.

In the second half Captain Cooney tried out several new men, including E. Dillon, the freshman from Exeter, at quarterback; P. Waller '09, the heavy Lawrenceville guard; Fryer, the promising end from Hill School, and Moscrip from Mercersburg at fullback. Simons, the broad-jumper, who went in at half in place of Bard, made several spectacular end runs, and Dillon played well at quarter. Bard and Cooney were conspicuous ground-gainers in the first half; Willock, as well as Simons, did well in the second. There was very little punting, and Villa Nova had the ball so seldom that Princeton's defensive work was not given a test.

HIRAM PHILETUS HAMILTON '76

The Rev. Hiram Philetus Hamilton '76 died in the City of Mexico on August 20th. In 1879, after the completion of his course in the Union Theological Seminary, New York, Mr. Hamilton was appointed agent of the American Bible Society for Mexico, and had since filled that position with great acceptance. During the past two years his health had been precarious, but he continued at his post. A large number of the leading members of the American colony attended the funeral services. The interment was in the new American cemetery. Mr. Hamilton left a widow and three children.

Whereas it has seemed good to Almighty God in his all-wise providence to remove from us by death, on September 9th, our classmate and fellow student of former days William Erdman; therefore be it

Resolved, that we, the Class of '84 of Princeton University, sorrow in his death, recognizing the loss of a loyal member of the class and an able, upright and lovable fellow citizen; and

Resolved, that we extend the heartfelt sympathy of the class to his bereaved father and brothers; and

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to his relatives and be published in The Princeton Alumni Weekly.

CHARLES E. GRIFFITH '86

The Class Secretary regrets to report the death of Charles E. Griffith '86 at Panama on June 14th, of yellow fever. His body was brought back to this country and buried at Chicago on June 25th, by the side of his wife. At the time of his death he was chief engineer of the Panama American Co., which was building a refrigerating plant at Panama. Mr. Griffith was graduated from the School of Science in 1886. He was a well known athlete in college, and during senior year played in the rush line of the famous Lamar championship football team. He was very popular and was always held in high regard, both during and since his college career. Since graduation he has been engaged in engineering work and railroading all through the country, in Alaska and finally in Panama. He was married Nov. 23, 1887, at Johnsonburg, N. J., to Miss Elizabeth L. Foresman, youngest daughter of the Rev. R. B. Foresman, and is survived by a daughter, born in 1888. His untimely and sad death is deeply lamented by his friends and classmates.

FREDERICK EVANS,
Secretary.

WILLIAM BUTLER WOODBRIDGE '93

By the death of William Butler Woodbridge on June 14th, the Class of '93 has lost one of its most widely known and respected members. Mr. Woodbridge was born in Chicago in 1870. There, after his course at Princeton, he and his classmate R. McG. Mullen established a general building and contracting business. Later Mr. Woodbridge entered the life insurance business, serving as agent for various companies, and in 1899 he became general agent of the Bankers' Life Insurance Company in Boston. He conducted this agency with such marked success that in 1902 he organized, in association with Boston capitalists, the Columbian National Life Insurance Company, under the laws of Massachusetts. From its organization until his death, he was Second Vice-President and Director of Agencies of that company.

Mr. Woodbridge was killed in an automobile accident at Saugus, near Lynn, Massachusetts, the car in which he was riding being overturned and falling upon him, killing him instantly. His widow, a son, William Butler Woodbridge, Jr., nine years old, and a step-son, West Poatt Woodbridge, survive him. The members of the Class of '93 of Princeton University, by the undersigned committee, express their deep sense of bereavement in the death of their beloved classmate William Butler Woodbridge, whose manly and upright qualities and loyalty to college, class and friends endeared him to all. As an evidence of his classmates' sorrow and sympathy with his family, it is ordered that copies of this minute be forwarded to his widow and published in The Alumni Weekly.

HAROLD ARTHUR WATRES '01

Harold Arthur Watres '01 died at Englewood, N. J., on September 16th, after a brief illness, in the 27th year of his age. The funeral services were held on September 19th, at his home, Scranton, Pa., where the body was interred. Mr.

Watres was the eldest son of Col. and Mrs. L. A. Watres of Scranton, Pa., and the brother of L. H. Watres '04. He entered Princeton in September, 1897, and throughout his course was prominent in various undergraduate activities. He was particularly active in the Triangle Club, taking a leading part in its performances and serving as President of the organization in senior year. After graduation he studied law, first at University of Pennsylvania and afterwards at Columbia University, was admitted to the Pennsylvania bar and entered upon the practice of his profession at Scranton, where he was remarkably successful. He took a prominent part in all class matters and at the time of his death was a member of the Class Executive Committee. On September 13th, 1904, he was married to Miss Dorothy Jackson of Englewood, N. J., who survives him.

The Class of '01 desires to express its deep sorrow and sincere regret in the loss of one of its best beloved and strongest members. Harold Watres combined with many splendid characteristics a charm of personality and a warmth of interest which won for him the lasting affection of his friends. He was a man of strong principles, exemplary habits and marked ability. Unfailingly enthusiastic in all matters affecting the class and the University, he was ever ready to perform any helpful service with characteristic energy and unvarying efficiency. The class may well mourn his untimely death, for his place in its life will be difficult if not impossible to fill, and the extent of his loss will be more keenly felt as time goes on. The class extends to his wife and his family its sincere sympathy in their sudden bereavement.

J. D. SMALL '96

Carbide is the product from which acetylene gas is made and is manufactured by the Union Carbide Co. It is absolutely without competition in the United States.

This Company earns over 20 per cent. and pays 5 per cent. (13 1/4 per cent. quarterly) on $6,000,000 capital stock. Anthony Brady, Geo. O. Knapp, and C. K. G. Billings, all of the Peoples Gas Light and Coke Company, are directors and largest stockholders.

Erected new plant costing over $1,000,000 last year at Sault Ste. Marie, from earnings.

Is 45 candle power, more intense than gas.

At the present time there is a substantial surplus on hand and the stock has a book value above present selling price.

Through an option we are enabled to offer some of this stock, subject to prior sale, at $80 per share (par value $100), netting over 6 per cent.

As there is no competition and the earnings will be very nearly double this year by reason of the new plant, this stock should be able to pay 10 per cent. or more in less than a year.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1905

NO. 2

ALL graduates of Princeton, and especially the younger alumni, who know him as a thoroughly representative, energetic and loyal Princetonian, will be glad to learn that Robert Garrett '97 of Baltimore and Princeton has accepted the membership in the Board of Trustees of the University to which he was elected last June, filling the vacancy caused by the death of the Rev. Dr. F. B. Hodge '59. When he shall have qualified as a life member of the Board, doubtless at the meeting this month, Mr. Garrett will be Princeton's younger trustee.

THE ELECTION OF MR. GARRETT to the Board, as a representative of the younger generation of Princeton men, makes pertinent two suggestions several alumni have had in mind for some time, which will doubtless receive the endorsement of Princeton graduates generally. The wisdom of the adoption of the Plan of Alumni Representation in the Board of Trustees, if it was ever doubted, has now been thoroughly demonstrated by nearly five years of efficient services on the part of the trustees elected by direct vote of the alumni. But some further step seems necessary, to bring out a more general participation in the annual elections, by the large and growing body of eligible voters. With only one candidate to vote for each spring, as is usually the case, it is natural that the registration runs at increasingly low figures. For his nomination is equivalent to his election, and the voting in June becomes a mere formality.

ONE OF THE SUGGESTIONS offered to improve this situation is that as vacancies occur in the life membership of the Board, Alumni Trustees of proved interest and usefulness be elected to fill such places, thereby creating vacancies in the alumni membership, for which doubtless several candidates would be nominated. The other suggestion is that the Plan of Alumni Representation be so amended that any Alumni Trustee shall become ineligible to succeed himself immediately, thereby again opening the annual elections to new and numerous nominations. The obvious objection to the latter change would be that for a period of five years at least (the term of an Alumni Trustee), if the present custom of sectional representation is to continue, the University would be deprived of the experienced services of our alumni representatives who have proved their interest and their usefulness as members of the Board. But those are the very men who by natural selection would be chosen to life membership, in accordance with the first suggestion above. It is urged that these two suggestions, if adopted, would give freer play to the salutary spirit of dignified competition on the part of the friends of the larger number of prominent graduates who would be placed in nomination for the alumni trusteeships—a spirit so essential in maintaining interest in the annual elections, and in securing the best men available for our governing Board. The Weekly invites expressions of opinion on these suggestions.

“MERWICK,” THE NEW GRADUATE HALL on Bayard Lane, has been opened with twelve graduate students in residence (all there is room for) and seventeen at the table. They are most enthusiastic in praise of this experiment for improved conditions for graduate study and living in Princeton. Howard Crosby Butler '92, Lecturer on Architecture, is in charge of the Hall, as “Master of Merwick” (pronounced “Mer-rick”).

PROFESSORS BUTLER AND PRENTICE '92 (Greek) returned from Syria during the summer, where, with Dr. Enno Littmann of the Oriental Department, and Frederick A. Norris '95, the other members of the Princeton Expedition to Syria, they made important archaeological discoveries, which we hope to mention in some detail at an early date. V. Lansing Collins '92, the Reference Librarian, who was absent on leave last year, has also returned from European travels. And Prof. Howard McClenahan '94, who was ill with typhoid fever, at his home in Port Deposit, Md., last spring, has fully recovered and is back at his post in the department of physics.

THE PRECEPTORIAL SYSTEM IN PRACTICE will be described in an early number of The Weekly. So far as it has been worked out, one hears nothing but praise for this effort to give the student the personal touch of the smaller college while retaining for him the stimulus of the larger university. It is not too much to say that no movement of recent years, in American teaching, has attracted wider attention than Princeton's plan of “Personally Conducted Education,” as it is fittingly described by Arthur B. Reeve '03 in Public Opinion. And in all the editorial and descriptive articles we have seen on the subject, there is manifest a lively interest and a hopeful anticipation for its success in practice. We take it that these articles are written by men who themselves have been through the dull routine of college recitations and lectures, where to the teacher the pupil may be not even Jones nor Smith, but merely one of two hundred impersonal things. By regretful recollection of what their college course might have been, and should have been, they, quite as well as the teacher, are eminently qualified to appreciate what President Wilson '79 says in a recent number of The Independent,—that the Princeton Preceptorial System is “based upon almost universal experience, upon what every teacher must have found out for himself, whether by way of interpreting his failures or of interpreting his successes; he always gets his best results by direct, personal, intimate intercourse with his pupils, not as a class but as individuals.” And that “the undergraduate will take more pleasure in his studies, derive more profit and stimulation from them, and . . . the instructor will find vital intercourse with his pupils give place to dull routine. There will be more work done, but it will be less burdensome both to teacher and pupil, more normal, less like a body of tasks and more like a natural enjoyment of science and letters."

"INDEPENDENT THINKING," says an editorial writer, discussing "The Princeton Plan" in the same number of The Independent, "has been discouraged [by the American college], rather than encouraged, and there has been little attempt to develop habits of research. . . . Too often the university lecture has in practice been a condensed statement of information that the student might better obtain for himself from easily accessible books, and too often the student has depended upon his imperfect notes of lectures heard, rather than upon wide and intelligent reading. . . . A large majority of American college students today have by the end of their freshman year, unless their time has been inexcusably wasted, gotten beyond the stage of possible benefit from the mere recitation drill, and they are not yet ripe for the work of independent, unguided research. The exact thing that they most need is a year or two of intellectual broadening and deepening. They need, as President Wilson admirably puts it, to learn how to master not a text-book, but a subject. They need to know more about it than they can learn from the cramming of a manual, but they are not yet ready themselves to broaden or to re-create it by their own original research. They need, in a word, to understand it as it stands today, the product of the creative activity of many minds that have worked at it hitherto; to understand it in all its existing length and breadth and depth; to know what each discoverer or scholar has contributed to it, and to begin to think discriminately, critically, upon the relative values of the various contributions."

"THIS BROAD AND THOROUGH TRAINING of the comprehending, the discriminating, the understanding intelligence, is beyond question the immediate need in the American higher education today, and Princeton University has shown a real grasp of the situation in establishing its preceptorial system. For, as much experience has demonstrated, this system is the only one that can actually provide the kind of training here described. We are confident that Princeton is taking the lead in a movement that is destined to have far-reaching consequences of inestimable value."

DR. BASIL L. GILDERSLEEVE '49, Professor of Greek in Johns Hopkins University, and one of Princeton's most distinguished graduates, received the honorary degree of Doctor of Letters from Oxford University, last June. The ceremony was held in the ancient Sheldonian Theatre, the Vice-Chancellor of the university, the Rev. Dr. Merry, presiding. Dr. Gildersleeve was presented for the degree by Professor Farwell. A free translation of Dr. Farwell's speech (in Latin) will be read with much pleasure by Dr. Gildersleeve's fellow alumni of Princeton :

Among those beyond the Atlantic most closely joined to us by ties of blood and zeal for liberal arts, the name of none is more widely distinguished in philological circles than that of Basil Gildersleeve, formerly a professor of the University of Virginia, but now among the men of Baltimore. After he had drunk deeply as a youth from the springs of Germanic philology, though summoned back to public duties, he cherished in the troubled times of the Republic the gifts and arts of peace. Hardly had he attained manhood when he was invested with the professorship of Greek letters in the University of Virginia, where he performed his duties in such a manner that he seems to have given new life to the entire philological discipline of his land, and the whole body of grammarians who flourish today in America and are held in honor abroad acclaim this man as at once a leader and chief.

Endowed with a remarkable gift of teaching in things pertaining to schools, he was able to fill his scholars with his own spirit and temper, and by his own example showed them how much a strict method of investigation and fervid zeal for the study of antiquity could effect. Truly, we also have taken most acceptable fruit from his works, whether we consider his very critical edition of the works of St. Justin, martyr, or his lucid interpretation of the "Songs of Pindar," or his many and varied writings on Greek syntax. But why reckon this, or even greater work of the kind, by this man who twenty-five years ago began his plan of editing the quarterly American Journal of Philology and made the fame of American philology among the scholars of every race so conspicuously general? Why should I linger over details? Here stands the man who has been ever deserving of the palm as a grammarian of extraordinary acumen and diligence, as a most lucid commentator on texts, as a very distinguished master of the art of teaching. I present to you Basil Gildersleeve, a most learned man, notable in science and the arts, that he may be admitted to the degree of doctor of letters, honoris causa.

Dr. Gildersleeve is in his seventy-fifth year. A correspondent informs us that his late colleague at Johns Hopkins, Dr. Osler, who received an honorary Oxford degree on the same occasion, "didn't say a word about chloroform."

Progress of the Football Squad

ANOTHER week of practice has developed nothing to change materially the football outlook at Princeton. There is a very evident lack of heavy, fast men for the line positions; consequently the team this year will have to depend, even more than usually, upon speed to make up for a rather light line. At present the best arrangement for the forwards seems to be with Carothers at center, Dillon and Rafferty, guards, Captain Cooney and Herring, tackles, with Tooker and Brasher or the freshmen O'Brien and Fryer at the ends. Dutcher, last year's center, has been out of the game with an injury, but when he gets back he will have his work cut out to displace Carothers, who, though rather light for the pivotal position, is proving fast and aggressive. Herring is doing good work at tackle, and Rafferty, always big and strong enough for a first-class guard, may make good in this, his senior year. At any rate he is doing better now than he ever has done before. This combination for the line has worked fairly well so far, but there are unusually few good substitutes. P. Waller '09 and J. C. Waller '06 are about the only other heavy men available.

In the back field the situation is somewhat better. Dillon, the freshman, and

Tenney '07 are having a lively race for quarterback, with the honors possibly in Dillon's favor. For the freshman has shown ability in Tenney's specialty, open-field dodging, and he runs the team with better judgment and gets into the interference. But both are fairly good, so that, barring injuries, the quarterback problem is by no means the worst. At half back, Simons has done brilliant work on end runs and seems to be forging ahead of Daub, though Daub is a heavier, stronger man and better qualified for the dominant style of football. Bard, at the other half, though better than heretofore, is still neither good nor bad; his weight helps some in his favor. McCormick, the fullback, has been out of the game for several days on account of illness, and in his absence Moscrip, the freshman from Mercersburg, has had the first call at fullback. He is big and strong, and looks like a football player. He has also been tried at punting, but is not showing much kicking ability. There are several mediocre kickers, but no John DeWitts. From this brief summary of the situation on University Field, it will be apparent to all alumni who have followed football at their Alma Mater in recent years, that the Princeton eleven of 1905 must be organized, with few exceptions, from substitutes who have not made good in former seasons. Against a weak scrub some of these former scrub players are apparently showing improvement, but it is doubtful if the improvement is much more than apparent. And though Princeton has done fairly well in the first two games, it is yet to be demonstrated that these veteran substitutes can show the steady development necessary for the harder games to come.

During the past week the coaches have been paying especial attention to developing a line-plunging attack, which seems the only sure way to make gains, as the game is played nowadays. Cooney is carrying the ball in his last year's form, and Herring and Bard have shown some ability at this style of play. The defensive work of the team has proven fairly effective, though it has not been very severely tested as yet.

PRINCETON 23, WASHINGTON AND JEFFERSON 0

Princeton beat Washington and Jefferson 23-0, in the second game of the year, at University Field, Sept. 30th. The day was very hot for football, but the game was fast and interesting for so early in the season. In the first half Princeton had to work hard to score once, but in the second Washington and Jefferson weakened. The Princeton eleven did some rather good defensive work, and Washington and Jefferson never came near scoring. On offence Princeton made most of her gains by long end runs, though Cooney could usually be relied upon to push through the line for a few yards. The features of the game were freshman Dillon's fine playing at quarter, and Simons' long end running and hurdling, in the second half. There was much fumbling by both teams, especially in the second half, and many yards were lost by penalties. Wright, of Washington and Jefferson, did some good punting, and his ends got down the field well under kicks.

In the first half Washington and Jefferson kicked off to Moscrip, who ran the ball back twenty yards before he was downed. Bard and Daub advanced the ball to the middle of the field, where Princeton was penalized and had to kick. Washington and Jefferson could not make much impression on Princeton's line, and Wright punted to his 35-yard line. Then Daub, Bard, and Cooney took the ball gradually down the field until Cooney made the touchdown. He missed the goal. After the next kick-off Wright made twenty-five yards for Washington and Jefferson on a fake kick, but that was all. Wright punted, and E. Dillon ran the ball back forty-five yards, by clever dodging. Bard and Daub advanced it to the five-yard line, but here Washington and Jefferson braced up and took the ball on downs. Wright punted out of danger, and soon after time was called for the first half.

In the second, several fresh candidates went in for Princeton, while the Washington and Jefferson team had become pretty well exhausted by the extreme heat. After an exchange of punts and several fumbles by both teams, Simons made an exciting fifty-yard run for a touchdown, and before the half closed Princeton had scored twice more, Simons making the largest gains on his end runs.

Middlesex County has rarely sent to the State Legislature either a Senator or an Assemblyman of the ability and general usefulness of Alexander R. Fordyce, Jr. A lawyer young in years but of acknowledged capabilities, a statesman of the constructive rather than of the imitative type, and withal a man having a mind of his own, he was an interesting and valuable member of the lawmaking body at Trenton. During the last session he introduced ten bills, among them the State forest reservation act, the fireproof steamboat bill, which, unfortunately, did not become a law; the school fund custodian bill and others of almost equal importance.

But Fordyce incurred the enmity of Boss Strong, and will not be returned to the Legislature. Fordyce was valuable to the State, but he had the audacity to oppose the Middlesex boss upon two vital points. Fordyce announced that he would seek the nomination for State Senator against Senator Jackson in 1906, and this was a threat against the boss's pet and could not be overlooked. To make matters worse, Fordyce was indiscreet enough to declare his sympathies for Everett Colby [brother of Howard A. Colby '95], of Essex, in the latter's fight against machine domination. This was equivalent to a declaration of war against bosses and bossism in Middlesex County, and the penalty pronounced was political death. Fordyce was refused a renomination. To give a plausible face to the boss's retaliatory scheme all the Assemblymen were turned down and an entirely new set was nominated. . . . . In Middlesex, therefore, the boss is still in business, but if Assemblyman Fordyce will take hold upon his own account, as Mr. Colby did in Essex, he is likely to utterly overthrow the stronghold of bossism in his own county, secure the nomination for Senator and place Middlesex among the free bailiwicks of this State . . . . . The Fordyce element in Middlesex is relatively the same as the Colby element in Essex, and bossism quakes at its presence.

He was in service for nearly four years, including about four months which he spent in the military prison on Johnson's Island. He suffered life-long impairment of health from wounds received in the war. In 1865 he entered the mercantile business at Rome, Ga., in which he continued until broken health compelled his retirement a few years ago. Mr. Gammon married Miss Rosalind Burns, whose death last November was mentioned here. He is survived by a daughter, Miss Lucile Gammon, and three sons, Prof. Montague, John Aiken, and Ross Allen Gammon, all living in New York.

Harris Lindsley '93 was born in Nashville, Tenn., about 1871. After attending school at his home, he was for two years at the Princeton Preparatory School and entered Princeton with the Class of '93. He left college early in his sophomore year, and attended the Columbia University Law School for one year. In 1892 he moved to Washington with his family, where he completed his law studies at Columbian University and was graduated in 1894 with the degree of LL.B. The following year he received the degree of LL.M. He associated himself with the firm of Webb & Webb, counsellors-at-law, and was later admitted to partnership in the same firm under the name of Webb, Webb & Lindsley.

In 1899 he began the practice of law in association with the firm of Davis, Stone & Auerbach, of New York. He soon took an interest in politics, became a member of Tammany Hall, and in 1900 ran for State Senator on the Democratic ticket. At the time of his death, he was Third Deputy Commissioner of Police of the City of New York, in which capacity he presided over police trials.

On August 14th, 1905, while Mr. Lindsley and his fiancée, Miss Willing of Chicago, were automobiling in Vermont, their touring car was struck by a train at a railroad crossing, and both he and Miss Willing were instantly killed.

UNION CARBIDE

J. D. SMALL '92

Carbide is the product from which acetylene gas is made and is manufactured by the Union Carbide Co. It is absolutely without competition in the United States.

This Company earns over 20 per cent. and pays 5 per cent. (1 1/4 per cent. quarterly) on $6,000,000 capital stock. Anthony Brady, Geo. O. Knapp, and C. K. G. Billings, all of the Peoples Gas Light and Coke Company, are directors and largest stockholders.

Erected new plant costing over $1,000,000 last year at Sault Ste. Marie, from earnings.

Is 45 candle power, more intense than gas.

At the present time there is a substantial surplus on hand and the stock has a book value above present selling price.

Through an option we are enabled to offer some of this stock, subject to prior sale, at $80 per share (par value $100), netting over 6 per cent.

As there is no competition and the earnings will be very nearly double this year by reason of the new plant, this stock should be able to pay 10 per cent. or more in less than a year.

BACK of Marquand Chapel, on a line parallel with McCosh Walk, ground was broken this week for McCosh Hall, the much needed building for recitations, lectures, and preceptorial conferences, the fund for which, $300,000, as President Wilson announced last spring, has been generously provided by several benefactors of the University. The contract for the excavating and foundations has been awarded to Mr. William R. Matthews, who built the Fitz-Randolph Gateway, the new Cottage clubhouse, etc.

APPLICATION BLANKS for seats at the annual Yale-Princeton football game to be played at New Haven on Nov. 18th, and for the Army-Navy game at Princeton on Dec. 2nd, were sent this week to the Princeton Clubs of New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Newark and Trenton. Alumni not affiliated with these clubs may secure the blanks from George R. Murray '93, the General Athletic Treasurer, Princeton, N. J. For the Yale game, the limit of seats for one applicant is four, as usual, with not more than twelve seats allotted together. The price is $2.00 a seat, including admission, and the last date for receiving applications is Nov. 8th. For the Army-Navy game, the limit for one Princeton alumnus is two seats, with not more than four on joint application. The price is $3.00 a seat, and applications close on Nov. 15th.

COLLEGE GRADUATES generally, we confidently believe, will be delighted that President Roosevelt has tackled the job of cleaning up college athletics, and will wish him as gratifying a measure of success as he has achieved recently as The Peacemaker. To almost everyone but a few of those entangled in the dominant theory and practice of the game itself, it has been plain for some time that, unless football is radically reformed, this great American college sport is doomed. And it is apparently the reform of football especially that the President had in view in calling a conference at the White House last Monday of two representatives each of Harvard, Yale and Princeton,—Mr. Reid, the head coach in football, and Dr. Nichols of Harvard; Mr. Owsley, the head coach, and Mr. Camp, the Director of Athletics at Yale; and Messrs. Fine '82 and Hillebrand '00, Princeton's Director of Athletics and head coach, respectively. At this writing all the points discussed by Mr. Roosevelt and Secretary Root with the football representatives are not authentically known, the only official statement as yet being the following, signed by the six gentlemen mentioned above. "At the meeting with the President of the United States it was agreed that we consider that an honorable obligation exists to carry out in letter and spirit the rules of the game of football relating to roughness, holding and foul play; and the active coaches of our universities being present with us pledged themselves to so regard it and to do their utmost to carry out that obligation." So far, so good. But But we may be sure that they talked over the situation in college athletics pretty thoroughly in their three-hours conference, and we look for additional results with confidence,—for the American people know that their strenuous President is not given to leaving unfinished a job once tackled.

IT WOULD BE A WORK of supererogation to enter into a detailed enumeration of the evils of the present form and practice of the game of football—they are known to everyone who has followed the game in recent years and whose vision is not obscured by that intimate participation which makes politicians, for instance, or statesmen, if the word is less offensive, proverbially blind to the signs of the times, heedlessly deaf to a popular demand, and blissfully ignorant of an impending crisis. But a more fatal, though apparently unconscious, indictment of the recent development of this game is not needed to enforce the demand for reform, than these remarks in The Daily Princetonian, part of a most commendable appeal to the undergraduates to support the team by cheering and singing and "a large attendance each day" at the practice: "Football as played among the colleges today has reached a stage where it is losing its element of sport and is becoming work of the hardest kind. The men on the squad are willing and determined to bend all their energies to make this work count for success." In other words, football is not play, it is work; football is not sport, it is business; the players do not enjoy the game (any more than the spectators, if as much), they play from a sense of duty, from devotion to Alma Mater. A conclusion reached by their older brothers long ago. But have their older brothers any right to demand such a sacrifice? And if football is no longer a sport, has it any place in college athletics, whose aim, presumably, is to provide a healthful and entertaining means of diversion and physical exercise for young men primarily engaged in intellectual tasks? With the introduction of the preceptorial system and the more rigid enforcement of scholarship requirements, no one knows better than the Princeton undergraduates themselves that their playtime should not be sacrificed to "work of the hardest kind," though, in this instance, they would be the last to say so. . . . What, then, is the answer? Abolish football? By no means. We love the game too much for that. But, as President Wilson declared two or three years ago, unless football is reformed, it is doomed. And that is why we bespeak a hearty coöperation with President Roosevelt in his effort to save the great American college game.

THAT THE PRESIDENT holds decided views on college athletics is by no means news,—college men throughout the country must have been impressed by his speech at Cambridge last Commencement, in which he showed, concerning some phases of intercollegiate athletics which we all deplore, an understanding quite as lucid as his grasp of the intellectual needs of the American college. "I shall not be suspected," said President Roosevelt on that occasion, "of a tendency unduly to minimize the importance of sport. I believe heartily in sport. I believe in outdoor games, and I do not mind in the least that they are rough games, or that those who take part in them are occasionally injured. I have no sympathy whatever with the overwrought sentimentality which would keep a young man in cotton wool, and I have a hearty contempt for him if he counts a broken arm or collar-bone as of serious consequence, when balanced against the chance of showing that he possesses hardihood, physical address and courage. But when these injuries are inflicted by others, either wantonly or of set design, we are confronted by the question, not of damage to one man's body, but of damage to the other man's character. Brutality in playing a game should awaken the heartiest and most plainly shown contempt for the player guilty of it; especially if this brutality is coupled with a low cunning in committing it without getting caught by the umpire. I hope to see both graduate and undergraduate opinion come to scorn such a man as one guilty of base and dishonorable action, who has no place in the regard of gallant and upright men."

"IT IS A BAD THING for any college man to grow to regard sport as the serious business of life. It is a bad thing to permit sensationalism and hysteria to shape the development of our sports. And, finally, it is a much worse thing to permit college sport to become in any shape or way tainted by professionalism, or by so much as the slightest suspicion of money-making; and this is especially true if the professionalism is furtive, if the boy or man violates the spirit of the rule while striving to keep within the latter. Professional sport is all right in its way. I am glad to say that among my friends I number professional boxers and wrestlers, oarsmen and baseball men, whose regard I value, and whom in turn I regard as thoroughly good citizens. But the college undergraduate who, in furtive fashion, becomes a semi-professional is an unmitigated curse, and that not alone to university life and to the cause of amateur sport; for the college graduate ought in after years to take the lead in putting the business morality of this country on a proper plane, and he cannot do it if in his own college career his code of conduct has been warped and twisted. Moreover, the spirit which puts so excessive a value upon his work as to produce this semi-professional is itself unhealthy. . . . I think our effort should be to minimize rather than to increase that kind of love of athletics which manifests itself, not in joining in the athletic sports, but in crowding by tens of thousands to see other people indulge in them. It is a far better thing for our colleges to have the average student interested in some form of athletics than to have them all gather in a mass to see other people do their athletics for them."

THERE ARE 383 REGULAR MEMBERS of the freshman class—thirty-five more than last year—according to the revised official figures compiled by Professor John Preston Hoskins '91, the Chairman of the Faculty Committee on Entrance. But there are only three first-year specials ranking as freshman, bringing the total registration of '09 up to 386,—about the number indicated in the first issue of The Weekly. The departmental distribution of the regulars shows 186 for the A.B., as compared with 146 last year; 106 for the B.S. and Litt.B., a loss of twenty-nine as compared with last years 135, and 91 for the C.E., twenty-four more than last year's 67. The science courses, therefore, show a net loss of five, the academic department, a gain of forty. The following statistics from Dr. Hoskins' report, are also interesting:

FRESHMEN ADMITTED WITHOUT CONDITIONS
A.B.,	68	36 per cent. of the class
B.S.,	23	21 " " " " "
C.E.,	27	30 " " " " "

FRESHMEN ADMITTED WITH ONE CONDITION
A.B.,	37	20 per cent. of the class
B.S.,	31	29 " " " " "
C.E.,	32	35 " " " " "

Nearly 60 per cent., therefore, of the freshman class come in with not more than one condition, 29 per cent. of whom enter with no condition. About 20 per cent. of the class are from public high schools, the others coming from private schools and academies. Twenty, or nearly 5 per cent. of those eligible to admission, did not come to college this year.

Football, Baseball and Horseplay

LAST Saturday, Oct. 7th, was a gala day on University Field, with the varied excitements of football, baseball, inter-class rivalries, and the senior pee-rade, which was an unusually good one. The fun began with the football game between the Princeton freshmen and the Brooklyn Boys' High School, which was won by the freshmen, 10-0. Then came the 'varsity game with Georgetown, which Princeton won easily 34-0. Before the first half was over the senior pee-rade, headed by a brass band, swarmed through the gates, and for the rest of the afternoon athletics divided interest with the horseplay. It was a congress of all nations on a frolic. There were Broadway vaudeville artists, cow-punchers from the Plains, Mandarins from the Celestial Empire, Spanish toreadors, rotund Dutchmen, John Bulls, Uncle Sams, Zulu chiefs, Igorrotes, Arabs, Alabama coons, hobos, Bowery toughs, Gibson girls, Mexican greasers, North American Indians, Cuban patriots, hayseeds, plutocrats, and freaks of every description. Two nut-brown primitives in low-necked barrels and hirsuit adornments untouched by the razor and hairpin of civilization, impersonated Adam and Eve fresh from the Garden, shivering in the cold, cold world and evidently not enjoying the fall. Another group, a threadbare and emaciated pedagogue, with three hobbledehoy in leading strings, placarded "SIMPLE STUDENT," "FLOATER," and "DEPARTMENTAL," the pedagogue carrying a transparency marked "CONFERENCE AT 8 A. M. TAKE THE 6.40 TROLLEY," "DO NOT TIP THE PRECEPTOR," "BRING YOUR LUNCH AND 'MAKINGS'," and "ADDRESS 6741 ALEXANDER STREET, 7TH FLOOR BACK," made a hit as a clever satire on the new preceptorial system, which the preceptors themselves enjoyed quite as much as the other spectators.

After the football game, the horseplay continued around the baseball diamond, but the freshmen played an errorless game and had the sophomores beaten 5-0 when the seniors broke up the game in the sixth inning. Then the freshmen had a pee-rade.

PRINCETON 34, GEORGETOWN 0

Princeton beat Georgetown 34-0 on University Field, Oct. 7th. Georgetown proved unusually weak, and the game was too one-sided to be very interesting. By comparison Princeton's playing looked very good. The heavy backfield (Bard, McCormick and Daub) worked well together, and gained ground consistently. Daub especially showed improvement over his work in the earlier games, and McCormick, who had been out of the game for several days, played in fine form. Georgetown was unable to gain through Princeton's line, but it is yet to be demonstrated how the line will withstand a strong opposing team. Fryer, the freshman end, played a fast, sure game, and seems to be developing into a varsity end. P. Waller '09 also did well at guard.

Georgetown had two chances to score, once in the first half, when they secured the ball on a blocked kick at Princeton's 30-yard line and tried unsuccessfully for a field-goal, and again in the second half, when Tenney fumbled the kick-off and gave Georgetown the ball on Princeton's twenty-five-yard line. But a fumble by Georgetown returned the ball to Princeton. The punting of both teams was mediocre, and both fumbled badly.

Bocock kicked off for Georgetown, and Herring ran the ball back ten yards. On the next play Daub did not gain, and Bard punted, but Princeton was penalized fifteen yards for interfering with the catch. After an exchange of kicks, Princeton secured the ball on her forty-yard line and gradually worked down the field until McCormick made the first touchdown, Cooney kicking the goal. After the next kick-off, Georgetown blocked McCormick's punt and secured the ball on Princeton's 30-yard line. Bocock tried for a field-goal, but it went low and McCormick covered the ball on the five-yard line. McCormick punted to Bocock, who fumbled, and Fryer made a thrilling dash for seventy-five yards and a touchdown. Bard made a third touchdown for Princeton before the half closed.

In the second half Princeton made three more touchdowns, one each by Herring, Daub, and Otis, and Cooney kicked all three goals.

PRINCETON 29, LEHIGH 6

Princeton beat Lehigh 29-6 on University Field, Oct. 11th. Lehigh scored a touchdown early in the second half—the first score against Princeton this season. Princeton had the ball on Lehigh's five-yard line, but there was a fumble, and Brumbaugh of Lehigh sprinted 105 yards to Princeton's goal. Bard and Brasher were after him, but he had too good a start.

It was a very erratic game, and on the whole the Princeton team played poorly, though there were several spectacular runs and exciting plays. E. Dillon and Tenney divided the honors, each making a long run for a touchdown. Lehigh used several trick plays, working the double pass in particular for several good gains. Princeton's defence was very unstable, and frequently Lehigh made first down by straight rushes through the line. There was much disastrous fumbling, due in part to the wet ball, as the game was played in a pouring rain. Princeton's offence seemed much weaker than usual, and Lehigh frequently held for downs. The last few minutes of the game were exciting, Princeton making three touchdowns in four plays.

In the first half, after Lehigh had kicked off, Herring ran the ball back to the 50-yard line, and on the next play Daub doubled the end for forty yards. Here Princeton fumbled and Lehigh punted to Bard. Princeton lost the ball again on a fumble and Lehigh gained twenty yards by a clever double pass. Princeton then forced Lehigh to punt, and E. Dillon caught the ball and made a pretty 70-yard run through the whole Lehigh team for the first touchdown. After the next kick-off Princeton got the ball at midfield, and by consistent playing worked it down for the second score. There was no more scoring in this half, though Lehigh made several good gains.

In the second half Princeton started off with a rush and had carried the ball to Lehigh's 5-yard line, when the fumble occurred which gave Lehigh her touchdown. During most of this half Princeton played very poorly, but finally got a touchdown, after securing the ball on a fumble inside Lehigh's 5-yard line. Tenney caught the ball on the next kick-off, and by fine dodging and a clever hurdle of the last Lehigh man, ran nearly the length of the field for a touchdown. On the first line-up after the kick-off, Bard kicked from close to the line, Lehigh fumbled behind the goal and O'Brien fell on the ball for another touchdown, shortly before time was called.

THE Princeton Alumni Association of Tennessee is the third new sectional club The Weekly has the pleasure of reporting as having been organized during the late summer by Princeton graduates. Talley '03, also of Nashville, is the Secretary. They are planning for a reunion of all Tennessee Princetonians, on Nov. 9th, with President Wilson '79 as one of the speakers. The Hon. John M. Stewart of Chambersburg, Pa., whom Governor Pennypacker appointed last spring to the supreme bench of Pennsylvania, has been nominated for reelection on the Republican ticket. Judge Stewart has had a notable career. He was Adjutant of the 120th Pennsylvania Volunteers, and saw hard service during the Civil War. In 1864 he was a delegate to the Republican national convention which renominated President Lincoln, and in 1882 he was the independent Republican candidate for governor of Pennsylvania. Previous to his appointment to the Supreme Court, he was Judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Franklin Co. The following from The Philadelphia Press is suggestive of the position this eminent Princetonian holds in his state:

Judge Stewart has never been one of those who "crook'd the pregnant fingers of the knee that thrift might follow fawning." Through a public career of twenty-five years he has faithfully obeyed his individual convictions of duty. There have been times when he might easily have gained position by making terms, but he preferred to preserve his own full self-respect and independence of judgment. The consciousness of intellectual probity was more precious than any official distinction.

The following from the New York Sun expresses the feelings of New Yorkers concerning their Princeton Mayor:

The renomination of Mayor McClellan was the inevitable result of his singularly upright, fearless and efficient administration. While normally the Democratic candidate, he is supported by citizens of all parties. He is the People's Mayor. He has given the city good government, and the city appreciates it.

ALUMNI intending to attend both the Army-Navy and the Yale-Princeton football games are requested, in applying for their seats, to make separate checks, one for each set of tickets. Single checks for both events greatly increase and complicate the work in the office of the General Athletic Treasurer, — and distributing tickets to several thousand alumni is a big enough job, without such unnecessary complications. Also, readers are reminded that Nov. 8th is the last date for receiving applications for the Yale-Princeton game; Nov. 15th, for the Army-Navy game.

ON THE LATTER OCCASION, Dec. 2nd, Princeton will have the pleasure of welcoming a distinguished assemblage of public men, including, we trust, the President of the United States and members of his cabinet, representatives of the diplomatic corps, officers of the Army and Navy, etc.

The two battalions comprising the midshipmen of the Naval Academy at Annapolis and the cadets of the West Point Military Academy, are to be the guests of the University at luncheon in the Gymnasium on the day of the game. From the Gymnasium they will march to University Field, where the best seats will be reserved for them, the Army battalion occupying the middle of the east stand, with the midshipmen directly opposite in the west stand. For the entertainment of the officers of the Army and Navy, the Princeton Inn has been reserved, and the upperclass clubs on Prospect avenue are to issue a large number of invitations for luncheon to Army and Navy guests. In addition, meals will be served in University Hall, open to the general crowd. The restaurants of the town will help some, but alumni coming to Princeton for this interesting occasion will do well to bring a snack with them.

THE YEAR'S OUTPUT OF BOOKS and sundry writings by Princeton alumni will be reviewed in a literary number of The Weekly, after the close of the football season, when we shall have more space for things more (or less) serious. Meantime, recent books received include Parisians Out of Doors, by F. Berkeley Smith '91, cleverly illustrated by the author and others, including his father, Mr. F. Hopkinson Smith, and published by the Funk & Wagnalls Company; The Social Secretary, by David Graham Phillips '87 (the prolific auther of The Plum Tree, The Cost, etc.), from the press of The Bobbs-Merrill Company; and The Handbook of Princeton, by Mr. John Rogers Williams, General Editor of the Princeton Historical Association, published by The Grafton Press. Also we hear that The Jordan Valley and Petra, by Professor William Libbey '77 and the Rev. Dr. Franklin E. Hoskins '83, of Beirut, has been out for several months. The Macmillans' fall announcement includes The Evolution of the Horse, by Prof. Henry F. Osborn '77, and a Life of Oliver Ellsworth, of the Class of 1766, by William Garrott Brown; Scribners advertise in The Weekly, Renaissance Portraits, a new book by Prof. Paul van Dyke '81; Lippincotts are selling by subscription Psychiatry, a pathological work by Dr. Stewart Paton '86 of Johns Hopkins University; Dr. Ralph Barton Perry '96, Assistant Professor of Philosophy in Harvard University, is the author of The Approach of Philosophy, published by Scribners, and the alumni will be very glad to learn that Wilford S. Conrow '01 is preparing a book on Old Nassau, with a portrait of the late H. P. Peck '62, author of the words, and a portrait and autobiography of Karl Langlotz, the composer, who is still living, in Trenton.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO CURRENT magazines include an essay on The Endless Life, by S. M. Crothers '74, in the October Atlantic; a story called The Doomsman, by Van Tassel Sutphen '82, in the October Metropolitan; a description of Up in the Berkshires, by Vance Thompson '83, in the October Outing; a discussion of Our Changing Constitution, by Prof. A. P. Dennis '91, in the October Atlantic; a detective story by James Barnes '91, Outside the Law, now running in the Metropolitan; The Indian Boundary Line, by Prof. Max Farrand '92, in the American Historical Review for July; The Workers of the Great Lakes, by Jesse Lynch Williams '92, announced for the November Outing; The Conquest of Canaan, running in Harper's, The Temptations of a Young Author, in the October Cosmopolitan, and An American Dry-Point Artist, in the October Metropolitan, all by Booth Tarkington '93; two essays in The Outlook by R. H. Schauffler '02; stirring descriptions of the Russian peasant, by Ernest Poole '02, also in The Outlook, and, in the October Reader Magazine, The Sociology of Sunshine: How the Model Tenement House Wins its Victories in the Battle of the Slums, by Arthur B. Reeve '03, who is Associate Editor of Public Opinion.

THE LIFE OF JOHN WITHERSPOON, which, strangely enough, has never been written, is now in preparation by V. Lansing Collins '92, the Reference Librarian. During his visit to Scotland last year, Mr. Collins found much interesting material on Witherspoon's career before he came to America. In this country, also, he has collected valuable data, but he would be glad to receive any additional Witherspoon MSS. or other material bearing on the life of Princeton's famous Revolutionary President, which may have come under the notice of readers of this paragraph. As few if any men of his time were more active in the cause of education and in the service of the struggling colonies and the new Republic, there ought to be plenty of such material to make a complete and

"A LITTLE LESSON IN PATRIOTISM. — John Pintard was a student in Princeton University when the British troops entered New York during the war of the revolution. He at once left college in order that he might go to the defense of the city. Subsequently he served on several military expeditions and then became deputy commissary of American prisoners in New York. In this capacity it was his duty to examine the prisoners and to relieve their wants. It was in all probability this experience that started him to thinking of the philanthropic schemes that he later followed. It is interesting to remember that it is very probable that the information concerning the province of Louisiana furnished to the government by Pintard in 1803 had the greatest weight in leading to its purchase. Pintard was the founder of the New York Historical Society. He established the Massachusetts Historical Society in 1791. This won for him the soubriquet, 'The father of historical societies.' In 1805 he began the effort that resulted in the free public schools of New York. He was instrumental in the opening of the Erie canal. In fact, there were few public enterprises during the rest of his lifetime in which John Pintard was not a noteworthy figure." — Chicago Journal.

THE PRINCETON ALUMNI ASSOCIATION of the Oranges will hold their second annual dinner on Nov. 9th. Following the plan which was so successful last year, full committees have been appointed as follows: Dinner, A. H. Hagemeyer '97, Chairman; Menu, Francis Speir, Jr., '77, Chairman; Guests and Features, R. E. Annin '80, Chairman; Attendance, Yorke Allen '94, Chairman; Decorations, Kenneth R. Kingsbury '96, Chairman; Music, Worrall F. Mountain '00, Chairman; Press, H. H.

Condit '94, Chairman. The attendance last year was 112 and it is hoped that more will be present this year. Applications should be addressed to Yorke Allen '94, South Orange, N. J. The list of speakers will be announced as soon as arranged.

THE ORANGE PRIZE SCHOLARSHIP will be opened to competition this month. The fund is now above the required minimum, and the surplus above the $2,500 will be made the nucleus of next year's increment, which the executive committee of the Orange association have planned to make $1,500; so that, if these plans work out, the Orange Scholar should receive for his second year the income of $4,000.

THE ASSOCIATION, however, wish it understood that they have not made this foundation primarily for the purpose of conferring income, but for the purpose of marking with honor the student from their district who can win in open competition. The title will be held for two years, subject to the regulations as published, and will thus fall vacant every odd-numbered year. Sixteen freshmen are eligible to compete this year and it is hoped that they will all participate in the examination.

PROF. HENRY VAN DYKE '73 has accepted invitations for October and November as follows: University Preacher at Cornell, Oct. 15th to 22nd; installation sermon at the Central Church, Rochester, Oct. 23rd; to open the new building of Christ Church, New York, Oct. 29th; address at the dedication of the new Y. M. C. A. building at Washington, D. C., Oct. 30th; an address before the students of Columbia University, Nov. 9th; an address before the Inter-Church Conference on Federation, Nov. 16th; University Preacher at Harvard, Nov. 19th to 26th; an address at the Boston Institute of Technology, Nov. 23rd.

Progress of the Football Squad

NOW that the first half of the football season is over, it begins to look as though Princeton may turn out a somewhat stronger eleven than seemed possible at first, considering the lack of new material and the many vacancies to be filled. The early games have been won by fairly good scores, but so far all of the opposing teams have been too weak to give Princeton a hard test.

The development of the eleven has been considerably handicapped during the past two weeks by the many minor injuries,—Herring, tackle; Tenney, quarterback; Moscrip, fullback; P. Waller, guard; Dutcher, center, and O'Brien, end, having been kept out of the game at various times; and H. L. Dillon, guard, and Carothers, center, have just returned to the practice after several days' rest. Simons, the fast halfback, has removed a condition which kept him out of the game for some time, and is now playing again. And it is hoped that nearly all of the injured men will be able to play soon.

The Princeton eleven, therefore, seems to be rounding into something like a team. Against Bucknell especially Princeton played a steady, consistent game. On that day one had the impression that Princeton would turn out a fast and well balanced team this year, rather stronger in the back field than in the line, but without any individual stars. Bard, Daub, and McCormick are developing into a strong set of backs, combining weight and speed. McCormick at fullback is playing especially well; his line-plunging is very useful. Dillon and Tenney are still fighting it out for quarter, but Dillon is usually given the first call. Fryer, the Hill School freshman, is making good at end, and Brasher and Tooker are better than last year. But with hardly any good substitutes, one or two bad injuries would seriously jeopardize Princeton's prospects for a successful season, which at best are not likely to lead to overconfidence. And the coaches are having difficulty in getting together a strong scrub, which is so necessary for the development of a strong varsity.

There are no more Wednesday games,—this Saturday, Lafayette at Princeton; and for each succeeding Saturday there are hard games, with Columbia, Dartmouth, Cornell, and Yale.

PRINCETON 48, BUCKNELL 0

Princeton made her largest score of the season so far, by defeating Bucknell 48-0 on University Field, Oct. 14th. The Bucknell eleven was big and heavy, but the players did not seem to know much about the game, and proved disappointingly weak. It was Princeton's game from the start, and Bucknell was never near scoring. In the first half Princeton's plays were run off smoothly and quickly. The fumbling, which has worried the coaches so much this year, was far less frequent than in the earlier games, and the attack was the best seen on University Field for some time. The whole team was in every play, and the team-work was such as to give Princeton some hope for the harder games to come. Captain Cooney took a day off, his place being occupied by Phillips, who is being coached for a substitute tackle. In Captain Cooney's absence, Fryer, the freshman end, kicked the goals from touchdowns, missing only two out of eight.

Princeton made six touchdowns and a safety in the first half, Rafferty securing the safety by pushing Talbot over the goal line after Bucknell's punt had been blocked. Five of the touchdowns were the reward of consistent rushing of the ball; the sixth was the result of an unusual play. With Bucknell in possession of the ball, Brasher broke through the line, grabbed the ball as it was passing from the quarterback to the halfback, and kept right on for thirty-five yards and a touchdown. In the second half an entirely new set of backs went in for Princeton, Munn, Hamill and Otis taking the places of Bard, Daub, and McCormick. Early in this half E. Dillon made a touchdown by a clever quarterback run of forty yards, and Rafferty added the final score by falling on the ball back of Bucknell's goal, after Frymyre had fumbled a punt.

TENNIS

The intercollegiate tennis tournament, held recently at Haverford, Pa., was won by the University of Pennsylvania, Dewhurst and Register of Pennsylvania defeating Whitman and Field of Harvard in the final round of doubles; and Dewhurst of Pennsylvania defeated Behr, Yale, in the finals in singles. For Princeton, Rendall, P. G., and Thompson '07 reached the semi-finals in doubles, being defeated by Whitman and Field of Harvard. In singles, Rendall, P. G., was defeated in the second round by Dewhurst.

The fall tournament of the University, finished this week, was won by E. McK. Miller '07 and R. F. Rockwell '09, in doubles, who defeated L. K. Richardson '07 and L. S. Hobbie '06 in three straight sets. In singles, H. J. Rendall, P. G., now holds the University championship, having defeated E. Sunstein '06 in the final round in the tournament, and having won the challenge match from McL. Thompson '07, last year's champion, in three straight sets.

In the tennis tournaments of the past summer, F. B. Alexander '02 was very successful, winning the Metropolitan championship in singles, and the championship in doubles with Mr. H. H. Hackett, Yale '00. He also won the Middle States championship in singles, and in doubles with Mr. Hackett. At Newport, Alexander and Hackett won the doubles in the East vs. West championship match, and were defeated for the championship of the United States by Ward and Wright, the defenders. Mr. Alexander also won the West Side Club and the Ardsley Club championships. He was obliged by illness to default in the United States championship match in singles. R. D. Little '01 reached the final round in the Longwood tournament at Boston, being defeated by Mr. Clarence Hobart. Mr. Little was one of the winners in doubles in both the Tri-State tournament and the Staten Island Country Club tournament.

Goldfield, Nev., Sept., 6.—The hunt for the famously rich gold mine of Walter Scott, familiarly known as the "Death Valley Crusoe," has resulted in a find by John P. Poe, Jr., of Baltimore, the once-noted Princeton football player, and a party of searchers which may cast light on several train robberies. . . .

Undaunted by the dangers of a 100 mile trip across the desert which has claimed hundreds of victims from thirst, a dozen searching parties set out in quest of "Scotty's" mine, said to be the richest gold mine west of the Rockies. The first party to leave Bullfrog for Death Valley was headed by Poe, and with him went an old desert miner and prospector named Zeifle. . . .

Beneath an immense pile of bowlders, sage brush and rubbish three ponderous boxes were unearthed. One of them appeared as if it had been recently opened, but the others were evidently forced many months previous to being found by the prospectors. . . .

Mr. Poe has returned to Bullfrog with the news. He will go back at once with provisions to join Zeifle, who remained behind to further explore the region. Mr. Poe said:

"The country has surface indications that warrant the most minute prospecting. I have a theory that at some nearby spot where we found the money chests we will discover the bones of the detectives, Duvals and Dick Turpins of former decades. I may be wrong, for it is possible that highwaymen of other days wandered far away from the spot and lost their way after having hidden their booty."

O B I T U A R Y

ROBERT MAITLAND PETRIE '70

Dr. Robert Maitland Petrie '70 died on August 2nd at his home in Jersey City, N. J. He was born at Liberty, N. Y., in 1850, and after a partial course at Princeton, studied medicine at the University of Pennsylvania. Dr. Petrie was a member of the New Jersey State Pathological Society, and was regarded as an authority on heart diseases.

JOHN R. BENNETT '74

John R. Bennett '74, of New York, was killed in the New York Central Railroad wreck at Mentor, Ohio, in June. He was a well known lawyer, and was associated with Mr. H. D. Macdonna, one of the counsel of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, with offices at 31 Nassau St., New York. Mr. Bennett was born at Phillipsburg, N. J., in 1851. After leaving Princeton he entered the law office of Mr. George Harding in Philadelphia, and later established in New York, under the firm name of Harding & Bennett, a branch of that firm's business, which, owing to Mr. Bennett's energy, soon outgrew in importance the home office. Mr. Bennett was the patent attorney of the United States Steel Corporation and its constituent companies. He was frequently called upon to participate in the preparation and discussion of cases to be presented to the tribunals of England, France, and Germany. The last important litigation in which he participated, whereby he saved for the City of New York something over $20,000,000, was the case of Campbell against the Mayor. At the instance of Justice Morgan J. O'Brien, who was then Corporation Counsel, he was induced to take this case, which had been dragging through the courts for twenty years, and which then stood in the form of a judgment against the city for this large sum. In the eight years he was at work upon this Campbell suit, which involved the heating apparatus applied to steam fire engines, Mr. Bennett succeeded not only in obliterating the judgment, but in obtaining a decision of costs for the city.

UNION CARBIDE

J. D. SMALL '96

Carbide is the product from which acetylene gas is made and is manufactured by the Union Carbide Co. It is absolutely without competition in the United States.

This Company earns over 20 per cent, and pays 5 per cent. (1 1/4 per cent. quarterly) on $6,000,000 capital stock. Anthony Brady, Geo. O. Knapp, and C. K. G. Billings, all of the Peoples Gas Light and Coke Company, are directors and largest stockholders.

This company erected a new plant costing over $1,000,000 last year at Sault Ste. Marie, from earnings.

Acetylene Gas, which is made from Carbide, is 10 times stronger than Gas light, costs less, and uses up only one-fourth of the oxygen consumed by the latter.

At the present time there is a substantial surplus on hand and the stock has a book value above present selling price.

Through an option we are enabled to offer some of this stock, subject to prior sale, at a price netting over 6 per cent.

As there is no competition and the earnings will be very nearly double this year by reason of the new plant, this stock should be able to pay 10 per cent. or more in less than a year.

An Important Announcement Concerning

THE Gorham Company desires to direct attention to its extremely novel and original collection of Loving Cups and Tankards, offered under the name of "Old English Blackjacks."

THESE have been designed especially to meet the very wide-spread demand for articles of this nature which shall be as dignified and as decoratively effective, but yet not so costly as though fashioned of solid silver. They are made closely to simulate the Old English "Blackjacks" and "Leathern Bottels," those characteristic drinking utensils of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, which are to-day so eagerly sought after by collectors of artistic rarities.

THESE strikingly original examples of an artistic revival are to be found in all sizes from the drinking mug to the imposing Loving Cup, the tall Tankard or the well-proportioned Flagon. The bodies are of heavy hand-worked leather, the linings of red copper, the mountings, including the shields for monograms, inscriptions or armorial bearings, of sterling silver.

BLACKJACKS are exclusively made by The Gorham Company at very moderate prices, from five dollars upward, and are to be obtained from the important jewelers throughout the country, as well as from the makers.

AT THE regular meeting of the Board of Trustees on October 21st, Robert Garrett '97, who was elected at the June session, was present and qualified as a life member of the board. Gifts and bequests were announced to the amount of $99,178.37, received since Commencement. Most of this sum has been raised by the Committee of Fifty alumni appointed last year by the trustees. It includes, also, the $2500 from the Princeton Alumni Association of the Oranges, to establish the Orange Scholarship, and $400 from the estate of the late Philo Sherman Bennett of New Haven, to establish the Philo Sherman Bennett Prize in Political Science. A LARGE FRAMED PHOTOGRAPH of the late Professor Charles Woodruff Shields '44 was presented to the University by his daughter, Mrs. Bayard Stockton, and a portrait by William Sartain, of Moses Taylor Pyne '77, L.H.D., member of the board since 1885, was presented to the University by a group of his friends.

THE RESIGNATION OF Dr. William A. Packard, Kennedy Professor of Latin Language and Literature and the Science of Language since 1870, was received and accepted with deep regret, and Dr. Packard was appointed Professor of Latin Emeritus. Howard Crosby Butler '92, sometime Lecturer on Architecture, whose Syrian explorations have attracted such wide attention, was elected Professor of Art and Archaeology; James Hopwood Jeans, the brilliant young mathematician who has come to Princeton from Cambridge University, England, was formally elected Professor of Applied Mathematics; Dr. William Foster, Jr., was advanced from an instructorship to an assistant professorship in chemistry; and two preceptors were added to the list already announced, John W. Young, late of Northwestern University, and Oswald Veblen, from University of Chicago, having been elected preceptors in mathematics. Warren Elsing, a member of the sophomore class, was awarded the Stinnecke Prize. This prize is of the annual value of $500 and is held by the winner during his college course.

A FACULTY RECOMMENDATION concerning chapel attendance was adopted by the board, after protracted discussion, the effect of which is to require an undergraduate to attend the morning prayers only twice each week, instead of every morning, as heretofore. There will be one chapel exercise each week-day morning, from 8.55 to 9.05, but the simple student may choose the two days he is required to attend, or, if he happens to feel energetic, he may go every morning for a week or two, and so lay up cuts for the future. But if at any time a student falls short of the required twice-a-week attendance, by as much as four cuts, "he must during the next two weeks attend four times in addition to the four times above provided for." And "failure to comply with this rule will render him liable to suspension." The students are no longer to have reserved seats, but, to prove their presence, they are to write their names on cards, which will be collected by spotters stationed at the foot of the aisles. . . . These changes do not apply to Sunday chapel. From that, the student is allowed three cuts a quarter. There's no knock coming from the undergrads. on this liberal treatment by the faculty,—but the alumni naturally inquire, Why not abolish compulsory chapel altogether?

PROVISION FOR THE CURRENT EXPENSES

of Merwick, the new Graduate House, was made at this meeting of the board,—this being the first time an appropriation specifically for the Graduate School has been made. This appropriation supplements several generous contributions for furnishing and the maintenance of Merwick, made by the trustees' committee on the Graduate School and a number of our ever-faithful alumni whose hearts and pockets are always open for Princeton. In addition to the trustees' committee, the contributors to this fund include James Laughlin, Jr., '68, Charles Scribner '75, Rudolph E. Schirmer '80, Arthur H. Scribner '81, L. Rodman Wanamaker '85, Junius S. Morgan '88, Charles W. McAlpin '88, and "an unknown friend." The expense incurred in the purchase of Merwick is something over $40,000, and repairs amounting to $3,000 have been made on the property. $7,000 worth of appropriate furniture has been installed, and a fund of $5,000 has been subscribed to help in the current expenses of the next three years. The members of the trustees' committee of the Graduate School dined with the residents at Merwick on the evening before the meeting of the board, and, after dinner, inspected the house and held their committee meeting. The trustees present were the Hon. Grover Cleveland, chairman of the committee; President Wilson '79, M. Taylor Pyne '77, the Hon. John L. Cadwalader '56, Cyrus H. McCormick '79, and Cleveland H. Dodge '79, the hosts of the occasion being Dean West '74, Prof. Howard Crosby Butler '92 and the seventeen members of the Graduate House. At the conclusion of the dinner Mr. Cleveland made a few remarks emphasizing the importance of this new experiment, and the diners then adjourned to attend the reception given by President and Mrs. Wilson at Prospect, at which the preceptors and other new members of the faculty met the trustees.

namely, in addition to President Wilson '79, the Rev. Dr. E. R. Craven '42, the Hon. John A. Stewart, the Rev. Samuel B. Dod '57, the Rev. Dr. J. Addison Henry '57, M. Taylor Pyne '77, the Rev. Dr. D. R. Frazer '61, the Rev. Dr. G. B. Stewart '76, Cyrus H. McCormick '79, the Rev. Dr. John Dixon, the Rev. Dr. M. W. Jacobus '77, the Hon. William J. Magie '52, Col. John J. McCook, the Hon. Dodge '79, Mr. Archibald D. Russell, the Rev. Dr. John DeWitt '61, Robert Garrett '97, of the life members, and the Hon. John L. Cadwalader '56, of the Alumni Trustees.

THE NEW PRINCETON CO-OP projected last spring has been opened in West College under the management of R. C. McNamara '03, and is doing a flourishing business in students' supplies. It has been incorporated under the laws of New Jersey, the official title being The Princeton University Store. The trustees for the first year are Dean Fine '80, Secretary McAlpin '88, and the following leaders among the undergraduates: W. C. Motter '06, E. L. Rafferty '06, G. J. Willock '07, D. G. Herring '07, and W. J. Phillips '08. The object of the corporation, as stated in its charter, is to buy and sell to its members, all of whom shall be connected in some way with Princeton University, "books, stationery, athletic goods, shoes, clothing, tobacco, smokers' supplies, drugs and toilet articles, and students' supplies of every kind and character, at reasonable rates." And members "shall all be those students, professors, instructors, officers and other persons connected with Princeton University who shall have paid in advance a membership fee of $2 for one year, $3 for two years, $4 for three, or $5 for four years." The laudable aim of this society is to give its members cost prices, plus the expense of running the store.

THE SEASON of extra-curriculum events begins in Alexander Hall on the evening of the 31st, with the first of the Anne M. Loomis Song Recitals, established by Mrs. Humphreys, widow of the late Prof. Willard Humphreys, as a memorial to her mother. On this occasion Mrs. Corinne Rider-Kelsey, a New York soprano, is to sing folk songs in Irish, Welsh, Swedish, Norwegian and Russian. On Thursday evening, Nov. 2nd, the Ben Greet Company, so favorably known in Princeton, presents Shakespeare's Henry V in Alexander Hall, the play to be staged in its Elizabethan simplicity, as were Everyman, Twelfth Night, etc. Later on the New York Symphony Orchestra and the Kneisel Quartet are to continue their Princeton engagements with two concerts each, Mr. Damrosch's Orchestra on Jan. 12th and Feb. 19th, the Kneisel on Jan. 30th and March 9th.

IN ADDITION to his engagements for the near future already announced here, President Wilson '79 is to speak on the preceptorial system, on Dec. 11th, before the Twentieth Century Club of Hartford, Conn., of which Prof. M. W. Jacobus '77 of Hartford Theological Seminary is president. Dr. Jacobus writes that "there is a great interest in New England as to what President Wilson is doing."

Football Reform: Henry B. Thompson '77 on the Present Evils of the Game

THE following straightforward discussion of football as it is fought, by a former member of the Graduate Advisory Committee on Athletics, is presented to all Princeton alumni for a careful reading and a conscientious consideration :

GREENVILLE P. O., DELAWARE,

Editor Princeton Alumni Weekly,
Princeton, New Jersey.

Sir :

Some three years ago I contributed an article* to The Weekly,—a more or less feeble attempt to correct some of the present-day evils of football, as I believed them then to exist ; and, in discussing that article, by letter, with a friend, who I knew was equally interested, I stated,—quoting from my letter of that date,—as follows :

"My objections to football are three-fold."

"First. The needs of the game demand time from the players that works injustice to their college duties."

"Second. The brutalities incident and sometimes cultivated. I do not object to roughness that is honest."

"Third. The code of ethics ; and this is my chief grievance. I believe that players are taught that as a last resort, victory must be won by a non-observance of the rules, carried on out of sight of the officials of the game. Here we approach a condition that verges on the immoral. Above all things, the games of our boys should be based on honor. Clean sport must, of necessity, in a healthy boy, help him to keep his mind clean ; but the fostering of a belief in that miserable doctrine, 'The end justifies the means', lowers his standards of honor. The spirit of this doctrine is the root evil of so much that is bad in our political, business and corporate life. It is a great solace to many a good man."

That football has not improved in the three years that have elapsed since I wrote the above is my own opinion, and, apparently, judging from the newspaper discussions and criticisms of old friends of the game, the situation today is worse than ever.

While we all applaud President Roosevelt's manly attitude in attempting to do something to improve conditions, it must be a source of regret to those who have had control of football at Harvard, Yale and Princeton, that their representatives have been forced to pledge themselves to the President that they "consider an honorable obligation exists to carry out in letter and in spirit the rules of the game of football, relating to roughness, holding and foul play," and they have pledged themselves to see that the above obligations are carried out.

Personally, as an alumnus of Princeton, I have a feeling of chagrin that such a pledge should have been required. The necessity of the pledge indicates that the time has arrived when the authorities of the above universities should exercise the power they undeniably have, and correct the evils that the coaches and managers admit exist.

We see in the present legislative investigations of the life insurance companies conditions that indicate a departure from ethical standards that, to say the least, is deplorable. It has been proven, without question, that directors,—men of the most honorable standing in the community,— have been careless and negligent of their duties. They have permitted matters to drift.

Are not the college athletic authorities of the large universities open to the same criticism? They have permitted the game to get away from them. They have accepted the say-so of partisan and professional coaches and trainers. They have lived in an excited, immature undergraduate atmosphere. They have permitted expense accounts that are grotesque; and, in the mad desire to win, evils and faults have been forgotten or glossed over, and reform postponed until the playing season is over, and then postponed.

Yours very truly,

HENRY B. THOMPSON '77.

Princeton 22, Lafayette 4

PRINCETON beat Lafayette 22-4 in a hard-fought and exciting game, on University Field, October 21st.

It was the first real test that this Princeton eleven has had, and the result was most encouraging, for Lafayette has an unusually heavy, strong team this year, and they played good football. They outweighed Princeton in nearly every position, and most of them are seasoned veterans. But Princeton started the game at a whirlwind gait, ran the heavier team off their feet, and scored three touchdowns in quick succession. At the beginning of the second half Lafayette forced the battle into Princeton's territory, but later the home team got together and finished strong, scoring a fourth touchdown by consistent rushing, shortly before time was called.

Lafayette has a remarkable kicker in Shuster, quarterback, who, on his third attempt, succeeded in placing the ball between the Princeton goal-posts. It was a beautiful drop-kick from nearly the center of the field,—to be exact, from a point 47 yards in front of the Princeton goal,—and it went clear of the cross-bar by several feet. This skillful performance was applauded by the Princeton crowd quite as generally as by the enthusiastic delegation from Easton, a large portion of whose population, town and gown, came down for the game in a special train. Previously Shuster had missed a field-goal by only a foot or two; his other attempt was blocked.

Though in rushing the ball Lafayette made several first downs in the second half, it was midfield rushing, and was always stopped short of Princeton's 25-yard line. So that Shuster proved their only reliance for a score. Princeton's attack in the first half was irresistible. The plays were run off quickly and smoothly and there was very little fumbling. Bard and Daub made consistent gains through and outside of tackle and on end plays, and McCormick was very successful in plunging through Lafayette's center for good distances. The tackles were seldom used to carry the ball until the latter part of the game, when Captain Cooney was taken out of the line for the last touchdown.

In the first half, Princeton allowed Lafayette only four first downs. The let-up in Princeton's defense in the second half was due in part to substitutions, and in part to the hard strain of the first long game of the season. The halves were twenty-five minutes each,—heretofore they have been only twenty and fifteen minutes. The game showed, therefore, that the Princeton team is not coming too fast; that the players have not reached that limit of endurance which ought not to come till the last game of the season. So that notwithstanding the many minor injuries which have retarded the team's development, the general condition of the Princeton squad seems to be about right for the present,—a very important thing in

For instance, Herring, the tackle, was unable to play against Lafayette, and it was through his position that the visitors made most of their ground. And at center, after J. Waller succeeded Carothers, Lafayette made several good gains. At quarterback, E. Dillon was succeeded by Tenney, and the contrast in favor of the freshman was quite marked. Late in the game, Simons, Munn and Otis succeeded Bard, Daub and McCormick in the backfield, and Vaughn and Fryer replaced Brasher and Tooker at the ends. Some long end-runs were looked for from Simons, but he had only one chance to carry the ball, and then he did not receive proper protection from the forwards and was tackled for a loss.

After the first kick-off Princeton got the ball at midfield and advanced it steadily, with rushes by Bard, Daub, and McCormick, until Daub was sent over for the first touchdown. After the next kick-off, Princeton began rushing again and had reached Lafayette's 15-yard line when a fumble lost the ball. A fumble by Lafayette, however, soon restored it to Princeton, and Daub made the second touchdown. The third came toward the end of this half. Princeton had reached Lafayette's 15-yard line when a penalty of fifteen yards spoiled the advance by rushing. But freshman Dillon worked the quarterback kick successfully, Bard falling on the ball back of Lafayette's goal, for the third touchdown.

In the second half, after an exchange of kicks, Lafayette carried the ball into Princeton's territory, and Shuster got his two unsuccessful tries for field-goals. But Lafayette held Princeton for downs, and on the third attempt Shuster's kick was successful, scoring Lafayette's four points. After the kick-off, McAvoy made a fine 35-yard run around Princeton's right end. One by one he threw off the Princeton tacklers, till the last man, Tenney, was successfully left behind. But Captain Cooney, having freed himself from the rush-line, cavorted down the field faster than he ever ran bases, and embraced the flying feet of the Lafayette fullback,—just in time. It was exciting. Then Princeton took the ball on downs and from midfield rushed it over the goal-line for the fourth touchdown. This also was exciting.

FREDERICK LARUE KING '44

The Rev. Frederick LaRue King '44 died of asthma at the Park Avenue Hotel, New York, on October 18th. He was born at Morristown, N. J., eighty-three years ago. He was a tutor in Latin in Princeton from 1847 to 1855, when he resigned on account of ill health. Later he held pastorates at Hudson City and Stony Point, and afterwards spent about twenty years in Europe. Twelve years ago he returned to this country and had since lived at the Park Avenue Hotel.

JOSEPH LINDSEY SHELLABARGER '58

Joseph Lindsey Shellabarger '58 died at his home in Topeka, Kansas, on Sept. 22nd. He entered Princeton from Pennsylvania and was graduated as an honorary orator of his class, at the age of eighteen. For the past thirty years Mr. Shellabarger had been the owner of the Shawnee Flouring Mills, of Topeka. One of his sons is Joseph M. Shellabarger '92 of New York.

BERNARD C. CUVELLIER '76

Bernard C. Cuvellier '76 died on May 8th, 1905. For many years he had been engaged in business in San Francisco. At the time of his death his home was in Oakland, Cal., where he had held public office.

THOMAS ADDISON JENKINS '94

Dr. Thomas Addison Jenkins '94 died at his home in Brooklyn, N. Y., on Oct. 11th, 1905, after a lingering illness. Upon leaving Princeton he entered the Bellevue Medical College, graduating in 1897. He was an interne in The Nursery and Childs Hospital in New York City, and after completing his term there began the practice of his profession. In 1901 he went to Denver, Col., where he remained about four years, returning to his home in May last.

The members of the Class of '94 have learned with great sorrow and regret of the death of their classmate, Thomas Addison Jenkins. Soon after the finish of a hard course of preparation for his chosen profession and at the outset of a career of much promise, he was compelled to leave his work. The cheerfulness with which he faced disease and the vigor of his fight against it was in keeping with the spirit of his life at college and won the admiration of all around him. His devotion to his class and classmates was of the strongest, and was especially manifested by his relations with them and work for them during his life in Denver.

We extend to his family our sincere sympathy in their bereavement.

Carbide is the product from which acetylene gas is made and is manufactured by the Union Carbide Co. It is absolutely without competition in the United States.

This Company earns over 20 per cent. and pays 5 per cent. (1 1/4 per cent. quarterly) on $5,000,000 capital stock. Anthony Brady, Geo. O. Knapp, and C. E. G. Billings, all of the Peoples Gas Light and Coke Company, are directors and largest stockholders.

This company erected a new plant costing over $1,000,000 last year at Sault Ste. Marie, from earnings.

Acetylene Gas, which is made from Carbide, is 10 times stronger than Gas light, costs less, and uses up only one-fourth of the oxygen consumed by the latter.

At the present time there is a substantial surplus on hand and the stock has a book value above present selling price.

Through an option we are enabled to offer some of this stock, subject to prior sale, at a price netting over 6 per cent.

As there is no competition and the earnings will be very nearly double this year by reason of the new plant, this stock should be able to pay 10 per cent. or more in less than a year.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1905

NO. 6

THE picture of McCosh Hall on the opposite page shows the view of Princeton's new recitation building from the corner of Washington Road and McCosh Walk, and gives a good idea of the architecture of this handsome addition to the University's material equipment. This is a reproduction of the perspective drawn by Mr. Gildersleeve, the architect, to show the elevations on McCosh Walk and Washington Road, and it embodies some features which will not appear in the completed building. For instance, in the final designs, the tower shown at the corner of the large hall in the foreground has been moved back on the Washington Road side, to the northeast corner of this higher portion of the building, and will therefore rise at the end of a vista from the campus side, looking between Marquand Chapel and the western terminus of the new recitation hall. In this perspective the butresses are shown surmounted by grotesque figures; these have been omitted. And the windows of the first floor will have straight instead of the curved heads shown in the accompanying picture, making them harmonious with the second-floor windows of this part of the hall. Otherwise the completed designs follow closely this perspective.

THE INTERIOR ARRANGEMENT of McCosh Hall provides for a large lecture room to accommodate six hundred, another one seating four hundred, and two smaller lecture rooms with seating capacity for two hundred and fifty and one hundred and fifty; there will be fourteen recitation rooms, four to seat seventy-five each, four to seat sixty-five each, and six to seat fifty each; and twenty-six rooms for preceptorial conferences, making forty-four rooms all told. There are to be nine separate entrances, in six of which stairs will lead to the second floor, an arrangement specially designed to allow the maximum ease of ingress and egress and the minimum of confusion and noise. The total length of the building will be about four hundred feet on McCosh Walk, with an L on Washington Road of one hundred feet, the L to contain the large lecture room, on the second floor. The walls are to be of gray Indiana limestone, and the building is designed to be thoroughly fireproof. The excavating for McCosh Hall, which was started recently by the contractor, Mr. William R. Matthews of Princeton, is now well under way, and it is expected that contracts for work on the rest of the building will be awarded soon, so that the material may be prepared in time for the opening of the building season in the spring, and the work effectively pushed during the summer.

IN THE SOUTH WING of Old North, where the ancient mastodon has held sway over the ossified birds and beasts of the secondary, tertiary, quarternary, etc., ages, and the gigantic reptiles have frightened juvenile visitors time out of mind, a "Senate Chamber" is under construction, the collections of the Museum of Geology and Archaeology having been moved to the south stack of the University Library, to make room for a larger hall for the meetings of the university faculty. This improvement has also been designed by Mr. Raleigh C. Gildersleeve. The plans provide for an imposing assembly room seventy-six feet in length, thirty-six feet wide, and thirty feet high. The large windows on the east and west sides of the wing are to be divided by free standing columns, and a rich cornice will be carried around the room, at a height of about twenty feet from the floor, the intervening walls to be panelled in English oak. A vaulted ceiling will be pierced by lunettes over each window. At the south end of the room there will be a raised dais for the President and other officers, and the entrance, through the hallway of Old North, is to be remodelled to make it more in harmony with the imposing faculty chamber. The money for these improvements comes from the Van Wickle fund, which was left for the double purpose of building the Fitz-Randolph Gateway and providing the more adequate university offices which Princeton's growth demands. Ultimately, it is expected that Nassau Hall will become the central administration building of the University.

WHILE ALL THIS BUILDING, and that on the new dormitory given by the ten classes '92-'01, is going forward very satisfactorily on the campus, the equipment for athletic teams at University Field has been temporarily diminished by the burning of the Field House, on the night of Oct. 28th. All but the brick walls of the building was destroyed by a fire which broke out about nine o'clock in the evening, when there was no one near. Fortunately, the football squad had just taken their best playing togs away for the Columbia game in New York; but the uniforms of the scrub and the freshman teams went up in smoke. The loss on the building, about $9,000, is fully covered by insurance, and after the close of the football season another and larger field house will be erected. Meantime, the players are using the new Gymnasium as training quarters.

THE SENIORS HAVE ELECTED the following class officers: President, Samuel Jackson Reid, Jr., of Brooklyn (the baseball captain); Vice-President, William Calhoun Motter, of St. Joseph, Mo.; Secretary, Louis Daniel Froelick, of Brooklyn (Editor-in-Chief of The Daily Princetonian); Master of Ceremonies, Paul Stark Seeley, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; Class Prophet, Sinclair Hamilton, of Englewood, N. J.; Class Historian, Addison F. M. Talbott, of Kansas City, Mo.; Presentation Orator, Clifford Irving Voorhees, of New Brunswick, N. Prof. Daniels contributes to the current number of that quarterly periodical the department on Chronique Financière Etrangère for the United States, and Dr. Bogart is announced to conduct the same department in the next number. ## The Princeton Expedition to Syria

DURING the summer three of the members of the Princeton Expedition to Syria—Profs. H. C. Butler '92 and W. K. Prentice '92, and F. A. Norris '95—returned home, the other member, Dr. Enno Littmann, going to Abyssinia to study dialects and collect data for an Abyssinian dictionary. The large collections of Syrian pottery, bronze ornaments, coins, glass, inscribed stones, paper impressions, etc., made by the expedition, have also reached Princeton from Beirut, and during the year this important scientific material will be organized into an exhibition of Syrian antiquities such as has never been made heretofore on either side of the Atlantic. Later the results of the expedition will be set forth in a series of publications, giving to the scientific world invaluable data for reconstructing the history of the people of ancient Syria, a thing which as yet has not been done.

From letters written by Professor Butler while in Damascus, The Weekly was enabled last year* to give its readers a preliminary glimpse of some of the adventures and discoveries of the members of this expedition. At that time Professor Butler outlined the discoveries made during their first two months in Syria, up to the Christmas holidays, when excavating was temporarily suspended, Professor Butler going to Damascus for money, provisions, letters, etc., and Dr. Littmann making a journey into the Hauran to copy Safaitic inscriptions. In the following interview, Mr. Butler continues the narrative, giving an outline of the discoveries made during the rest of the winter and the spring.

On my return from Damascus to Tarba I found that the rest of the party, Dr. Littmann and Mr. Norris, had not yet gotten back from their journey into the Hauran. They returned, however, two days later, having collected, as Dr. Littmann had hoped, nearly two thousand inscriptions in Safaitic script. Their journey, though somewhat interfered with by rain, had covered ten days and had been in every respect eminently successful. The weather was still cold at Tarba and we decided to move southward along the mountains as rapidly as possible in order to reach lower levels and a warmer climate before another snowstorm should overtake us.

Our first stop was at Saleh, from which place Norris ascended the mountain called Umm Hauran, the highest peak in all the region. From here we moved as rapidly as possible to Salchad, the second city of importance in Nabataean times in all this region. Salchad is now a thriving town and has little of interest to archaeologists except inscriptions in Greek and Nabataean, none of which are now in situ, though the Arabic castle built on the top of a steep hill in the midst of the town is a magnificent piece of Saracenic architecture. From Salchad we started out to make a tour of the ruined cities and towns on the southeastern slope of the Djebel Hauran. We fixed our headquarters at Mellah, the residence of one of the most powerful of the Druse shekhs, and from here visited a large number of ruins, many of which have been plundered by the inhabitants of comparatively new villages for their building material; but all abound in inscriptions and in fragments of architecture.

At Busan, Medjdel, Safiyeh, and Burak I was able to collect a great mass of material in connection with the ancient private houses of this country. I made a complete plan of one end of Busan, showing many streets and open squares and a great variety of residences with exterior and interior staircases, balconies, terraces, and other interesting details. The town is practically walled by using the rear walls of houses and connecting up the spaces with heavy walls. The gates of entrance are all double, provided with two sets of heavy stone doors of two leaves each. An interesting private house at Medjdel was found complete in three stories in front and four stories in the rear. It is dated 431 A.D. At Safiyeh there is an extremely interesting structure resembling a stepped pyramid of Assyria. It is over sixty feet square and preserves two stories in completeness. It is built of very massive blocks of stone laid in the "Cyclopiian" manner, and appears to be far older than most of the ruins in this vicinity. Burak, which stands on an eminence above a deep wadi, appears so perfect from a distance that one could almost imagine it to be still an inhabited city. Its many towers, preserved to a height of sixty to eighty feet, give it a most magnificent sky-line.

We then continued our journey southward, visiting seven or eight ruins of more or less importance until we reached Der il-Kahf, a splendid example of an ancient Roman fortress on the outskirts of early civilization. The fortress is in the form of a great square with towers at the corners and in the middle of each side. The entrance is to the east. Within the large court is a small church built upon the foundations and of the material of an old temple, showing that the Roman government in Christian as well as Pagan times provided for the spiritual welfare of the legions. The fortress was undoubtedly built as early as the time of Antoninus Pius or perhaps even Trajan. The only dated inscription, however, which belongs to a reconstruction of the fortress, contains the names of Valentinian and Gratian, from about 367 to 378 A.D.

Five ruins of less importance were visited before we reached Umm il-Kutten, which was a large Arabic city in the early Christian period, built upon the site of an older Nabataean city, as the inscriptions attest. The ruins consist of three large churches and a large convent, seven well-preserved towers from five to six stories high, and many private residences, including a very fine house with an inscription which shows that it was the house of the Βουλευτης, a high official, no doubt, in this part of the world.

Returning to Bosra, we visited more ruins and several inhabited villages, including one named Anz, which is inhabited almost entirely by Christians. We discovered at Meshkuk one of the most interesting monuments that we had seen. This is a small ruin of a Nabataean temple, with a Nabataean inscription mentioning the name of the Emperor Hadrian, which makes it the latest of known Nabataean inscriptions. The temple was at an early period converted into a church and later restored to Pagan worship under the Emperor Julian the Apostate, as we know from an altar found not far away, recording the restoration of the sacrifices. After Julian's time it was reconverted into a small monastery and remained such until the Mohammedan invasion. Many plans and photographs of buildings were made in the various ruins about Meshkuk, and our collection of inscriptions was greatly enlarged. Our return to Bosra was made in order to prepare ourselves for our great journey into the desert to Umm idj-Djimal.

We sent to the nearest garrison for soldiers, having spent the last six weeks without a guard. The soldiers were refused on the Commandant's excuse that his garrison was already too much reduced on account of the war in Yemen, so we determined to set out by ourselves, taking two stalwart Bostrians as helpers and watchers. Our first camp was pitched at Umtaiyeh, where Dr. Schumacher on one of his journeys had taken a photograph of the front of what he took to be a Nabataean temple. This building is indeed very interesting. The front wall may have belonged to a temple. Within, it was rebuilt and converted into a mosque in the Middle Ages. I made very careful measurements of all details of this building and of six churches, all earlier, of course, than the seventh century, and several private houses of unusual interest. From here we visited Sameh, where we found a very interesting monastery dedicated to St. George, and Umm is-Surab, where there are the ruins of a beautiful church dedicated to St. Sergius and Bacchus, in the year 487.

On our next journey, after visiting several ruins of small importance, we came to Kasr il-Baik, another Roman fortress on an eminence over against the desert. It is dated 412 A.D. and embraces, besides the usual towers and other parts of a stronghold, a little church of interesting form.

This was, of course, measured and photographed in detail.

The conclusion of the winter campaign was at Umm idj-Djimal, the great metropolis of Southern Syria, which preserves in a most remarkable state buildings of the Christian Arabic city of the fourth, fifth and sixth centuries, with traces of earlier Roman and Nabataean occupation. This ruin has been visited by three or four former travelers, none of whom have spent more than two or three hours in the place, on account of lack of water and its remoteness from villages. The Princeton Expedition spent over two weeks, encamped in the great open square of the ancient city, and collected material for a complete publication. Norris made a complete plan of the city with its great wall and the various squares, streets and reservoirs, locating all the more important buildings and many groups of private residences. I photographed and measured the Roman fort, the government buildings, fifteen churches, one of them dated 345—the earliest dated church in existence—besides many blocks of private houses. The churches present a great variety of plans, the houses many of them are very large and beautifully built, and some of them have as many as four stories. Between three and four hundred inscriptions in Latin, Greek and Nabataean were copied here by Littmann. The number of inscriptions formerly known at this place was about twenty. Among the smaller monuments is an altar richly ornamented and bearing an inscription to a deity hitherto unknown. We excavated on a small scale in the necropolis, and though most of the ancient tombs have been opened and despoiled by the Arabs during the last thirteen hundred years, our labors were rewarded by the discovery of a few untouched graves, in which we found some beautiful specimens of ancient glass, pottery, bronze ornaments and beads.

Princeton 12, Columbia 0

PRINCETON beat Columbia 12-0 in an unexpectedly close and hard-fought game, at the American League Ground, New York, on Oct. 28th. About eight thousand people saw the game, not a very big crowd for New York, but there was a strong representation of Princeton undergraduates. It was a fine day for the spectators, but the weather was rather too warm for football. This is the first time that Princeton and Columbia have met in football since the game of 1902, which Princeton won 22-0, at University Field, on the day of the inauguration of President Wilson.

In this year's game at New York Columbia showed more strength than was anticipated and gave Princeton a hard struggle. There was no scoring in the first half, but in the second Princeton did better and made two touchdowns by consistently strong football. The two teams were nearly evenly matched in weight, but with the advantage slightly in Columbia's favor.

Princeton's failure to score in the first half was partially the result of a policy of kicking on the first or second down, which made Columbia do most of the work, and also gave Princeton some much needed defensive experience. And Columbia's powerful attack made it very evident that Princeton's defense must be greatly strengthened if success is to come in the future games. In the first half Columbia gained more yards by rushing than Princeton, and twice carried the attack within Princeton's twenty-yard line. But each time Princeton braced up and took the ball on downs, which shows that the defense has possibilities. If Columbia had had a drop-kicker, such as Shuster proved himself to be in the Lafayette game of the week before, they would very probably have scored, but neither Princeton nor Columbia has developed any sure drop-kickers this year.

Bard did the punting for Princeton and was more effective than Carter for Columbia.

Princeton's team was not at its strongest in this game, for Waller had Carother's place at center, Phillips played Herring's position at tackle, and in the first half Otis was at fullback in place of McCormick. In the second half McCormick went in at fullback and his presence materially braced up the back-field, both in attack and defense. Also, H. Dillon was shifted to right guard from his regular position at left, but this change did not seem to strengthen the right side of the line. J. Fisher and Von Saltza played a strong offensive game for Columbia, and had little difficulty in getting through Princeton's right time and again for good gains. Fryer and Tooker did good work for Princeton at the ends, Tooker especially making some fine tackles. Captain Cooney was the most conspicuous player in the game, and in defense and attack he was always reliable. McCormick did some excellent line-plunging in the second half, and Bard and Daub made some exciting runs for good gains. E. Dillon at quarterback ran back punts cleverly, and worked the quarterback run successfully.

In the first half Carter kicked off for Columbia to Phillips, who ran back the ball to the twenty-yard line. Princeton made five yards on Columbia's offside, but Bard immediately punted to Donovan on Columbia's forty-five-yard line. Tooker interfered with the catch, and Columbia was given fifteen yards. Columbia's backs then began pounding Princeton's right side for consistent gains and brought the ball to Princeton's twenty-yard line. It began to get very interesting, but Princeton braced up and held for downs. After the ball had changed hands several times in the middle of the field, Bard punted from his twenty-five-yard line, but Princeton was offside and Columbia got the ball.

It began to look pretty bad for Princeton. Carter made five yards through Phillips and Von Saltza got another five, bringing the ball to Princeton's fifteen-yard line. But the Princeton cheering section was whooping it up for fair, and the team responded by taking the ball on downs. It was a pretty close call, and Princeton's defense was getting all the trying out it wanted. After an exchange of punts by which Bard gained about twenty yards, Princeton began to rush the ball and advanced it as far as Columbia's eighteen-yard line. The Princeton stand was calling for a touchdown, but Columbia was strong enough to hold for downs and Princeton lost her chance to score in this half. Carter punted out of danger and soon after time was called, with no score.

In the second half it was different. Princeton started in to play an aggressive game from the first. Tooker kicked off to Columbia's five-yard line and Carter ran the ball back twenty yards. Columbia was soon forced to kick, and E. Dillon ran the ball back to Columbia's fifty-yard line. McCormick and Cooney then began to pound Columbia's line for steady gains and brought the ball to the three-yard line, but Columbia was game, and held for downs. However, the touchdown was delayed only a short time, for E. Dillon ran back Carter's punt to the twenty-yard line, and Cooney and McCormick kept it going until the latter scored. Cooney kicked the goal, making it Princeton 6, Columbia 0.

Carter kicked off for Columbia, and McCormick ran the ball back fifteen yards. On an exchange of punts Princeton got the ball on her own thirty-yard line. Freshman Dillon then made a pretty quarterback run for eighteen yards. Princeton's attack was getting stronger. Daub went around the end for fifteen yards, Bard made just as much around the other end, and Daub again made good for another fifteen. After some shorter gains through the line, McCormick did the rest, going through center for eight yards and the second score, Cooney again kicking the goal. Time was nearly up and there was no more scoring, though Munn, who had taken Bard's place at half, ran back the kick-off thirty yards, and Carter of Columbia made an exciting fifteen-yard run on a fake kick.

The Alumni

THE Princeton Alumni Association of Korea held its second annual reunion at Seoul, on Sept. 15th, at which these officers were elected: President, Hon. Gordon Paddock '87; Vice-President, the Rev. Graham Lee '89; Secretary and Treasurer, Dr. J. W. Hirst '90. The alumni will be interested in the following account of this Princeton reunion, taken from a letter from Dr. Hirst to a classmate in Princeton:

"Sept. 15th we enjoyed our annual Princeton dinner—The Princeton Alumni Association of Korea. We were entertained at the home of the President of the society, Dr. C. C. Vinton '80. There were ten men present, two wives and one fiancée. The list included Dr. C. C. Vinton '80, Treasurer of the American Presbyterian Mission in Korea; Hon. Gordon Paddock '87, Consul-General of the U. S. to Korea; Rev. H. M. Bruen '96 and Mrs. Bruen, Rev. W. E. Smith, Sem. '98, Rev. R. H. Sidebotham, Sem. '99, Rev. Ernest F. Hall, Sem. '99 and Miss McClear, Rev. J. F. Preston, Sem. '02, Rev. Herbert E. Blair, Sem. '04, Rev. E. F. McFarland, Sem. '04 and Mrs. McFarland, [and Dr. J. W. Hirst '90]. We had a substantial dinner and then spent a very pleasant evening with song and story [Dr. Hirst has just ordered eight copies of the Carmina Prinetonia]. Mr. Blair, as one of the latest recruits, gave a talk on some of Princeton's new buildings, which was particularly interesting to those who have not seen the dear old place for some years. A letter of regret was read from 'Celerity' Moore '90, now Dr. Dunlop Moore of the U. S. Marine Hospital service at Yokohama, Japan."

In another part of his letter Dr. Hirst says: "If I ever develop into a mighty hunter it may be possible to send you a tiger skin equal to the Royal Bengal variety. We have one on our floor in the parlor [at Severance Hospital] which would do your eyes good to see. . . I wish I could send you one of the Emperor's little palace buildings to embellish the campus. It would be a sight worth seeing."

O B I T U A R Y

THOMAS JOHN ELLIOTT '01

The Rev. Thomas John Elliott '01 died on July 10th, at the Skin and Cancer Hospital in New York City, of cancer of the stomach. Mr. Elliott was pastor of the Noroton Presbyterian Church, of Noroton, Conn., at the time of his death. He had not been in good health for the past year, but insisted on keeping at his work until May 10th last, when he went to Clifton Springs in the hope of improvement. His condition grew steadily worse, however, and upon July 7th he was taken to the hospital where he died three days later. He was buried in the Spring Grove Cemetery at Noroton, Conn.

Mr. Elliott was thirty-four years old. He entered Princeton in the fall of 1900 in the senior year of the class of '01. After graduation, he entered the Hartford Theological Seminary, from which he was graduated in May, 1904. He immediately became pastor of the Noroton Presbyterian Church, where he was very successful during his brief pastorate, and his loss was keenly felt in the community. He was to have been married during the present fall.

The Class of 1901 extends to the members of his family its sincere sympathy in their bereavement.

UNION CARBIDE

J. D. SMALL '96

Carbide is the product from which acetylene gas is made and is manufactured by the Union Carbide Co.

It is absolutely without competition in the United States.

This Company earns over 20 per cent, and pays 5 per cent. (1 1/4 per cent. quarterly) on $6,000,000 capital stock. Anthony Brady, Geo. O. Knapp, and C. K. G. Billings, all of the Peoples Gas Light and Coke Company, are directors and largest stockholders.

This company erected a new plant costing over $1,000,000 last year at Sault Ste. Marie, from earnings.

Acetylene Gas, which is made from Carbide, is 10 times stronger than Gas light, costs less, and uses up only one-fourth of the oxygen consumed by the latter.

At the present time there is a substantial surplus on hand and the stock has a book value above present selling price.

Through an option we are enabled to offer some of this stock, subject to prior sale, at a price netting over 6 per cent.

As there is no competition and the earnings will be very nearly double this year by reason of the new plant, this stock should be able to pay 10 per cent. or more in less than a year.

NO. 7

FOOTBALL: Cornell at Princeton this Saturday; Yale at New Haven next Saturday. The Cornell and Princeton glee clubs are giving their annual joint concert, in Alexander Hall this Friday night, and the crowd is beginning to arrive for the football game,—the last of Princeton's season on the home grounds. Applications for the Yale game closed in Princeton on Wednesday the 8th, and the General Athletic Treasurer is now sending out the tickets. Please remember that every one can't sit opposite the fifty-five yard line.

OVER SIX THOUSAND SEATS have been taken by Princeton undergraduates, the alumni, and their friends,—several hundred more than were required for the Princeton crowd at New Haven two years ago. As on that occasion, Princeton has been assigned the large west stand at Yale Field, and all but three sections on that side of the field have been required to supply the unusual demand for Princeton seats. From the Grand Central Station in New York, the usual special trains will be run on Saturday the 18th,—doubtless with the usual confusion.

DARTMOUTH'S CLEAN-CUT VICTORY on University Field last Saturday, while it came as a very unexpected shock to the Princeton crowd, and a joyous surprise to the several hundred Dartmouth alumni who came down from New York in the special train, is not altogether inexplicable to those who follow football closely. In the first place, Dartmouth has been turning out first-class teams for several years; two years ago they beat Harvard and ranked high in the season's rating. Again last year they tied with Harvard. And although this year Dartmouth has been beaten by Colgate, Colgate by Cornell, and Cornell by Swarthmore, that, as we have all learned, nowadays, and that the cock-sure statements of certain coaches that "the game is all right as it is," and "there is nothing the matter with football," have by no means settled the question, are indicated by the continued and very general discussion of the subject, and the persistent demand for reform. Readers of the morning papers must have been struck the other day with the importance this discussion of a college game has assumed in the public mind, when they saw the published interviews with Mr. Andrew Carnegie, on his return from Scotland. Among the questions of national importance he gave his views upon was football reform; incidentally, that was an excellent ideal Mr. Carnegie suggested when, in comparing American with English and Scotch football, he remarked, "Over there a player never forgets that he is a gentleman," — though we may not like the inference. . . . And even more radical than most of the discussion of the subject is the import of the question chosen by Harvard and Princeton for their annual debate,—"Resolved, that intercollegiate football in America is a detriment rather than a benefit." This question was proposed by Harvard, and Princeton has the choice of sides. It certainly is timely, and the annual debate (at Cambridge on Dec. 15th, this year) should be no mere academic argument.

THAT IMPARTIAL AND FEARLESS OFFICIALS can do much to reform football, is of course well recognized. The trouble has been to find such officials. It is all the more gratifying, therefore, when one of our own alumni measures up to this difficult task, and is extolled as an ideal of the dispenser of the square deal on the football field. At the Harvard-Pennsylvania game in Philadelphia last Saturday, the players and spectators soon found that they had just such an official in the umpire, William H. Edwards '00, captain of the victorious Princeton eleven of 1899, and each autumn since his graduation a valued adviser on football at University Field, whenever his business interests allow him to come down from New York. No doubt many of the alumni have read the numerous paragraphs commending Mr. Edwards' umpiring, of which the following, from the editorial page of the New York Evening Sun, is a sample:

"THE UMPIRE WHO UMPIRED"

"Nicholas summoned the Powers to meet him at The Hague to make a universal peace, and Nicholas himself, the autocrat of all the Russias, was the first Power to engage in war, and bloody beyond parallel it was. President Eliot of Harvard called upon the colleges of America to make peace and goodwill on the football field, and, alas! we read of the first big game his good boys engaged in that 'for bitterness and rough play it has had few peers in the history of these annual battles.' The game in old Quakertown was full of 'regrettable incidents.' But every misfortune has its compensations: the compensation of the struggle between Harvard and Pennsylvania was Mr. William Edwards, the argus-eyed and husky Princeton alumnus who officiated as umpire. But for the alertness and firmness of 'Bill' Edwards — so he is called by the scribes as a tribute to his physical powers, no doubt — a merely intellectual man would be called William — the game would have been a massacre, outdoing in gore and fractures the memorable contest at Springfield in 1894, where Harvard earned the title of Crimson, and the stretcher was as busy on the Yale side lines as an ambulance in a tunnel disaster.

"We salute Mr. William Edwards with respect and gratitude. He is the muscular Christian we have been waiting for to reform football under Mr. Camp's rules, which were made, we think, more for tactics than strategy. There have been nimble quarterbacks who ran off the signals like clockwork; but here was an umpire who got into all the plays, broke up the tactics known as 'holding' and detected the punitive fist and the effective strangle-hold. His cautions flew like hail, and he penalized like a just judge. But he did what other umpires have hesitated or feared to do: he put the sluggers out of the game. Possibly it was sometimes retaliatory punching and Bill Edwards did not see the provocation; but he saw more than any other umpire had seen before, and as a football reformer he towers above the two Presidents—he [sic] of Harvard and he [sic] of Washington, though it be lèse majesté to lisp it.

"Walt Whitman used to admire 'powerful uneducated persons'; but your true man, your useful citizen, your real disciplinary and salubrious force is a powerful educated person like 'Bill,' pardon us, William Edwards. We nominate him for umpire in the Yale-Harvard game. As a graduate of Princeton it would not be seemly for him to officiate in the game at New Haven next Saturday."

THE SUPREME COURT OF MISSOURI has decided that the will of the late Dr. John S. Sayre '78, U. S. N., is valid, reversing the decision of the trial court. Dr. Sayre made Princeton University his residuary legatee, and practically his entire estate, valued at over thirty thousand dollars, is left to his Alma Mater, to be used in the endowment of (1) a fellowship of applied chemistry, (2) a fellowship of applied electricity, both in the John C. Green School of Science, and (3) the balance of the estate for the endowment of scholarships in the Academic Department of the University, to be known as the Class of 1878 Scholarships. In bequeathing these scholarships, Dr. Sayre expressed the hope that his classmates would contribute an equal amount for the same purpose.

THE WILL WAS CONTESTED by two of the brothers of the testator, but his sisters declined to join in the contest; on the contrary, two of them coöperated with the University in the defense of the suit, and, by their testimony and moral support, did everything in their power to maintain and carry out the will of their brother. The jury in the trial court, influenced by local prejudice in Lewis county, Missouri, the residence of the testator, decided against the validity of the will, and the case was taken, by appeal by the University, to the Missouri Supreme Court. John D. Davis '72 and Joseph W. Lewis '90 of St. Louis represented the University in the defense of the suit. By the advice of Mr. Davis, of the Alumni Trustees, all overtures to compromise the case were declined,—very wisely, as is now shown by the decision of the Missouri Supreme Court.

THE UNIVERSITY PREACHERS announced for the remainder of the present term are: Nov. 19th, President Charles Cuthbert Hall, of Union Theological Seminary; Nov. 26th, Prof. Paul van Dyke '81; Dec. 10th, the Rev. Dr. John Sparhawk Jones, of Philadelphia; Dec. 17th, Bishop Franklin S. Spalding '87, of Salt Lake City; Jan. 7th, Prof. Henry van Dyke '73; Jan. 14th, the Rev. Willis H. Butler '95, of Northampton, Mass.; Jan. 28th, President Charles Cuthbert Hall, of Union Theological Seminary.

PROF. THEODORE WHITEFIELD HUNT '65 is the senior member of the Princeton faculty, in point of length of service, since the retirement of Dr. Packard, who was appointed Professor Emeritus at the recent meeting of the trustees. Dr. Hunt is now in the thirty-sixth year of his connection with the English department, having been appointed a tutor the same year President McCosh came to Princeton, 1868, and having actually begun his tutorial service two months before Dr. McCosh's arrival. After three years as a tutor, Dr. Hunt went to Europe for two years, returning in 1873 as Adjunct Professor of English. In this rank he remained till 1881, when he was advanced to the full professorship of English Language and Literature which he still holds.

Prof. Brackett of the department of physics and Prof. Cornwall, chemistry, rank next to Dr. Hunt in seniority of service, both being in the thirty-third year of their connection with the faculty, which began in 1873.

The Second Annual Dinner of the Orange Alumni Association

By Robert E. Annin '80, President of the Association

BERKELEY Hall, East Orange, is as suitably arranged for festive events as a Parsee Tower of Silence, and the regularity with which trains snort by whenever a speaker is making a point, shows a genius verging upon inspiration on the part of the dispatchers. However, when the Decorations Committee got through with the hall, most of its natural ugliness was hidden, and the trains were never audible when Duffield '92 and Stewart Brown '87 were talking,—so no one heard the trains.

The menu by Speir '77 was a dream. Yorke Allen '94 had again attended to the seating, which was perfect. When the 125 guests (15 more than last year) were seated, the Rev. Minot C. Morgan of Summit asked the blessing. The dinner was hot, and quickly served by Davis of Newark, prodded by Hagemeyer '97, who acquired a strong cast by keeping one eye on the kitchen and the other on the head table. In the first interval of comparative silence, Stewart Brown informed Ed. Duffield that he "liked him personally, but couldn't stand for him politically"—and every crisis of the evening was punctuated with this aphorism. Stewart's politics are of the vintage of 1832.

The music was very successful; it was arranged by Mountain '00, ably criticized by Fred. Smith, 3rd, '94 and George Mc-

Campbell '94,—but it suited the crowd, and the singing was fine. A musical hit was recorded when Mountain by request sang "Gunga Din"; his voice was mellow and sweet, and filled the hall completely. McCampbell led the cheering until his throat felt like an insurance officer's after cross-examination.

Dean West '74 came in with the roast, as usual, and was greeted with great applause.

A letter was read from ex-President Cleveland, which began with a much appreciated compliment to the Association and Princeton alumni, and wound up with a snap of the moral whip which was of far reaching application, and made the crowd sit up; it was enthusiastically cheered and applauded.

At 8.15, Underhill '04 led in the '00 Tiger, manned by two Dagoes, who were trained to the minute. To the tune of "Ramble" he pranced up one aisle and down another, winking significantly at President Wilson, and on returning to the front of the hall, Kenneth Clark '05 led the crown in the "Jungle Song," while the Tiger danced a two-step. By the time the dance was over, the crowd knew the song. It was a great success, and Underhill and Clark were copiously congratulated.

A crowd of disreputables, headed by those eminent deaf-mutes McCampbell, Duffield, Y. Allen, and  $\sqrt[3]{F. Smith^9}$ , brutally sang —

Nobody talks but Annin,
And he will talk all night. . . .

But their sorrows were evidently in bathing, and some had sunk for the third time. At the end of the second line, the Muse had apparently stopped to push in her hairpins, for the verse was never completed, though often repeated.

THE GABFEST

At nine o'clock Allen reported that he had left no one with more than enough money to get home, and the head table cheered up. The chair reviewed the work of the Association for the past year, introducing the Orange Prize Scholar, Edgar W. Beckwith '09, as the first exhibit of real accomplishment. Mr. Beckwith got a great reception.

Albert Wall '86 spoke on "The Law and the Profits." It was an inspiration to see his intelligence, imagination and mouth all working together. His speech, which was devoted to roasting Dean West and the Chairman, was on a high plane of dry humor, and was punctuated with rounds of applause. His wit played over a funeral manner like lightning over a summer cloud; he was a howling success.

Mr. Everett Colby spoke on "The Duty of Today," which, he said, was a subject as new as "The College Man in Politics." (That toast was rather a break.) The point which Mr. Colby developed was that reformers generally failed from not knowing their business, and that if they were to succeed in future they must acquire the knowledge of and sympathy with the common people, which characterized the bosses whom they sought to displace.

Mr. Colby got a rousing reception, the men standing up on chairs and waving their napkins before he started, and giving rounds of applause and cheers for Brown University when he sat down.

The Hon. Sarah Condit '94 reported that the Committee on Revision of Curriculum, despairing of reforming Princeton, could only report that great progress had been made at Columbia, Yale and Harvard. Condit's reading was most impressive, and the "Simply-to-thy-cross-I-cling" voice in which he worked off his peroration was irresistible:

SECOND ANNUAL REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON CURRICULUM

"A year ago this Committee, after an exhaustive investigation into present conditions, presented certain recommendations as to the revision of the curriculum of the University. These recommendations your Committee felt certain would receive not only considerate attention, but immediate adoption. Our criticism was twofold, 1st, that the old required courses, owing to their brutality, should be frankly and promptly given up, and, 2nd, that the narrowness inseparable from religious and moral instruction imperatively demands their abolition. It is with deep regret that your Committee is forced to report that they have watched in vain for proof that this Association has revolutionized the curriculum of Princeton University. It is with shame that we must admit that our brothers and our sons are still being driven along the dismal and flowerless road which more progressive institutions to a certain degree have abandoned. Depressed by neglect which we have not merited, we determined to turn our efforts to sister institutions, in the hope of impressing our views upon some leading universities of this land.

"We have sent a member of this Committee to each of several universities and had expected a report in person from each. Owing however to the immense difficulty of the task, we can only read written reports of progress. Pestalozzi, Froebel, and Horace Mann did much; we feel, from the progress made, that this Association in the end will be admitted to the sacred ranks of educational reformers and will occupy a position among them second to none.

"Our first report is from a most respectable and up-to-date institution. It is dated New York City, and is as follows: 'The faculty of Columbia are seriously considering the removal of English as a required course and giving Freshman courses in English, Chinese, or Yiddish. We shall succeed.'

"The second is from New Haven; it is as follows: 'All signs point to mathematics following Greek at an early date. A very intelligent Freshman tells me that President Hadley hopes in five years to have no required course except football,* when it is rumored he is to resign from the presidency and be succeeded by Walter Camp. I am informed by a Divinity School student that President Hadley never decides anything until vox populi declares it vox dei.

"The third is from Cambridge: 'Great success. No man here will hereafter be obliged to take any course at all. Freshmen will choose one from 1700 courses. Study will be elective. Also the ten commandments. Princeton must give in.'

"As the subject of this telegram is so vital, the author, one of the brightest young men belonging to our Association, sends a letter, by special delivery, emphasizing the glorious march of progress:

'Robert E. Annin, Esq.,

President Orange Alumni Association.

'Dear Sir:

'In accordance with your instructions I have laid before the proper authorities the Association's views in regard to the curriculum at this University. I am gratified to report that progress has been greater than we anticipated, and I telegraphed you to that effect.

'It is already agreed that neither Latin, Greek, mathematics, nor English will hereafter be prerequisites for any course.

*The faculty has announced that the University will be closed all day on the day of the Harvard-Yale game.—
Newspaper dispatch from New Haven.

Monometallism, monogamy, and monotheism will hereafter be alternative courses with bimetallism, polygamy, and polytheism. This makes largely for breadth.

'Having pointed out that the use of only one creed in the Divinity School constituted practically a required course in theology, at my suggestion the faculty are considering the introduction of courses in Buddhism, Mohammedanism, and Mormonism, while several very liberal professors urge that Fire Worship be also introduced. It is hoped that Bishop Lawrence will raise the money to build a mosque. I am gratified beyond measure.

'If you can suggest anything more, I believe President Eliot, owing to the doing away with cigarette smoking at football practice on Soldiers' Field, is in such a receptive condition that he will adopt almost anything that may serve to stimulate and conserve individuality.'

"These are the signs of the times, full of precious promise of the dawning of the new educational day. If it be our fate to fail to mould to our liking the policy and curriculum of Princeton, let us nevertheless rejoice in the creation of new spheres of our influence and in the seed sown in good ground.

"Time is the repairer of wrongs and avenger of holy ideals. We can but work with stout hearts, knowing that in the end truth will prevail."

Dean West was introduced by a few verses from the Poet Laureate of the Association, Francis Speir, Jr., '77, apropos of the Dean's last visit. For instance:

MUSINGS

By Andrew Fleming West

I planned a trip to Orange just a little while ago,
To speak of high ideals, where they run a Princeton show,—
I missed my train, I lost my bag, my trip was not a joy,
To Orange via Flemington, Manunka Chunk, and Troy,— Through Horseheads, past Schenectady, along Jamaica Bay,—

I thought I'd be at Basking Ridge before the break of day.
But in the end I conquered, thanks to silent prayer and fate,
And grimed with hours of travel, I arrived, alas!—too late.

The Dean's subject was "What Princeton Stands For." He made a striking presentation of the contrast between the restricted elective system of balanced and coördinated courses — as at Princeton — and those schemes of educational anarchy which turn the selection of courses over to the most uneducated men in the University,— the entering class. He stated that there was no logical resting place between the Harvard plan and the Princeton plan, but that the worst plan of all was to wobble between the two. He spoke at length of the moulding influences of Princeton, where men could be brought under purely academic influences for four years, to be trained in those things on which their future depends. He referred to the Honor System (great applause) and spoke at length on the Preceptorial System. He expressed confidence in the individual development which is to result from its introduction at Princeton, and gave some account of the working of the Tutorial System at Oxford. The intentness with which the room listened to this, and the following speaker, was more flattering than the hearty and sustained applause.

After Dean West's remarks the room broke into the "Triple Cheer," and as soon as the song was over, President Wilson responded to "Princeton,— Her Future."

In his address Dr. Wilson said that Princeton was just at this time passing through a trying experience, testing whether the University is to count for numbers alone, or whether the family life which has been handed down from generation to generation is to be kept, with all its individualism. Continuing, he said: "We are trying to stimulate these youngsters to the willing daily use of their faculties. The continual use of them makes them serviceable. They will in time get what constitutes intellectual power, that is, hard-headedness, definiteness, precision, and easy coördination in the things that they are doing.

"Education simply means that a man makes simple and easy use of the faculties about him. The great trouble with colleges has been that the undergraduates have not been taught to work. They have not learned the daily pressure and compulsion of duty that is imperative in the shop, office or laboratory. The undergraduate must learn to use himself. One of the things we have tried to do, but which has been futile so far, is to teach men how to govern their fortunes. A man cannot do that until he learns to command himself."

Again, he said that with the new methods of instruction there was certain to be an increase in the college roll, and the only way it could be regulated was by being more punctilious in the entrance examinations. The real difficulty at Princeton, as at other places that have grown too fast, he declared, was to keep the solidarity and retain the whole as an individual community. He said that more dormitories should be provided, where all the undergraduates might be housed, and when the limit of accommodation was reached, the influx should be checked.

He asked if it had ever occurred to the alumni that as the Oxford colleges had grown from small hostleries, the clubs at Princeton might, in the far future, be developed into a group of academic communities, with their own quadrangles, and names that might be known the world over. He closed with a fine tribute to the student body. The silent attention with which his remarks were received was as fine a tribute as any speaker need ask.

The whole dinner was undoubtedly better than last year, when it was thought high-water mark had been touched. This was due to the untiring work of the Executive Committee, who have made everything second to the dinner for six weeks. No detail was too unimportant for some good man to look after, and look after well.

Princeton 16, Cornell 6

FOR five years in succession Princeton has beaten Cornell in football. Cornell's last victory was in 1900, and in 1899 also their team defeated the strong Princeton eleven which afterwards won the championship from Yale. Before that, Princeton won all the games since the first, in 1891. This year's match, on University Field, Nov. 11th, Princeton won by 16-6. But if Princeton was victorious on the football field, Cornell certainly won out in the dual glee club concert in Alexander Hall on the evening before. The Cornell clubs gave Princeton a rare musical treat, which met with a most enthusiastic welcome. And the good feeling, which was so marked on the occasion of the football game at Ithaca last fall, was augmented at the smoker and reception given by the Right Wing Club to both musical organizations, in the Casino, after the concert.

At the game last Saturday afternoon, Cornell's enthusiastic delegation, about a thousand strong, occupied the large new east stand (which has been built for the Army-Navy game) and their spirited singing and cheering were in no way surpassed by the cheers and songs of the larger Princeton crowd on the opposite side of the field. The mutual good feeling which has always characterized Princeton's meetings with Cornell was manifested with emphasis all through this game, and after it was over, the Cornell stand, though in defeat, gave Princeton a rousing cheer, and their singing of Alma Mater was one of the most inspiring features of the the game.

The day was perfect for football and the game was full of open playing and exciting crises. The crowd, five or six thousand, was about the average for the Cornell game, but in the huge stands now surrounding University Field it looked small.

Cornell had an unusually heavy, fine-looking team, and for a time it seemed as though they were going to repeat the performance of Dartmouth the week before. At the start Princeton did not appear to advantage and twice in the first half Cornell had the ball within Princeton's twenty-yard line. But as in all former games this year, Princeton prevented her goal-line from being crossed by rushing, and Cornell's attempts to score (after her attack had been stopped), first by a goal from placement and again by a quarterback kick, were unsuccessful. Then Princeton got busy, and carried the ball seventy yards for a touchdown, Bard making forty-five on an exciting end run. Cooney missed the goal. So the score was 5-0 in Princeton's favor when the first half ended. But early in the second half Cornell took the lead with a touchdown and a goal, making it 6-5 in their favor. This touchdown was not made by rushing, but by a punt over Princeton's goal line, Martin, Cornell's right halfback, falling on the ball. The touchdown was allowed on the ground that the ball had grazed Quarterback Dillon, though there was some discussion over the decision. And Halliday's goal put Cornell one point ahead. But this adverse score only roused Princeton's fighting spirit, and before the half was over two more touchdowns had been made, and another was prevented by the call of time, Princeton having carried the ball within eight yards of Cornell's goal line.

Both teams were penalized frequently, and there were some bad fumbles, but on the whole it was a well played game, and at all events a most interesting one. Princeton's attack and defense both seemed weak at first, but the playing of the team improved noticeably as the game went on, and they finished strong. McCormick's line-plunging, in the second half especially, was irresistible, and Bard and Munn, and later Daub, did some very good work in advancing the ball. Quarterback Dillon was at his best in running back punts, and once carried the ball sixty-five yards through the entire Cornell team. Dillon also won much applause by his clean tackle of O'Rourke, the big Cornell tackle, who had broken through the line and had a clear field except for the Princeton quarterback. Rafferty was ruled out of the game for rough play, and, though at fault, he was not without considerable provocation. Halliday, O'Rourke, Thompson and Walder did particularly good work for Cornell, but altogether Cornell did not seem to have developed all of the football ability of such an excellent bunch of material as was assembled at Ithaca this fall. Captain Costello, the strong Cornell tackle, was unable to play against Princeton.

The game began at half past two, when Tooker kicked off for Princeton. Martin ran the ball back to his twenty-yard line, and Cornell immediately began a strong attack, reaching their forty-eight-yard line before they were stopped. Here Princeton held for downs, but could not advance the ball, and Bard punted to Cornell's seven-yard line. Walder returned the kick to E. Dillon, but Princeton could not make her attack go, and Cornell held for downs. Cornell soon had to kick, and E. Dillon was downed on his twenty-yard line. Princeton then rushed the ball for about thirty yards, but was penalized fifteen for holding. Bard's punt was blocked and Cornell got the ball on Princeton's twenty-yard line. Cornell worked hard for a touchdown, but Princeton's line held, and on the third down Halliday tried a goal from placement, which went too low. Princeton kicked out from the twenty-five-yard line, Walder reeled off a clever run for thirty yards, and Princeton's goal was again threatened. Thompson and Martin carried the ball to the seventeen-yard line, but Cornell could get no nearer the goal, and tried a quarterback kick. The ball went out of bounds. Bard punted to his thirty-yard line, only, but Cornell was immediately held for downs, and it was now Princeton's ball. Bard got off an exciting right end run for forty-five yards, and on the next play Munn went around left for seventeen more. From this point it was a steady march until McCormick went over Cornell's line for the first touchdown, completing a seventy-yards advance. Cooney missed the goal. Time was nearly up, and the half ended with the ball in Cornell's possession in the middle of the field.

Very early in the second half things began to get interesting. Walder kicked off for Cornell, and E. Dillon ran the ball back thirty yards. But Princeton could not gain, and Bard punted. Cornell then made some advances, but was forced to kick on Princeton's thirty-five-yard line. This punt went behind the goal and counted for Cornell's touchdown, Halliday's goal putting his team in the lead. The Cornell crowd was uproariously happy.

Tooker kicked off to Martin, who returned the ball to his twenty-yard line. O'Rourke made a fine plunge through tackle and got away for thirty yards, but was cleverly brought down by Quarterback Dillon. Cornell could gain no more, and punted. Bard returned the kick, Cornell fumbled, and Princeton got the ball on Cornell's eighteen-yard line. It didn't take long to cover that distance, and McCormick went over the line for Princeton's second touchdown, the cheers this time all coming from the Princeton side of the field. Cooney kicked the goal, making it 11-6.

After that it was easy. E. Dillon ran back the kick-off for sixty-five yards, but Cornell held for downs, tried to rush the ball, and then punted. E. Dillon returned the ball to his twenty-five-yard line, and Munn, Bard, McCormick and Daub (who succeeded Munn) went through Cornell's line in fifteen and twenty yard plunges until Daub made the touchdown. Cooney just missed the goal, the ball striking one of the upright posts and falling the wrong way. There was little time left, but Princeton had carried the attack again to Cornell's eight-yard line when the game ended.

Carbide is the product from which acetylene gas is made and is manufactured by the Union Carbide Co. It is absolutely without competition in the United States.

This Company earns over 20 per cent. and pays 8 per cent. (1 1/4 per cent. quarterly) on $5,000,000 capital stock. Anthony Brady, Geo. O. Kuapp, and C. K. G. Billings, all of the Peoples Gas Light and Coke Company, are directors and largest stockholders.

This company erected a new plant costing over $1,000,000 last year at Sault Ste. Marie, from earnings. Acetylene Gas, which is made from Carbide, is 10 times stronger than Gas light, costs less, and uses up only one-fourth of the oxygen consumed by the latter.

At the present time there is a substantial surplus on hand and the stock has a book value above present selling price.

Through an option we are enabled to offer some of this stock, subject to prior sale, at a price netting over 6 per cent.

As there is no competition and the earnings will be very nearly double this year by reason of the new plant, this stock should be able to pay 10 per cent. or more in less than a year.

NO. 9

ONCE again Princeton alumni have an occasion for felicitating Yale alumni (though not for congratulating them, our friends The Enemy will pardon us for remarking) on their successful organization of athletics,—for Yale's victory in the thirty-first annual football game at New Haven last Saturday was distinctly a triumph of the Yale coaching system over the Princeton coaching system. Two months ago, when the football season opened, the material was not extraordinary either at New Haven or at Princeton; and when at the close of our season the product of the Princeton system faced the product of the Yale system in the first line-up on Yale Field last Saturday, the eleven Princeton players compared very favorably with the eleven Yale players: there was no apparent advantage in weight, in experience, or, man for man, in all that makes a football player. But before the game was over it was just as apparent that Yale had developed one of the strongest teams in her athletic history, while the best that could be said for Princeton was that the members of the team had given another exhibition of never-say-die spirit in a losing fight,—a sentiment, by the way, which reflects more credit upon our football players than upon our football methods. For the information of alumni who did not see the game, a complete report of it is given in this issue.

WITH THE PRINCETON FOOTBALL SEASON now closed, it is a relief to turn our attention to an athletic event involving less strenuously Princeton emotions,—the annual Army-Navy game, to be played on University Field a week from this Saturday. On that interesting occasion Princeton is to have the pleasure of welcoming the largest crowd of the season, for there seems little doubt that all of the 25,000 seats at University Field will be occupied on December 2nd. At this writing there are still plenty of seats to be had at Briner's drug store in Princeton, but these no doubt will all be taken during the next few days. It is a pleasure to record that the members of the Princeton faculty have received complimentary seats for this game. As the guests of the Princeton Athletic Association, they will foregather in the west stand,—preceptor upon preceptor, line upon line.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR THE GAME are now pretty well completed by the committee in charge, namely, M. Taylor Pyne '77, C. C. Cuyler '79, John B. Fine '82, Tracy H. Harris '86, George R. Murray '93, and Mr. H. C. Bunn, the Curator of Grounds and Buildings. For bringing the crowds to Princeton the Pennsylvania railroad has built eleven new terminal tracks, in addition to the nine tracks below Brokaw Field, and in addition, of course, to the regular tracks at the station. From New York and Philadelphia special trains will start Saturday morning as early and as often as they are filled up, the New York trains running to the new tracks, discharging and receiving passengers at the Elm Drive below Brokaw Field; the Philadelphia trains will discharge and receive passengers at the old terminal yard adjoining Brokaw Field at the southwest corner. The tracks at the station will be reserved for private coaches and the regular, scheduled trains. Immediately after the game the special trains will depart as fast as they are filled up, the increased accommodations providing for moving as many as 12,000 passengers at a time. Pennsylvania officials were in Princeton this week inspecting their improvements, and on that occasion the first train was run over the new drawbridge across the canal, the construction of which had delayed the completion of the double track to the Junction.

FOR THE COMFORT OF THE CROWD in reaching the campus from the trains, the Curator is placing a board walk along the Elm Drive to the Gymnasium. To avoid confusion and possible accidents, no vehicles will be allowed on the Elm Drive until after the game, when hackmen will be permitted to carry passengers to the special trains, entering the campus by way of Washington Road, near the Infirmary. Aside from this exception, no automobiles, carriages or other vehicles will be allowed on the campus next Saturday. For the additional protection of the crowd, there will be a couple of hundred Pinkerton detectives in Princeton.

ELABORATE PREPARATIONS have also been made by the Curator for feeding the multitude. As already announced, the cadets and midshipmen of West Point and Annapolis and their friends are to be entertained at luncheon as guests of the University, in the Gymnasium, at half past twelve, with accommodations for two thousand. The Gym. will be appropriately decorated, and the military and naval bands will play during the luncheon, in the galleries of the trophy room. The catering for this luncheon is under the management of Mr. Charles Riley of Philadelphia, who had charge of the arrangements for the entertainment of the cadets and midshipmen when the game was played in that city. While this luncheon is in progress, President and Mrs. Wilson will entertain at Prospect a group of the most distinguished official guests attending the game. At the Princeton Inn the football team of the Naval Academy will be quartered, arriving Friday. Luncheon will be served to the general public at the Inn at 11.30, and after two o'clock the Inn's accommodations will be open to everyone, as usual. The West Point team will spend Friday night in New York and come to Princeton on their private train Saturday morning, making their headquarters on their train.

AS THE DATE OF THE GAME falls during the Princeton Thanksgiving recess (November 29th to December 4th) a large number of the undergraduates will be at their homes, though no doubt many of them will remain in Princeton for the game. The upperclass clubs on Prospect avenue have joined with the alumni committee in entertaining the Army and Navy guests, two thousand invitations having been issued by these clubs to the officers and their families, for luncheon on Saturday. For the general crowd, including Princeton alumni, the first floor of University Hall has been turned over to the Hildebrecht Catering Company of Trenton, the accommodations providing seats for two thousand at a time, and meals will be served all day at $1.50 per. The Hildebrecht Company will also serve a buffet luncheon in the old Gymnasium, at $1.00, with accommodations for one thousand. In addition, there will be two tents dispensing handy box lunches, one at the new railroad terminus near the Elm Drive, the other opposite the entrance to University Field. Mr. Davis, the Newark caterer, will serve the box lunches. All the stands at the field are now nearing completion, and the field itself is covered with straw to protect it from frost, till the day of the game.

FOR THE HARVARD-PRINCETON DEBATE on football, to be held at Cambridge on December 15th, Princeton has chosen to defend the affirmative, the question having been proposed by Harvard, viz.—“Resolved, That intercollegiate football in America is a detriment rather than a benefit.” The members of the Harvard team are A. Tulin 3L., who debated against Princeton last year; W. M. Shohl '06, and G. J. Hirsch '07. The Princeton team: P. McClanahan '06, K. M. McEwen '06, T. S. Clark '08, with J. K. Jackson '06 as alternate. In the trials for the Princeton team, the Spencer Trask Prize of $50 was awarded to Mr. Clark.

Y a l e 2 3 , P r i n c e t o n 4

SINCE Yale and Princeton began playing football in 1873, Yale has won sixteen times, Princeton nine times, there have been four ties, and two games were unfinished on account of darkness. After two of the tie games ('79 and '80) the championship (of the old football league) was awarded to Princeton, and Yale won the championship in 1881 by defeating Harvard after playing a tie game with Princeton. Consequently, so far as the Yale-Princeton series is concerned, the record is seventeen to eleven in Yale's favor.

In the last six years, Princeton has won only one game.

In the thirty-first annual match at New Haven last Saturday, Yale's victory (23-4) was due to superiority in physical condition, and consequently in endurance; a higher development of team play, and better judgment both in playing the game and in preparing for it.

Eighteen minutes after the game began, Yale made a touchdown by rushing the ball over after securing it on a fumble inside Princeton's thirty-yard line. For the remainder of the first half Princeton kept the ball in Yale territory most of the time, carrying it first to the thirty-yard line, again to the twenty-five, and then to the thirty-five. So that when the intermission came, although the score was 6-0 in Yale's favor, the Princeton crowd felt encouraged; for their team had made ninety yards in rushing, to seventy by Yale. But in the second half Yale's strong attack, well sustained by excellent condition, was good for three touchdowns. From the opening of this half, Yale gradually grew stronger, while the Princeton players were unable to stand the strain, though they fought desperately to keep the score down. The coaches of both teams sent in several substitutes, but here again the advantage was decidedly in Yale's favor. Yale's fresh players added strength, but the Princeton line, especially, after both regular guards and the center had been taken out, grew perceptibly weaker. Of the eleven Princeton players who started the game, only four finished it,—Capt. Cooney, Herring and Tooker in the line, and McCormick in the back-field. Nevertheless, after Yale's last touchdown, these four and the substitutes resumed the attack with unfaltering determination, forced the fighting into Yale's territory, and though they were unable to carry the ball over for a touchdown, they scored,—a thing which no other team had accomplished against Yale this season. After a desperate attempt for a touchdown, which brought the ball to Yale's ten-yard line, where a fumble lost it on downs, Tenney heeled the punt forty-three yards from Yale's goal, and Tooker's drop-kick was good for Princeton's four points.

The day was beautiful for football,—a clear sky, very little wind, and the temperature brisk but not uncomfortable for the spectators. The playing field, though somewhat worn by constant use, was dry and in good condition for the style of play developed by both teams, which was more open, and therefore more interesting, than has been seen in a Yale-Princeton game for several seasons. From a non-partisan standpoint (though there were very few non-partisans present) it was a fine exhibition of intercollegiate athletics. Most of the time it was excellent football, and all of the time it was an honorable contest between good sportsmen, desperately fought from start to finish, but cleanly and squarely fought, with none of those unfortunate lapses from self-control which have so often brought reproach upon this great game.

By two o'clock the huge stands that enclose the field were comfortably filled, the spectators numbering about 30,000, the record crowd for Yale Field. On the west side Princeton undergraduates, alumni and their friends had excellent seats, fully 6,000 of them. Opposite, on the east side, and at the ends and corners, the Yale blue waved triumphantly. Each cheering section had a brass band, but they were never in the competition with the vocal tempest that raged from the moment the teams appeared till a half hour after the victors had been carried from the field. The singing was entertaining, the cheering was more than vigorous. As on the field, so in the stands, the utmost good feeling prevailed, each crowd cheering for the other before and after the game. The Princeton crowd particularly appreciated the courtesy of their friends of Yale, who, in their triumphant march around the field at the close of the game, stopped in front of the Princeton stands, where the alumni and undergraduates were singing Old Nassau, and cheered repeatedly for Princeton. The return cheers for Yale were no less spirited and sincere.

The attack of both teams was much better than the defense. Yale's surest gains were made on the left side of the Princeton line, against which the tackle-back formation was used very effectively, the runner being stopped, usually, by the secondary defense, in which McCormick did yeoman service. In the second half, after the regulars had been taken out, Yale sent the attack against center and the guards for short but sufficient gains. These were Yale's most effective plays, but there were others that proved very useful, the attack developed at New Haven this year being unusually varied and always fast. Princeton's most successful attack was directed against Yale's left, where McCormick and Bard made gains of from three to ten yards, with Cooney, Daub, and quarterback Dillon helping in the interference. The punting was mediocre, though Veeder and Roome usually got more distance than Bard and Munn. In running back kicks, E. Dillon did well against the fast Yale ends; the Princeton ends caught Hutchinson for little or no gain in the first half, but in the second, the Yale quarterback (who was substituting for Jones) proved a star open-field runner. Early in this half Hutchinson caught a punt and cut loose for a twenty-five yard run, jumping over Cooney and bringing the ball to Princeton's twenty-yard line, from which point Yale carried it over for the second touchdown; and soon after, this agile young man took a quarterback kick on the run and was not stopped till he had covered sixty-five yards,—which put Yale in a position to make her third touchdown.

On the whole, however, the Princeton ends compared very favorably with Yale's, Brasher, in particular, though markedly outweighed, holding his own against Captain Shevlin.

During the game, Yale gained 180 yards on running back punts, to 40 by Princeton. In rushing, Yale gained 220 yards, all told, Princeton, 180,—Yale 70 in the first half, 150 in the second; Princeton 90 in the first, 90 in the second. On penalties, Yale lost 80 yards, Princeton 40.

FIRST HALF

The Yale team was the first to appear on the field (at 2.10) and Princeton came out a minute or two later, amid enthusiastic cheers. The game began at 2.25. Captain Cooney won the toss, and took the north goal. Biglow kicked off for Yale, and E. Dillon returned the ball fifteen yards, to his twenty-five-yard line. McCormick made three yards on a line plunge, but Princeton was penalized fifteen yards for holding. Bard punted to Veeder, who fumbled on Princeton's forty-eight-yard line, Brasher falling on the ball. Princeton could not gain by rushing, and Bard kicked to Veeder, who was downed on Yale's thirty-yard line without gain, both Princeton ends being right there ready to tackle him. Veeder and Flinn made two first downs for Yale, Princeton's off-side gave Yale five yards more, Flinn went through the line for eleven yards, and Morse made six, but Yale was penalized fifteen yards for holding, and Veeder punted to E. Dillon on Princeton's twenty-eight-yard line. The sun was in Dillon's eyes, and he fumbled the catch, Biglow falling on the ball for Yale. Then Yale got busy and carried it straight for a touchdown. It took three downs to make the last four yards, but Forbes was finally pushed over for the first score, at the northeast corner of the field. Hutchinson punted out to Veeder, who heeled the catch, and Hutchinson kicked the goal, making it Yale 6, Princeton 0, after eighteen minutes of play.

Tooker kicked off to Flinn, who was downed on Yale's twenty-yard line. Veeder immediately kicked to E. Dillon, who regained ten yards, bringing the ball to midfield. Princeton got five yards on Shevlin's off-side, Bard went around Forbes for five yards, he and McCormick made another first down outside of left tackle, and the attack continued to Yale's twenty-eight-yard line, where, lacking a few inches for first down, Princeton lost the ball on downs, after a steady advance for twenty-five yards. Veeder punted on the first down, and E. Dillon cleverly dodged both Shevlin and Cates and ran back twenty-three yards before he was tackled, on Yale's forty-eight yard line. Princeton immediately took up the attack again. Bard got four yards around Cates, Cooney got five outside of left tackle, Daub made three, and McCormick six on the same kind of play. Bard made two more first downs around Forbes, bringing the ball to Yale's twenty-five-yard line. But in an attempt on Yale's right, Daub was thrown for a loss, and then a quarterback run was smothered. It was third down and nine yards to go. So Tooker tried for a field goal. The pass was too low, likewise the kick. Hutchinson caught the ball, and was downed by Brasher on Yale's nine-yard line. Roome succeeded Veeder at left halfback, failed to gain, and punted to E. Dillon on Princeton's forty-five-yard line. McCormick and Cooney made six yards on two tries, and Bard went around Forbes for eight more. Then Princeton was penalized fifteen yards for holding. Daub eluded Shevlin for six yards, but on a fake kick Bard failed to make up the distance. On the next scrimmage Yale broke through and blocked Bard's punt, but E. Dillon saved the ball for Princeton. E. Dillon tried a quarterback run, but fumbled, Bard picked up the ball and dropped it again, and it was Yale's ball on Princeton's twenty-eight-yard line. Flinn and Morse on two rushes carried it six yards, then Yale was penalized fifteen for holding. Hutchinson tried a field-goal from the forty-five-yard line, which went low, E. Dillon falling on the ball on Princeton's fourteen-yard line. Princeton made only three yards in two rushes, so Bard punted to Hutchinson, who fumbled on Princeton's forty-seven-yard line, Brasher falling on the ball. McCormick made five yards through left tackle, and he and Bard had gained six more when time was called for the first half, with the ball in Princeton's possession, on Yale's forty-eight-yard line.

At the close of the first half, the Princeton crowd were very much surprised to see their team remain on the field, instead of going to their training quarters, as usual. During the ten-minutes intermission, the Princeton players sat on the ground at one end of the field, wrapped in blankets, and listened to instructions from the coaches, till the Yale team returned from their quarters.

SECOND HALF

The second half began at 3.15. Neither team had made any changes in the line-up.

Tooker kicked off to Morse, who fumbled on his eleven-yard line, but recovered the ball. Flinn made five yards, and on the next play he went past Brasher for twenty yards more, but Yale was then stopped, and Roome kicked to Bard, who fumbled, E. Dillon saving the ball on Princeton's forty-yard line. Princeton tried unsuccessfully to gain by rushing, and Bard punted out of bounds at Yale's forty-eight-yard line. Roome returned the kick to Bard on Princeton's thirty-yard line. McCormick made four yards, but Daub failed to gain. Munn then took Bard's place, and was immediately called upon to punt. The ball touched a Princeton player and went only to the fifty-yard line, where Flanders caught it on a backward bound and carried it back to the twenty-four-yard line. Yale made one first down, but lost fifteen yards for holding. To regain them Hutchinson tried a quarterback kick. E. Dillon caught the ball at Princeton's three-yard line and took it out of bounds. Princeton made a first down, and then McCormick got through for ten yards. But Princeton could not gain further, and Munn kicked to Princeton's forty-five-yard line. Hutchinson received the ball, and with excellent interference eluded Brasher, hurdled Cooney and had run twenty-five yards before Munn brought him down. H. Jones now took Cates' place at Yale's right end, and O'Brien went in at Princeton's left for Brasher, who was hurt. From the twenty-yard line Yale advanced the ball on mass plays, and though Princeton resisted stubbornly, Flinn was finally pushed over for a touchdown. Hutchinson punted out to Morse, who heeled the catch, but Hutchinson missed the goal, making it Yale 11, Princeton 0.

Before the next kick-off J. Waller succeeded Carothers at center, and Tenney took E. Dillon's place at quarter. Tooker kicked off to Shevlin, who ran back twenty yards, bringing the ball to Yale's thirty-yard line. Yale got one first down, and was given five yards for interference, but was soon forced to kick, Roome punting out of bounds at Princeton's forty-five-yard line. McCormick got four yards, Yale's offside netted five more, Munn went through for four and McCormick for five, but after two more attempts it was third down and three yards to go, and Tenney tried a quarterback kick. Hutchinson caught the ball, and made his exciting run for sixty-five yards, before Daub finally tackled him on Princeton's twenty-yard line. Hockenburger was then substituted for Erwin at Yale's left guard, and P. Waller took Rafferty's place. Yale made short rushes through Princeton's line until Forbes scored the third touchdown, Hutchinson's goal making it Yale 17, Princeton 0.

Tooker kicked off, and on the first lineup Morse got around O'Brien for fifteen yards, Cooney making the tackle. Morse was again tried, and circled Tooker's end for forty yards. He eluded everyone except Tenney, who made a sure tackle. Forbes made six yards. At this point Phillips was sent in at guard, in place of H. Dillon. Morse and Flinn made a first down, and Roome went around right end for fifteen yards, bringing the ball to Princeton's seventeen-yard line. Flinn was then retired, Roome going to fullback and Knox to left half. Yale continued to gain steadily, and though an off-side cost five yards, Princeton could not stop the fierce assault. The loss was made up in one rush, reaching the five-yard line, and on another plunge, this time at Princeton's right wing, Roome was pushed over for the last touchdown, Hutchinson's goal making the score 23-0.

There was very little time left when Tooker kicked off,—but those few minutes were the best part of the game for Princeton. Shevlin, who took the catch, was stopped at his eighteen-yard line, and on the first scrimmage a penalty of fifteen yards for holding put Yale back behind her five-yard line. Forced to punt from behind the goal-line, Roome wisely placed the ball out of bounds (at the thirty-five-yard line) to prevent a fair catch. But Princeton took up the attack once more, with unwavering determination. Tenney's quarterback run brought eight yards, McCormick was still good for eight more through the Yale line, and Tibbott, a freshman, was sent in to succeed Daub. On the next play Tibbott was sent around Shevlin's end for ten yards, bringing the ball to Yale's ten-yard line. There the Yale defense was desperate, and though the attack was no less fierce, on the second assault Princeton still lacked a yard for first down. And on the next scrimmage, Yale's opportunity to prevent a touchdown came. The ball came back on a dribble, and before it could be passed the fast Yale line was through and smothered the attack. It was Yale's ball on downs,—spoiling Princeton's last chance for a touchdown.

But Yale was again forced to punt from behind her goal-line. This time Hutchinson was sent back for the kick, and though he got plenty of distance he failed to place the ball out of bounds. With the Yale ends coming down on him like locomotives, Tenney held up his hand as a warning that he would try for a fair catch. And he made good, heeling forty-three yards from Yale's goal, and about fifteen yards from the west side-line. From this difficult distance and angle, Tooker sent a beautiful drop-kick over the Yale crossbar,—so high over it that the goal would have been good, doubtless, from the middle of the field. And though this drop-kick did not win the game, as did Captain DeWitt's place-goal two years ago, from almost the same distance, the Princeton crowd showed that they appreciated Tooker's skillful performance; the game was Yale's, but there was some consolation, at least, in those four points.

The following is the line-up as the players faced each other:

Of this year's Princeton team in the Yale game, Tooker, Brasher, Rafferty, Carothers, Bard, J. Waller and Munn are members of the senior class, leaving Captain Cooney, H. Dillon, Herring, P. Waller, Phillips, O'Brien, E. Dillon, Tenney and Tibbott for next year, with several other capable candidates who did not get into the Yale game,—notably Fryer and Vaughn, ends; Dutcher, who was injured early this season, and Stanard and Holden, both of whom were ineligible this year, all three heavy line-men; Simons, the fast half-back; and possibly Rulon-Miller, who was out of college this year, on account of illness, but may be able to return next autumn.

Yale loses by graduation Captain Shevlin, Cates, Tripp, Flinn and Hutchinson.

Carbide is the product from which acetylene gas is made and is manufactured by the Union Carbide Co.

It is absolutely without competition in the United States.

This Company earns over 20 per cent, and pays 8 per cent. (1 1/4 per cent. quarterly) on $6,000,000 capital stock. Anthony Brady, Geo. O. Kuapp, and C. K. G. Billings, all of the Peoples Gas Light and Coke Company, are directors and largest stockholders.

This company erected a new plant costing over $1,000,000 last year at Sault Ste. Marie, from earnings.

Acetylene Gas, which is made from Carbide, is 10 times stronger than Gas light, costs less, and uses up only one-fourth of the oxygen consumed by the latter.

At the present time there is a substantial surplus on hand and the stock has a book value above present selling price.

Through an option we are enabled to offer some of this stock, subject to prior sale, at a price netting over 6 per cent.

As there is no competition and the earnings will be very nearly double this year by reason of the new plant, this stock should be able to pay 10 per cent. or more in less than a year.

HENRY VAN DYKE

Essays in Application

Such keen social satire as "Publicomania"; such vigorous doctrine of citizenship responsibilities as "The Powers that Be"; such sane economic reasoning as "Property and Theft"; such noble expositions of the business of living as "The School of Life", are all virile voices to the times accurately keyed to counteract current failures and fallacies.

The Spirit of Christmas

NO. 10

ON BEHALF of the alumni of Princeton University, The Weekly has great pleasure in extending a most hearty welcome to the Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy of the United States, the Secretary of State, the Secretary of War, the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, and the other distinguished guests from Washington; the Superintendent and midshipmen of the Naval Academy at Annapolis; the Superintendent and cadets of the Military Academy at West Point; the gallant officers of Uncle Sam's fighting forces on land and sea, and all the visitors who are to partake of Princeton's hospitality on the occasion of the annual football game of the Military and Naval Academies, at University Field this Saturday afternoon.

THE PRESIDENT'S TRAIN is announced to arrive at the Princeton station shortly before noon, the official guests from

Washington to be taken in carriages directly to Prospect for the luncheon in their honor by President and Mrs. Wilson. Besides the President of the United States and Mrs. Roosevelt, the list of guests announced for the luncheon at Prospect includes the Hon. Elihu Root, Secretary of State; the Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Newberry; Admiral Sands, Superintendent of the Naval Academy at Annapolis; Brigadier General Mills, Superintendent of the Military Academy at West Point, and Mrs. Mills; Mr. William Loeb, Jr., the President's Secretary; Captain W. S. Cowles and Mrs. Cowles (the President's sister); Mr. Charles Douglas Robinson, Mrs. Robinson (the President's sister), and Miss Corinne Robinson, of New York; and Charles A. Munn '81 of New York. The Secretary of War and Mrs. Taft are also announced to attend the game, but were unable to accept the invitation to luncheon at Prospect, as they had arranged to enertain a party of guests in their private car. After the luncheon, the Presidential party will proceed to University Field in carriages, returning to Prospect after the game, before leaving for Washington.

PRESIDENT WILSON is returning to Princeton this Friday night, having been in the South the past week. His engagements included an address at Webb's School, Bellbuckle, Tenn., on Nov. 27th; on the 28th, the guest of honor at the first reunion and dinner of the Princeton Alumni Association of Tennessee, at Nashville, and on the 29th, an address before the Schoolmasters' Association, at Nashville.

PRESIDENT PATTON was the guest of Princeton alumni living in Dayton, Ohio, at a luncheon on Nov. 22nd, while lecturing in that city. On Nov. 19th, Dr. Patton preached in the First Presbyterian Church of Dayton, and the following week he delivered a course of lectures on The Fundamentals of Christianity, at the Young Men's Christian Association Hall. The Princeton luncheon in Dr. Patton's honor was given at the Dayton Club, the alumni present including John W. Stoddard '58, Judge O. B. Brown '76, Charles Van Ausdal '85, D. D. Bickham '86, A. McLaren Marshall '92, Harrison R. Daniels '93, R. C. Kumler '95, Bernis B. Brien '96, W. M. Brenner '99, and Joseph P. Davies '03. On Sunday the 26th, Dr. Patton preached in Pittsburgh, and on Monday, while alighting from a street car in front of Hotel Schenley, he fell, receiving painful injuries about the shoulders. After a few days' rest at the Schenley, he returned to Princeton.

PROF. WILLIAM BERRYMAN SCOTT '77, of the department of geology, has returned to Princeton after several months in South Africa as a member of the expedition of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, which, in point of the number of eminent scientists participating and the amount of territory covered, Prof. Scott characterizes as "the most remarkable scientific excursion that has ever been undertaken." Altogether there were about four hundred scientists on the expedition, Prof. Scott being one of four Americans. Admirable arrangements for entertaining this large party were carried out by the geologists of South Africa, so that the visitors were enabled to see and study the country more satisfactorily than under ordinary circumstances could have been done in a very much longer time. Prof. Scott sailed from New York on July 8th, reaching Cape Town August 15th. For three days the association held meetings at that point, which were followed by an excursion through the Karroo, for the study of the peculiar geology of that region. Later in August and early in September the British Association held additional meetings at Johannesburg. Then Kimberley was visited, from which point the scientists made an excursion to Victoria Falls, by way of Bulawayo and Rhodesia, and a pilgrimage to the grave of Cecil Rhodes in the Matopos Hills. Victoria Falls, on the Zambeze river, more than sixteen hundred miles from Cape Town, by rail, Prof. Scott describes as one of the wonders of the world, with its cataract a mile wide and four hundred feet high, exceeding even Niagara in its dimensions. After this excursion Prof. Scott, with a large number of his scientific brethren, visited Beira in Portuguese East Africa, and then proceeded to the Red Sea by way of the east coast, making stops at Mosambique and Mombasa, the port of Uganda. From Suez the return journey to Europe was made by way of Cairo and Alexandria.

THE TOTAL OFFICIAL POPULATION of Princeton University is now larger than it ever was before, though the total registration of students is not quite up to the record of two years ago, according to the University Catalogue for 1905-6, which is announced to appear next week,— very much earlier than usual. The increase in the faculty incident to the introduction of the preceptorial system has brought the total of officers of instruction and administration and students up to 1584. The rolls of the Graduate School, the Academic Department and the School of Science aggregate 1384, ten more than last year, and forty-seven less than for the year 1903-4, when the highwater mark was reached. The general summary of officers, teachers and students, showing the comparative figures for 1904-5 and 1905-6, is as follows:

Old Nassau at Old Nassau

COMMENCEMENT week of 1904 at Princeton, as alumni present on that occasion will remember, was distinguished by the presence of a genuine old Nassau—an eminent Princeton graduate who, by more than forty years of service in the cause of humanity as a medical missionary in West Africa, has honored the name of his Alma Mater—the Rev. Dr. Robert Hamill Nassau '54, M.D., D.D. Since then Dr. Nassau has published a book on Fetichism in West Africa, which has increased his reputation as a scholar who combines to a rare degree the human interest and practical works of the philanthropist with the spirit and achievements of the scientist. Even more interesting to Princeton alumni, however, because it shows him so peculiarly one of us, and one of the youngest of us, notwithstanding his more than three score years and ten, is Dr. Nassau's description of the enthusiasm with which he entered into the spirit of the Commencement season, when with a few surviving classmates he celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his graduation. This description, originally prepared by Dr. Nassau for a few of his friends, just before his return to Africa, was subsequently published in The Westminster. The Weekly's only regret in reprinting the article is that our space limits prevent its reproduction here in full:

MY REJUVENATION

Unwilling as I had been to return in August, 1903, for a furlough to the United States, yet I found among other compensations one great one in the fact that it made possible my participation in a reunion of my Princeton University class of 1854, in June, 1904, on the fiftieth anniversary of our graduation. . . .

On Saturday afternoon I went to the campus where the classes were to form in procession in order of their age to march to the University Field. Oh that campus! One's blood was stirred by the shouts and songs and bands and bright colors and various badges and flags, and amused by the humorous dress of some of the younger classes. The Marshal was arranging the classes in the order of their age, mostly decennial. There was only one other "'54" man besides Baker [the Rev. Dr. Lewis C. Baker, Secretary of '54] and myself, and he was a Presbyterian clergyman from Oneida, N. Y., the Rev. Samuel Jessup, D.D. Our greetings were earnest, but the blood of my comrades was not stirred as was mine. They spoke of our advancing years, but seeing my enthusiasm, they appointed me to carry the pennon that Baker had brought.

We three of "'54" were placed at the head of the parade. Next to us was "'74" with a brass band. Its stirring notes only a few yards behind me fired my already excited spirit, and the step of my two companions seemed slow and unsympathetic.

It was a splendid scene as we arrived on the field. The tiers of seats on the stands were filled with probably fifteen thousand spectators: the under classes were out in force vociferating the University yell: the baseball teams were in preliminary practice: the merry bands were martial: the day was clear, a beautiful day in June. A few members of "'64" and "'69" had by this time straggled in between "'54" and "'74." The parade marched once around, when the Marshal cried "a second time." Baker and Jessup objected to that second time, but they finally yielded and we went around again. The figures on my pennon, "P. '54," were observed and applauded by many in the crowd. Then we took our seats and the baseball game was played. I do not understand the game, and was not specially interested. I was not very much enthused even by the fact that Princeton won. But the crowd that did understand and that loved baseball, and the Princetonians who shouted at the victory, broke loose. All the more recent classes, who were dressed in fantastic costumes, whirled across the field, dancing and singing college songs. The Marshal called for a parade around, pronounced pe-rade, to celebrate the victory. I was carried away with the current of enthusiasm, and said to my comrades, "Come on! fellows!" "No," they said, "we are too tired." "Have you any objection to my taking the flag, and going alone?" "No; take it, and represent us."

The classes of '64, '69 and '74 had disappeared from the field; those of '84 and later dates were forming in line. I said to the leader of '84, "I have a son in your crowd." He replied, "We see your flag. Join us and precede our band." I did so. My feet responded to the martial air. I forgot all thought of fatigue. I exulted in the soldierly surroundings. On the march before the ball game, a few hundreds had cheered '54; now thousands saw its only representative; they observed my youthful step that contrasted with my white beard and hair. They rose in their seats. I saw many hands pointing me out to others. I waved the pennon toward them. Then they cheered again. I responded with hat in one hand and pennon in the other, waving them rhythmically, and bowing low as I looked up to their friendly faces. At the same time I kept step to the band's music. And, not wishing to lose sight of their hands of salutation, or seem to turn my back on the spectators, I wheeled about, my face toward them and the band; but still keeping step as I walked backward, as if I was colonel of a regiment. With head erect or bowing, my arms curved from side to side, waving with hat and flag, as if beating time to music. Every motion of my head, arms, body and feet was synchronous with the music. Afterwards friends joked me for having "danced."

I was enjoying myself as if in the full tide of youth. The plaudits of the crowd were an ovation. Leading the "pe-rade," I smiled and bowed, as tier after tier of the crowded seats rose to cheer me. I was told afterwards that, had all that crowd known my name, the yell for "Nassau!" would have been deafening. . . . After the concert in Alexander Hall that [Monday] night, I went to '79 dormitory. As I pushed open the door I saw several dozen gentlemen, each with his silver mug of Apollinaris, some of them with something stronger, sitting in easy attitudes under a canopy of smoke. Among them I recognized a secretary of our Foreign Board, and a professor in Princeton Theological Seminary. I was about to drop into a vacant seat near the door. But some one must have given the presiding officer a sign that I was the expected guest. I did not know him or he me; I was afterwards told that he was Colonel Wright, of Wilkesbarre, Pa. He called out in a loud voice, "Come here! to this seat!" motioning to a large chair by his side, as a seat of honor. The entire company rose and cheered me as I walked forward and took the seat. During the cheering Colonel Wright leaned over to me and whispered, "What is the name?" "Nassau." He jumped up and said, "Here! fellows! here's the man who made us all!" And a toast was drunk to the name; and the company standing sang "He's a jolly good fellow." When they had resumed their seats, I rose and said, "Chairman! I am proud to be the father of so fine a looking company of men!" I was about to sit down again, when there were cries of "Speech! speech!" and with the occasion and its surroundings spurring me, I remained upon my feet and said:

"Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of '79: I thank you for the honor of being your guest (Voices: 'The honor's ours!') and for the privilege of making a few remarks. I know what '79 means, and what it stands for. I appreciate the invitation that brought me here; and will mention an incident in connection with it. As I was walking inoffensively this morning on a street of this good town, I was waylaid by four men. Had it been out West, and had their garb been different, I might have expected, 'Your money or your life!' But the courteous words and cordial manner of these gentle highwaymen relieved all fear. (The chairman, 'Can you point them out? Isn't that fellow one of them?' 'Yes; he's one.') And I found that their only design on me was to invite me to your smoker. But, really, Sir, it seems to me somewhat preposterous to invite to a smoker a man who doesn't know how to smoke. (A voice: 'How's that?') Well, Sir, if I may trespass on your patience, I'll tell you that story why. When I was a lad I was a good boy. (A voice: 'Bet you were!') It was sufficient that my mother said, 'My son, I do not wish you to smoke.' Henceforward, at school and University, I sat among my smoking companions, and never touched a cigar. Later, when of age, in the theological seminary, expecting to be a foreign missionary, reading of different countries and their customs and arguing to which country I should go, thinking of Turkey and its national habit of smoking and the discourtesy of refusal of a pipe by a visitor, I, in good conscience, thought I would try to learn. One day, after a hearty dinner, I bought a good cigar, and began. But, presently, I was conscious that I had two heads and four eyes and several stomachs. The results were so disastrous that I failed to attend Dr. Hodge's lecture on theology that afternoon. I did not try again to learn. I concluded not to go to Turkey; and I went to Africa. I have spent the majority of the years of my life in that far-off strange land. The life there is a trying one; not simply on its physical side, in its exposure to dangerous malarial fever, but in the deprivation of most of what civilized and educated men hold dear. When, on my occasional furloughs, I resume again my place among Christians, gentlemen, and litterateurs, I derive from them for my up-building as much benefit as my body derives from the physician's tonics. It fitted happily into this present furlough that I could attend the fiftieth anniversary of my graduation; and I assure you I have been enjoying Commencement to the top of my bent. (Voices: 'Yes, you seemed to be, last Saturday!') Yes, Sir, I was! I think that no one of those thousands entered into the spirit of the occasion more than I. (A voice: 'No one had a better right.')

"Sir, on the street this afternoon, a lady archly said to me, 'I heard you danced on the baseball field on Saturday!' Well, gentlemen, I thought I was conducting myself with eminent propriety on that occasion. (A voice: 'You were.') But if I 'danced' I'll explain to you why. Once, there was a great king of the Hebrews. The Ark of his Jehovah had been lost in battle. Years afterward, it was recovered, and was brought home with rejoicing and bands of music. So glad was this king in the recovery of a great treasure that, in his exultation, he seized a harp and sang to its music, moving his body with its music, and under the applause of the female singers. His jealous wife chided him for a lack of dignity. But he justified himself by saying that he had 'danced before the Lord.' And so, gentlemen, when, last Saturday, I, who ten months ago had come from Africa sick and broken, felt the bounding life of restored strength tingling in my veins, and the music of the bands of '74 and '84 surging through my muscles, perhaps my feet moved synchronously with their rhythm. If so, I tell you, I 'danced before the Lord' in the joy of new life and restored health. I could honestly, gratefully and solemnly have kneeled in the dust of that athletic track, and have thanked God for the joy of living. Such scenes as this Commencement gives, and such kind receptions as you have accorded me, make me glad that I am a Princetonian, make me grateful for friends old and new. Again I thank you for your courtesy."

There were many speeches by others on various topics. And we did not disperse till 2 a. m. of Tuesday.

The excitement of the evening was still in my brain on Tuesday morning, the 14th, as I came to breakfast. I was a little late and the other members of the family were already at the table. To amuse them I entered the room singing, "We won't go home till morning;" and skipping around the table I accidentally knocked the coffee-pot off the table to the floor. I think that for a moment they all doubted the source of my exuberance; and there was a hearty laugh at my expense.

[In this spirit of youthful enthusiasm, Dr. Nassau also describes the '54 class meeting, with a dozen present, "the majority of them over 70;" the pe-rade to the Gymnasium, and the alumni luncheon at which, introduced as "old Nassau," he received an ovation; the '54 class dinner, and, in conclusion, says:]

The story of Commencement Day has been very often told. There was nothing in it unusual or new. I marched with the procession, wearing my academic robes, and was assigned by the Marshal a place immediately after the faculty and before all the other classes. Notwithstanding all the fatigues, I felt, and still feel, the wine of manhood in my veins. But the time has come for my return to my work in the land that is far away. But I go with renewed health and strength, with gratitude to Almighty God for the happiness of the furlough at home, and with the little pennon of orange and black with its legend, Princeton '54, as a souvenir of a very happy day in a missionary's life.

Edwin Milton Royle's new four-act drama, The Squaw Man, which Mr. William Faversham is playing at Wallack's Theatre, New York, has received much favorable comment from the New York papers. This is from the New York Times:

Edwin Milton Royle has written an idyl of the West that will enjoy, and deserves to enjoy, a lasting and substantial measure of success. "The Squaw Man" is a play for women, and, what is rarer, it is a play for men. Possibly the most peculiar fact about it is that it is written in such an exceptionally sincere vein that it will move the masculine part of our population as deeply as the feminine. And few plays do that. It is no unusual thing for women to sigh and weep in the presence of the simulated sorrows of the theatre, but these outbursts generally find the sterner masculine element smiling serenely in the attitude of superior mental calm. That calmness will be disturbed in the presence of such a throbbing heart story as Mr. Royle has told, and as it is set forth on the stage of Wallack's theatre. For there is rich, red blood in "The Squaw Man," its sentiment is irresistible, and underneath its grim and honest humor there is a suggestive note of deep and lasting pathos that lingers in the memory long after the curtain has fallen and the footlights have faded from the view.

Mr. Royle has set out to write a story of that picturesque phase which is fast disappearing—if indeed it has not already disappeared—from our Western American life. It may be said to his credit that he has succeeded splendidly. "The Squaw Man" justifies very pleasurable sensations in the breast of every one of us who is interested in the development of a drama of the soil. If it is not the great American drama come at last it is still a highly respectable contribution to a stage that has been none too rich in native works of even transient value, it represents an ambition well directed, and a talent and skill that justify such ambition.

The faculty Committee on Out-Door Sports has decided to allow the "soccer" players to arrange a few matches with nearby colleges and athletic clubs,—but not to join in the movement for an intercollegiate organization for association football, their reason for this prohibition being that Princeton is already sufficiently represented in organized athletics.

THE CANE SPREE

The sophomores, who were vanquished by the freshmen in baseball, at the opening of college, evened things up this week by winning the annual cane spree in short order, making their second victory in this stunt, for '08 took the spree from '07 last year. In the lightweight A. H. Ormond '08 disposed of C. F. Cisst '09 in three minutes; it took nearly ten minutes for J. R. Dickson '08 to get the cane from J. A. Cook '09, in the middleweight, but in the heavyweight N. P. Wheeler, Jr.,

'08 required less than two minutes to defeat his heavier opponent, E. Stanard '09, the football tackle. The winner of the lightweight is one of the agile sons of a father who himself rose to the occasion as a cane spreer (and described a parabola with his opponent) some years before he rose to distinction as one of the world's foremost philosophers.

CROSS-COUNTRY RUNNING

For the fourth consecutive year, Cornell won the annual intercollegiate cross-country run, held at Travers' Island on Nov. 24th. Harvard was second, Yale third, Massachusetts Institute of Technology fourth, University of Pennsylvania fifth, Princeton sixth, and Columbia seventh.

INTERCOLLEGIATE SHOOTING

University of Pennsylvania won the intercollegiate gun shoot, held at Cambridge on Nov. 25th. Yale was second, Harvard third, Princeton fourth.

YALE 6; HARVARD 0

Yale wound up her very successful football season by defeating Harvard 6-0, in the Stadium at Cambridge on Nov. 25th. The two teams proved to be evenly matched, and in the first half neither could score. Yale made the only touchdown of the game in the latter part of the second half, after Harvard had fumbled a punt on her thirty-two-yard line, where Yale got the ball and rushed it over. The scores of some of the other games of Nov. 25th were: Pennsylvania 23, Columbia 0; West Point 17, Syracuse 0; Annapolis 12, Virginia Polytechnic 6; Dartmouth 24, Brown 6; Swarthmore 50, Wesleyan 6; Lafayette 53, Lehigh 0. Nov. 30—Pennsylvania 6, Cornell 5; Chicago 2, Michigan 0; Carlisle Indians 76, Georgetown 0; Lafayette 47, Bucknell 0; North Carolina 17, Virginia 0; Washington and Jefferson 24, Lehigh 0; Nebraska 24, Illinois 6.

UNION CARBIDE

J. D. SMALL '96

Carbide is the product from which acetylene gas is made and is manufactured by the Union Carbide Co. It is absolutely without competition in the United States. This Company earns over 20 per cent. and pays 5 per cent. (1 1/2 per cent. quarterly) on $6,000,000 capital stock. Anthony Braly, Geo. O. Kuapp, and C. K. G. Billings, all of the Peoples Gas Light and Coke Company, are directors and largest stockholders. This company erected a new plant costing over $1,000,000 last year at Sault Ste. Marie, from earnings. Acetylene Gas, which is made from Carbide, is 10 times stronger than Gas light, costs less, and uses up only one-fourth of the oxygen consumed by the latter. At the present time there is a substantial surplus on hand and the stock has a book value above present selling price.

Through an option we are enabled to offer some of this stock, subject to prior sale, at a price netting over 6 per cent.

As there is no competition and the earnings will be very nearly double this year by reason of the new plant, this stock should be able to pay 10 per cent. or more in less than a year.

Such keen social satire as "Publicomania"; such vigorous doctrine of citizenship responsibilities as "The Powers that Be"; such sane economic reasoning as "Property and Theft"; such noble expositions of the business of living as "The School of Life", are all virile voices to the times accurately keyed to counteract current failures and fallacies.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 9, 1905

NO. II

AFTER having over six months for preparation, and after dilly-dallying all summer and fall in double-tracking the short branch line between Princeton and Princeton Junction, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, one of the most powerful corporations in the country and ordinarily one of the most efficient in its service to the public, did its best, or rather its worst, to wreck the carefully prepared programme for the Army-Navy football game at Princeton last Saturday. That it did not succeed altogether in spoiling the pleasure of the thousands who came to Princeton that day, and in subverting the excellent arrangements made by the hard-working committees of the Naval Academy, the Military Academy, and Princeton,—no thanks to the P. R. R.

WITH ONLY THE OLD SINGLE TRACK TO Princeton the railroad service was never worse than it was last Saturday. The improvements at Princeton Junction include a Y directly connecting the branch with the main line, so that both New York and Philadelphia trains may run to Princeton without stopping at the Junction. But the Philadelphia side of the Y was not used last Saturday,—just why is not apparent. Instead of proceeding directly to Princeton without stopping, the Philadelphia trains were run beyond the Junction station and then back over the New York side of the Y, adding to the congestion at the Junction, which would have been bad enough without this particular piece of mismanagement. But that was not altogether responsible for the failure to send the specials to Princeton after they arrived at the Junction. Only the early trains continued to Princeton without delay. Between twelve and two o'clock nearly all of the specials were held at the Junction, without any apparent reason, for from forty minutes to over an hour. After waiting till their patience was exhausted, many of the passengers walked the three miles to Princeton over muddy roads and fields, and even then some of them beat their trains in. Those coming on the later specials were delayed so long at the Junction that many of them did not arrive in Princeton till the game was half over, although it did not start till 2.30 p. m., a half hour after it was scheduled to begin.

THE TRAIN BRINGING THE battalion of midshipmen from Annapolis did not arrive at Princeton till two o'clock, causing a delay of an hour and a half in reaching the luncheon prepared for them and the army cadets in the Gymnasium. They were, of course, obliged to hurry from their train to the Gymnasium, eat their luncheon in a few minutes, and make a dash for University Field, without forming in the parade that had been previously arranged.

FORTUNATELY, THE SPECIAL TRAIN carrying the West Point team and cadets had come down from New York early in the day, so that the military battalion had plenty of time for the excellent luncheon in the Gymnasium. While the cadets were eating, their band played in the Trophy Room, and after the luncheon, with the band at the head of the procession, the battalion marched to the field by way of University Place and Nassau street, making a fine spectacle in their gray uniforms and perfection of martial bearing. Notwithstanding the delay in the arrival of the trains, twenty-seven hundred cadets and midshipmen and their friends were entertained at the luncheon in the Gymnasium, as the guests of the University. At the upperclass clubs on Prospect avenue preparations had been made for entertaining about two thousand guests, but the transportation blunders prevented most of these army and navy officers from reaching the clubs. In like manner, a large portion of the alumni and the general crowd in Princeton for the game, were obliged to hurry to the field as soon as they arrived, with nothing more for their dinner than sandwiches picked up on the way. Had the railroad delivered its passengers without delay, there would have been plenty of time for all to eat their meals in comfort at the numerous places provided for the occasion. In University Hall and the old Gymnasium preparations had been made for accommodating three thousand at a time, but the caterer in charge of these places reports a loss of nearly $1,000 for his enterprise. In short, the preparations in Princeton for meals and for handling the crowd were above criticism. Everything was in readiness,—but the only railroad connecting Princeton with the rest of the world failed to make good. Whatever discomfort, therefore, our guests suffered as a result of having the Army-Navy game at University Field is distinctly up to the Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S TRAIN arrived at 12.20, President Wilson, with Curator Bunn representing the Princeton committee on arrangements, having been waiting for three-quarters of an hour at the station. There were also in waiting a group of secret service officers, in charge of Inspector Sutton, and a platoon of husky Jersey City policemen. The crowd was kept back by a rope stretched around the station platform, so that when the presidential party arrived there was no confusion in reaching the carriages. President Wilson met President Roosevelt as the latter stepped from his car, and extended him a cordial welcome to Princeton. Together they walked to one of the carriages provided for the official party, which were drawn up alongside of the station platform. The stalwart Jersey City policemen formed a formidable rush line leading the procession, the occupants of the first carriage being President and Mrs. Roosevelt, President Wilson, and Secretary of State Root. The line of parade was up University Place and down Nassau street to the campus entrance opposite Dickinson Hall, thence past the University Library and Marquand Chapel to Prospect. At the station and on the streets there were frequent cheers for President Roosevelt, who bowed amiably and waved his hat at the crowd. The luncheon party at Prospect included President and Mrs. Roosevelt, Secretary Root, Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Newberry, Brigadier-General Mills, Superintendent of the West Point Military Academy, and Mrs. Mills; Mr. William Loeb, Jr., the President's Secretary; Captain and Mrs. W. S. Cowles, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Douglas Robinson and Miss Corinne Robinson, Miss Margaret Axson, and Charles A. Munn '81,—Admiral Sands, Superintendent of the Naval Academy, having been prevented from attending the luncheon by the lateness of the arrival of the Annapolis train. Miss Ethel Roosevelt and Mr. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., joined their father later and attended the game with him.

THE PRESIDENTIAL PARTY was taken in carriages out Prospect avenue to University Field, the President being continuously cheered from the club houses and the street. Entering the field by way of the Osborn Club House, the President walked to his box at the front of the cheering section of the west stand, where he sat with the midshipmen during the first half. At his appearance the multitude stood up and cheered vigorously for several minutes. Then the army corps, headed by their band, marched through the entrance at the southeast corner of the playing field. They, also, were greeted with spirited cheering, as they formed a square of gray in the section reserved for them in the middle of the east stand. Meantime, the midshipmen's cheering section on the other side was filling up, and presently there were complimentary cheers by the army for the navy, by the navy for the army, and by both for Princeton. During the game the two battalions kept up a vigorous chorus of yells and singing, with amusing parodies on popular songs. It was excellent cheering, the navy's siren yell making a great hit. The midshipmen's songs were led by Zimmermann's band, so well and favorably known in Princeton. Mr. Zimmermann had arranged a march for the occasion, which he has named The Princetonian, and which introduces the melody of "Three cheers for Old Nassau," the refrain of "Yale, Yale, you can't play ball," and "Where, oh where are the grave old seniors," as sung at the cannon exercises.

AFTER THE GAME, which neither team won nor lost, the parade on the field was very effective. The midshipmen, whose team had gamely avoided defeat in the last minute of play, were jubilant. They broke loose on the field and showed their feelings with small regard for discipline. The army battalion formed in more regular order, and gave a fine exhibition of the marching for which they are famous, but before long, in the maneuvers of the two battalions, they found themselves marching side by side around the field, the blue and gray lines being scarcely discernable in the growing darkness,—a spectacle which kept the crowds in the stands for some time after the game was over, and which was the feature of the day for the matinee girl, whose name was legion,—and no lack of opportunity to change it.

AT THE CLOSE OF THE FIRST HALF there was a strenuous craning of necks to see the President cross the field, but he remained seated so long that the crowd began to think that an old custom was about to be abolished. The navy cheered, the army cheered, the navy sang, the army sang, and the President still remained seated. Across the field, the West Point cadets were calling for him, and finally Secretary of War Taft, who had a large party on the army side, including prominent members of the diplomatic corps, crossed the field and entered the President's box. Presently a section was taken out of the fence on each side of the field, a detail of midshipmen lined up on the navy side, a similar detail of cadets lined up at the opening on the army side, the President stepped briskly to the middle of the rush line of secret service officers and policemen, and accompanied Secretary Taft across the field, setting a pace that left no doubt of his intentions. During the transfer of the seat of government the crowd cheered approvingly, as did the army battalion upon its completion. About the middle of the second half, when it was beginning to get dark, Mr. Roosevelt, with his escort, started to leave the field, but he remained long enough at the southwest entrance to see the navy score and tie the game. He then proceeded to the station, his special train leaving for Washington shortly before six.

AS FOR THE GAME ITSELF, there was glory enough for both teams. The army eleven proved unexpectedly strong and, with the assistance of a high wind, outplayed the midshipmen in the first half, making a touchdown by carrying the ball fifty yards through the navy line. The goal from touchdown made the score 6-0 in the army's favor at the end of the half. In the second period the navy had the wind, and this, with better physical condition, kept the army on the defense. After twice rushing the ball within scoring distance of the army goal, and losing it on downs, the navy's last chance came. A penalty gave the midshipmen the ball at the army's twenty-five-yard line, and this time, by a fine exhibition of pluck, it was carried over. Quarterback Norton (the midshipman who kicked a goal against Princeton last year) tied the score with a goal from touchdown, whereat all discipline was suspended in the middle of the west stand. Soon after this, the officials called the game on account of darkness, with ten minutes of the playing time left.

THE CROWD AT THE GAME numbered between 22,000 and 23,000, so there was plenty of room for all, the north stand being almost empty. Perhaps if the price for end-stand seats had been $2.00, instead of $3.00, the same as for the better seats in the side stands, all of the 25,000 seats would have been occupied. That is a matter of opinion. At any rate, it was probably the largest crowd that has attended an Army-Navy game, and University Field was big enough, with room to spare. The playing field was soft, but its condition was as good as could be expected so late in the year—and much better than it would have been had not the General Athletic Treasurer taken the precaution of covering it with two feet of straw during the cold weather preceding the game. The day was cloudy, but fortunately no rain fell during the game.

DOWN AT THE RAILROAD terminals, after the game, there was a good deal of confusion in the darkness, and some of the special trains were very late in getting started. But between five and six o'clock, five Philadelphia specials were sent out, which illustrates what could have been done with proper management, both in the arrival and departure of trains. In striking contrast with the mismanagement of the transportation of the twenty odd thousand who came to Princeton last Saturday, is the excellent handling of a larger crowd by the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, on the occasion of the Yale-Princeton game three weeks ago.

THE REFUSAL OF THE General Treasurer of the Princeton Athletic Association to pay the expenses incurred by having a band in the cheering section at the Yale-Princeton football game has been made the occasion of renewing the demand for a public statement of the finances of the association. Whether the association ought or ought not to have paid for the band is not of great importance; the amount could be raised by subscription among the students, and, as a matter of fact, it was so raised. But the students are entitled to know why the association would not or could not pay for the band. That is to say, as The Weekly has always maintained, from all points of view it is desirable that there be published annually a detailed statement of the receipts and expenditures of the Athletic Association.

THE REASONABLENESS OF THE DEMAND for such a statement is beyond question. In the first place, the students themselves constitute the association. From the undergraduate body they elect the managers of the athletic teams, and from the alumni they choose the members of the Graduate Advisory Committee. For seats at the athletic games, the students and the alumni pay prices that are certainly generous, thereby furnishing most of the thousands of dollars now passing through the office of the General Athletic Treasurer each year. The students and the alumni of Princeton are therefore very naturally interested in the details of the expenditure of their money. That they are entitled to an explicit accounting of such disbursements, no less than the association is entitled to the loyal support which it has always received from Princeton men, and no less than the General Athletic Treasurer is entitled to have his accounts thus publicly scrutinized and audited, ought to go without saying. And we are very glad to be able to announce that the Treasurer expects to have a financial report ready for publication shortly after the beginning of the new year. In an interview with a representative of The Weekly, Mr. Murray said this week: "I will make a report soon after the first of January, and if the Graduate Advisory Committee wants it published, I will publish it."

HERBERT LOWELL DILLON '07, of Fitchburg, Mass., was unanimously elected captain of next year's Princeton football team, at a meeting this week of the players who participated in the Yale game, Captain Cooney '07 having declined a reelection. Since coming to Princeton from Exeter three years ago, Captain Dillon has been one of the best all-round men in his class, and in college. Besides playing three seasons at guard on the eleven, he has been prominent in the Triangle Club, writing some of the music and participating in the performances; and in scholarship he has maintained a very creditable standing. He is now a junior in the academic department, and is twenty years old. On behalf of Princeton alumni, The Weekly extends heartiest congratulations to Captain Dillon on his election, and best wishes for a successful season. Congratulations are also due Charles Carroll Smith '07, of Vicksburg, Miss., and Nelson Pratt Wheeler '08, of Endeavor, Pa., whom the undergraduates have just elected Manager and Assistant Manager, respectively, of Captain Dillon's team.

THE ARTICLE ON The College Man in Business, which appears on another page, is reprinted from the Decennial Record of the Class of '95, because all Princeton men are interested in that subject, and because no one class is entitled to a monopoly of such sane and healthy and helpful ideas on a field that is attracting more college men year by year. The author, D. M. F. Weeks '95, Manager at Kansas City and a partner of the Studebaker Brothers Manufacturing Company, with their large business interests in five states and territories under his supervision, is himself an excellent example of the right sort of college man in business; by exemplifying the "fundamental requirements for business" so ably set forth in his article. In the ten years of his graduate life he has become a leader among business men, and one of the most successful of the younger generation of Princeton alumni.

THE ELABORATE DE LUXE EDITION OF

Old Nassau (the song,—and everything known about it), which Wilford S. Conrow '01 is editing and publishing, is announced to appear next week. Circulars on this good Princeton work are now being sent to the alumni. The next issue of The Weekly, which will summarize the year's output of literature by Princeton men, will contain a more complete notice of Mr. Conrow's book.

THE SECOND SONG RECITAL of the season, in the Anne M. Loomis series, founded by Mrs. Williard Humphreys, widow of the late Professor Humphreys, was given in Alexander Hall on Tuesday night. Miss Edith Chapman of New York, accompanied on the piano by Mr. Charles Edmund Wark, sang selections from Franz, Brahms, Grieg, Richard Strauss and Tschaiikowsky, which were very much appreciated by the large audience.

THE FIRST DAMROSCH CONCERT of the season will be given in Alexander Hall on Jan. 12th. For several months this orchestra has been under the direction of Mr.

Felix Weingärtner, the well known German conductor, and many new members from Europe have been added. Last year when the experiment of giving these concerts in Princeton was first made, the interest and support from both undergraduates and residents of Princeton was most gratifying. No doubt the response this year will be equally cordial. Seats for subscribers are to be had at Briner's drug store from Dec. 12th to Dec. 20th. After the latter date the sale of seats will be open to the general public. Those who have not already subscribed may still do so, and by an early application will be able to secure desirable seats.

AS A RESULT of his accident in Pittsburgh recently, Dr. Patton will be obliged to keep his arm in a plaster cast for about three weeks. On his return from Pittsburgh, he underwent an x-ray examination, which showed that there was a compound fracture at the shoulder joint, in the ball of the humerus. The break is healing, and Dr. Patton was well enough to attend a meeting of the trustees of the Seminary on Tuesday of this week.

The College Man in Business*

By D. M. F. Weeks '95

SUBORDINATING all financial considerations for the moment, success in business for any man, largely means that he is the one who makes the plans and assumes the responsibility rather than the one who executes the plans of others. The compensation which follows is proportionate to his responsibilities and the value of his plans, and is irrelevant to this discussion. To what extent then and just how does a college education make success in business possible in the light of this interpretation?

Every one will agree that the fundamental requirements for business are health, hard work, fair-mindedness, ambition, experience, nerve, ability to handle and mix with men, power to generalize and systematize and finally, a never-say-die instinct.

Now the effects of college upon a man's life are all subjective, not objective. College does not make the world give him a hearing. It starts a process in him which makes such a man of him that he creates an opening and fills it so well that most men are glad to get him. College does not give him the keys to the Sub-Treasury or keep him from being a superfluous member of society if he is foreordained for a life of ineffectiveness. If he is weak, the seven years spent among the fellows in preparatory school and in college will make him stronger. If he naturally is sound timber, this miniature world will so align him with the conditions of competitive existence that you cannot starve him or discourage him or lick him.

On the other hand, this miniature world will make him wise beyond his years to the adjustments of society. He has experience of a general character in miniature form, and like a sponge, he is quick to absorb the details of any proposition. If he had gone instead from high school into business, he would at this time be a saturated solution with a particular label, well down toward the bottom of the scale. The graduate has himself in hand and knows himself and his fellows. He has the nerve to build a railroad if necessary — and he will come pretty near doing it. The high school boy has hung a cheap tag on himself — he is on a stool at ten dollars per week and he does not know how to get off. The graduate's mind is a ferment, he cannot stop his habit of thinking; the other's is a half page of an encyclopedia. One says: — "You cannot find work and responsibility enough to bury me, — give me access to the data and I will find a way to win; if I don't, it costs you nothing." The other says: — "I want your O. K. on this before I put it through."

When a boy decides on a college education, he decides to subject himself to four years of hard work without any immediate compensation. He may do so reluctantly, but before he gets his diploma he will have acquired unconsciously the habit of work and the expectation of having to work and this habit he can never outgrow.

During his four years' course he naturally becomes interested in the reasons why men have done things rather than in the things themselves. He gets the thinking habit. He cannot help but generalize and philosophize with the conventions which men impose upon themselves in law, in finance, in religion, in economics, in politics and in trade. This makes him a man with a philosophy, and when he enters business the philosophy of events leads naturally to the philosophy of business and he becomes a planner, — a man who directs salesmen and not a salesman. He becomes an accountant who hires book-keepers and not a book-keeper, — a banker and not a counter of cash, — a man who is after a result and not a machine with his eye on the clock. He may not remember a word of Greek or Latin, but his college training has started a fever in his bones which will not die out and which keeps him from remaining a subordinate. His bank account keeps pace with his development, faithfulness and judgment.

When a man has spent four years among an average lot of fellows — good, bad and indifferent — none of whom was born for his especial delectation, he grows to learn that the world was not made for him altogether, and that he needs a lot of revamping in order to fit into the order of things. He finds that the responsibility of the whole world does not rest on him entirely, that good, wholesome, clean fun is the only thing which keeps him young, and that fairness and ability are the only things which give him influence and power, empty-handed.

He goes out into business knowing what he needs to find out and how to find it. His college-bred instinct makes him fair-minded — a mixer among, and a handler of men. He stays in training, lives outside himself, gets into the game of life until he can approach anyone above him, mix well with his equals, and get the work out of those under him. As a result, he becomes a business getter, a man of results, — a business man.

An average boy with health and a taste for business, who has spent four years at a college where the humanities of men crop out, who has adjusted himself, and responded to the influence of the daily moods of his fellows, will make a business man. The field is wide open for him in the West, where age and pedigree count for less than soundness and square dealing — where men broaden and grow in response to the subtle influence of broad acres, pure air and hardships. He will win because of the fever in his bones which will not let him rest, because he knows how to work out what he is after, because he knows you cannot down him and because his heart has grown big enough to take in all manner of men.

"Just let me live by the side of the road where the race of men go by,

They are good, they are bad, they are weak, they are strong, wise, foolish, and so am I.

Then why should I sit in the scorner's seat or hurl the cynic's ban?

Just let me live by the side of the road and be a friend of man."

Major John McGaw Woodbury, Commissioner of Street Cleaning in New York City, is the subject of the following commendatory editorial in the New York Sun of Nov. 23rd:

CIVILIZING A MUNICIPAL DEPARTMENT

Up to four years ago the best thing the Street Cleaning Department could find to do with the stuff collected from the streets and homes of New York was to tow it out to sea and dump it overboard. There was a theory that most of the stuff thus disposed of would sink and the rest be carried away from shore by current and wave. The theory was not held by seaside dwellers. They knew that much of the waste matter drifted in shore, to litter the beaches, breed disease and depreciate the value of real estate. It was a wasteful, a dangerous, a most primitive solution of a problem that every community must tackle, and the Street Cleaning Department, costly and inefficient, was by no means a popular institution.

To-day scarcely a trace of the old system remains. Nothing is towed to sea. The positively useless matter is incinerated with as little offence as may be. Everything of value or of use is turned to profit. The ashes and heavy rubbish suitable for the purpose are used to build new land for the city. At Riker's Island eighty-four acres have been made already. Each acre is worth not less than $10,000. Within four years 185 acres more will have been made, land built up from the bottom, made by the city, adaptable to many municipal uses, and made with what four years ago would have been dumped into the sea at heavy expense. In Brooklyn the city is redeeming the sunken meadows along Coney Island Creek. So far eighty acres of once worthless property has been reclaimed. Now the Government wants to buy ashes from the city to complete the fill at Governor's Island. A good record for four years. . . .

This is only a page out of the history of the Street Cleaning Department. It tells only a part of the story of the last four years of progress. One man has written it, a man who made a real effort to improve New York, a man who has accomplished something. It is a record to be proud of. On the roster of those who are helping to civilize New York's municipal government the name of JOHN MCGAW WOODBURY stands pretty near the top.

Frederic Ridgely Torrence's latest poem, Threnody at the Hunting Season, which appeared in the September Atlantic Monthly, received the following favorable comment in the November number of that magazine:

For the sake of the making of English verse in America, attention should be asked to that which one American poet has lately accomplished in a rich and, in America, seldom exploited field. Mr. Torrence's 'Threnody at the Hunting Season' in the September Atlantic is, to write only of its technique, a technical triumph in which everyone who is interested in the future of poetry and who knows how to examine and delight in its methods and potencies, must share. There is not heard with frequency in modern verse such an orchestra as this which in the Threnody Mr. Torrence has summoned to his hand.

UNION CARBIDE

J. D. SMALL '96

Carbide is the product from which acetylene gas is made and is manufactured by the Union Carbide Co.

It is absolutely without competition in the United States.

This Company earns over 20 per cent. and pays 8 per cent. (1 1/4 per cent. quarterly) on $6,000,000 capital stock. Anthony Brady, Geo. O. Kuapp, and C. K. G. Billings, all of the Peoples Gas Light and Coke Company, are directors and largest stockholders.

This company erected a new plant costing over $1,000,000 last year at Sault Ste. Marie, from earnings.

Acetylene Gas, which is made from Carbide, is 10 times stronger than Gas light, costs less, and uses up only one-fourth of the oxygen consumed by the latter.

At the present time there is a substantial surplus on hand and the stock has a book value above present selling price.

Through an option we are enabled to offer some of this stock, subject to prior sale, at a price netting over 6 per cent.

As there is no competition and the earnings will be very nearly double this year by reason of the new plant, this stock should be able to pay 10 per cent. or more in less than a year.

Booth Tarkington

Easily the biggest and best thing Booth Tarkington has done.

Chicago Post.

A thoroughly entertaining and readable romance. It is not only the best piece of work from Booth Tarkington's pen, but it is one of the most enjoyable stories and stands out against the mass of fiction that is swamping us. It is the story of the triumph of the village ne'er-do-well in contrast to the downfall of the tyrannous local magnate. All are thoroughly American figures, drawn true to nature and vivid. The episodes are exciting and lifelike, and told with a skill that carries the reader along.—New York Sun.

A great American novel. It will bring the author popularity far in excess of anything he has yet known.—Book News.

It makes a wide and lasting appeal to those who love that rare inner circle of books which satisfy—books with a soul.—N. Y. Times.

Essays in Application

Such keen social satire as "Publicomania"; such vigorous doctrine of citizenship responsibilities as "The Powers that Be"; such sane economic reasoning as "Property and Theft"; such noble expositions of the business of living as "The School of Life", are all virile voices to the times accurately keyed to counteract current failures and fallacies.

VOL. VI

NO. 12

AT THE regular meeting of the Board of Trustees on Dec. 14th, gifts to the University, since the last meeting of the board, were announced to the amount of $80,076.29. The endowment by C. C. Cuyler '79, of the Andrew White Green Scholarship of the value of $5,000, was reported. Also, John D. Davis '72 reported the decision of the Supreme Court of Missouri, upholding the validity of the will of the late Dr. John S. Sayre '78, in which Princeton University is made residuary legatee and will receive about $40,000 to be used in the endowment of a Fellowship of Applied Chemistry, a Fellowship of Applied Electricity, both in the John C. Green School of Science, the balance of the bequest to be used for the endowment of scholarships.

AT THIS MEETING President Wilson presented his annual report to the board.

In addition to a resume of the work of the University during the year, the report contains sketches of the professors and preceptors who have been added to the faculty during the year, and comments on the preceptorial system, the Graduate House, the new buildings, the enrollment of the University, the Senior Society formed last spring, and the report of the University Treasurer, which is to supplement the President's report, but is not yet ready for publication. These interesting documents will be thoroughly reviewed here later.

THE WELCOME NEWS of Princeton's victory in the annual debate with Harvard comes from Cambridge as The Weekly goes to press. The Princeton team, K. M. McEwen '06, P. McClanahan '06, and T. S. Clark '08, secured a unanimous decision for the affirmative of the question, Resolved, That intercollegiate football in America is a detriment rather than a benefit.

AT THE RECENT MEETING of the Inter-collegiate Football Rules Committee there was manifested a decided feeling on the part of the members that there should be radical changes in the rules, with a view to opening up the game,—which is gratifying news to all true friends of the great college game. And at the additional meetings of the committee to be held soon it is expected that the work of thoroughly revising the rules will be completed.

APROPOS OF FOOTBALL, The Weekly is authorized to repudiate the "interview" with Captain Dillon of next year's Princeton eleven, which was printed in the Philadelphia newspapers and copied broadcast, and in which the Princeton captain was quoted as desiring a football game next season with the University of Pennsylvania. We happen to know that Captain Dillon was not even present at the meeting in Philadelphia at which the "interview" was alleged to have taken place; he was in Princeton at the time, knew nothing about the meeting, and categorically denies ever having given expression to the sentiments attributed to him in this newspaper fake. For the information of the alumni, we are also authorized to state that there are no negotiations for a football game between University of Pennsylvania and Princeton, and that there is no change in the situation, from what it has been for several years.

ALSO, PRINCETON AND HARVARD have not "broken off relations in baseball," as has been stated in the newspapers. But they are to play two games this year, one at Princeton and one at Cambridge, instead of the one game played in alternate years at each place, as has been the case during the last three or four seasons. Harvard requested the two games; Princeton suggested one or three, to avoid a possible tie. But rather than give up altogether this interesting feature of the baseball season, Princeton has acceded to Harvard's request.

A VERY APPROPRIATE CHRISTMAS GIFT for Princeton men, and a notable addition to Princetoniana, which all collectors will appreciate, is the book on our famous college hymn Old Nassau, which Wilford S. Conrow '01 has just brought out, in a handsome edition-de-luxe,—in no sense a money-making venture, but entirely a labor of love on the part of a young graduate who shares to an unusual degree the reverence and enthusiasm which Princeton men feel for their noble college song, and for the spirit of loyalty to Alma Mater of which it is their best expression.

AFTER MANY MONTHS of painstaking work, Mr. Conrow has succeeded in bringing together in his book a complete history of the song, and being himself an artist and an expert in bookmaking, he has also succeeded in giving to his data a setting which is in itself a beautiful expression of the affection in which Old Nassau is held. The paper, the type, the hand-illuminated box capitals, the illustrations, and the binding are all representative of the best in the bookmaker's art. The size is royal octavo, the cover, limp black suede calf-skin, with title stamped in gold leaf and the arms of the University inlaid in three colors on Japanese vellum. The lining of the cover is of Princeton-orange moiré silk, manufactured especially for this book. The contents include an autobiography by the venerable Karl Langlotz, who composed the music of Old Nassau in 1859, and who is still living, in Trenton. Mr. Langlotz also contributes a new arrangement of the music, and Ernest Trow Carter '88 has added to his several arrangements a new one, which is here published for the first time. Joseph L. Munn '62 contributes a sketch of the early and undergraduate life of Harlan Page Peck '62, author of the words of Old Nassau, also describing the campus life of forty-five years ago, and Dr. Frederic E. Shearer '62 supplements Mr. Munn's sketch with an account of Mr. Peck's life after graduation. The eighteen illustrations include portrait sketches of composer and author, by Mr. Conrow; a replica of the original manuscript of the music of Old Nassau; a map of Princeton in 1859; Nassau Hall in 1860 and in 1905, etc., etc. The edition is limited to five hundred copies, each numbered, and signed by Mr. Langlotz. Any interested alumnus failing to receive one of the circulars describing the book may order it from C. Whitney Darrow '03, Princeton, N. J., the price being $5.00.

A COMPOSER'S EDITION of the several arrangements of Old Nassau is also being published by Mr. Conrow, in edition-de-luxe sheet music form, the arrangements being Mr. Langlotz's "Revised 1905" in facsimile, and Mr. Carter's (a) For Mixed Voices, (b) For Mixed or Male Voices, (c) For Male Voices, (d) Glee Club. The handsome style of the book Old Nassau is followed in the materials for the Composer's Edition, each copy, also, being numbered, and signed by Mr. Langlotz. Price, ninety cents, at same address.

THE ANNUAL BRIC-A-BRAC, just out (see advertisement), the largest number yet published, is dedicated to Dean Andrew F. West '74, whose portrait, with a sketch of his life opposite, forms the frontispiece. Text, advertisements and illustrations make a volume of nearly 500 pages, which is a revelation (even to one who sees it every day) of the tremendous diversity of the life of the modern Princeton campus. There are over three hundred illustrations, impressive of our ever-increasing material equipment, and of the old things and the new things which give type and character to Princeton undergraduates. Alumni will be particularly interested in the several pictures of the new dormitory given by the ten classes '92-'01; the illustrations of the work on Princeton Lake and the accompanying map; the pictures of McCosh Hall and the Graduate House, and of the alumni parade. There is a double-page centre-piece showing the front campus in colors; there are pictures of the athletic teams and of the non-athletic organizations, of the club houses, the senior "horse" parade, etc., etc. The volume is a credit to the Bric-a-Brac board of the Class of '07.

THE DECENNIAL RECORD from which was reprinted in the last issue or The Weekly the article on The College Man in Business, by D. M. F. Weeks '95, was prepared and edited by the '95 Class Secretary, Andrew C. Imbrie of New York, and is a model of what Princeton class books ought to be. It is a handsome volume of over five hundred pages, containing a very complete record of '95's ten years of graduate life, with numerous excellent illustrations, and unusually interesting letters from the members of the class. Mr. Weeks' article is one of several discussions of the professions and vocations of college men; Charles C. Cresson, Jr., of San Antonio, Assistant United States Attorney for the Western District of Texas, writes on Lawyers and Liars; John W. Garrett, Second Secretary of the United States Embassy at Berlin, discusses Uncle Sam's Ambassadors; Paul Griswold Huston, of Cincinnati, author of An Old Fashioned Sugar Camp, tells his classmates about The Simple Life; the Rev. Frederick W. Lewis, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Saginaw, Mich., describes the life and influence of The Village Parson; Captain Courtland Nixon, Second Infantry, U. S. A., writes on The United States Army; Joseph Curtis Sloane, Headmaster of the Lake Forest School, contributes an article on The Schoolmaster; and Dr. W. Douglas Ward of Rochester, N. Y., describes A Doctor's Life.

CHRISTMAS VACATION begins at Princeton next Wednesday afternoon, the 20th, and continues till the morning of Jan. 4th. Jan. 6th is, therefore, the next date of issue of The Weekly.

Princeton Alumni in Current Literature

RECENT books by Princeton alumni received for review by The Weekly include Essays in Application and The Spirit of Christmas, by Prof. Henry van Dyke '73; The Social Secretary, by David Graham Phillips '87; Parisians out of Doors, by F. Berkeley Smith '91; The Conquest of Canaan, by Booth Tarkington '93, and Old Nassau, by Wilford S. Conrow '01.

In his new book Essays in Application, published by Charles Scribner's Sons, Dr. van Dyke has made a wide appeal,—an appeal to all good citizens concerned for the purification of politics, the advancement of education, the improvement of literature, the conserving of religion, the cultivation of high ideals in the every-day affairs of life. He discusses "live issues" with illuminating vigor. To current fallacies in ethics and economics he applies the principles of a sane, practical idealism. The titles of the twelve essays constituting the book indicate the breadth of subject-matter treated,—and incidentally, they illustrate the versatility of this eminent Princetonian: Is the World Growing Better? (Dr. van Dyke thinks it is); Ruling Classes in a Democracy; Publicomania ("... in our own day the disease has developed a new symptom. It is not enough to be pointed out with the forefinger of notoriety: the finger which points must be stained with printer's ink. The craving for publicity is not satisfied with anything but a paragraph in the newspapers;

then it wants a column; and finally it demands a whole page with illustrations. The delusion consists in the idea that a sufficient quantity of this kind of notoriety amounts to fame."); The Heritage of American Ideals ("... not military conquest, but world-wide influence—not colonies in both hemispheres, but friends, admirers, and imitators around the globe—not a flag planted in whatever place the hand of power chooses to plant it, but a flag that, wherever it floats, is the symbol of freedom and equal rights for all. Democracy can never be extended by force. . ."); The Powers That Be ("... the people are responsible for the character of their rulers." "Our greatest peril today is in the decline of domestic morality, discipline and piety." "... the whole spoils system from top to bottom is a flagrant immorality. . . A Boss is simply a boil, an evidence of bad blood in the body politic."); The Flood of Books ("Thomas Carlyle, talking volubly on the virtues of silence, represents a role which is never left out in the drama of literature."); Books, Literature, and the People ("Literature is made up of those writings which translate the inner meanings of nature and life, in language of distinction and charm, touched with the personality of the author, into artistic forms of permanent interest." "The qualities which make a book salable may easily be those which prevent it from belonging to literature."); Christianity and Current Literature; The Church in the City; Property and Theft; The Creative Ideal of Education ("The right ideal of education in a democracy is the creative ideal. It does not seek to adorn men with certain rare accomplishments which shall be the marks of a Brahminical caste. It does not seek to train men for certain practical pursuits with an eye single to their own advantage. It seeks, by a vital culture, to create new men, and new kinds of men, who shall be of ever-increasing worth to the republic and to mankind."); The School of Life.

In his little book The Spirit of Christmas, also published by Scribner's, Dr. van Dyke again expresses with rare beauty the deeper meaning of the yuletide. The Christmas Angel is "a dream-story" of the Incarnation; there is a "little essay" on Christmas-Giving and Christmas-Living, a "short sermon" on Keeping Christmas, and Two Christmas Prayers, one "For the Home," the other "For Lonely Folks." In the Christmas Scribner's Magazine, Dr. van Dyke has a poem entitled The Swarming of the White Bees.

In collaboration with Dr. Hardin Craig, preceptor in English, Dr. van Dyke has edited a series of Little Masterpieces of English Poetry by British and American Authors, which is published by Doubleday, Page & Co.

During the year David Graham Phillips '87 has added three popular novels to his numerous writings,—The Plum Tree, a story of political intrigue, The Deluge, a tale of "high and frenzied finance," and The Social Secretary, a novel dealing with the social life of Washington. This interesting little story, which first appeared serially in The Saturday Evening Post and has since been published in book form by The Bobbs-Merrill Company of Indianapolis, is written as the diary of the heroine, who is the Social Secretary. An attractive and capable member of the Washington "aristocracy," she is obliged by financial reverses to earn her own living. She becomes the Social Secretary of the family of Senator Burke (a western millionaire), who are eager to shine in the "society" of the Capital, but have had no previous experience. The Burkes (especially Mrs. Burke, who would make good anywhere) are a good sort, so their energetic Social Secretary "brings them out" with great success. There is, of course, a love story, which ends happily in the betrothal of the heroine and Mr. Bucyrus Burke, the Senator's son. The book gives a forceful and striking picture of the strenuous life of Washington "society,"—of which it is an entertaining satire.

F. Berkeley Smith '91, the author of The Real Latin Quarter and How Paris Amuses Itself, has written another interesting book about the French people, Parisians out of Doors, with many fine illustrations by the author and other artists, and a water-color frontispiece by Mr. F. Hopkinson Smith, the author's father. The several chapters depict various phases of the life of the amusement-loving Parisians, including a description of the crowds at the Grand Prix at the racetrack at Longchamps, the summer life at Trouville, which Mr. Smith says is like a French Manhattan Beach; the Bohemian life of the artists at Marlotte; the Fete at St. Cloud, a glance at Monte Carlo, etc., with entertaining descriptions of many typical French characters. The book is attractively bound, the publishers being the Funk & Wagnalls Company.

The Conquest of Canaan, the latest novel by Booth Tarkington '93, is the story of Joe Loudon's hard-fought struggle for recognition in Canaan, his native town, where his mischievous pranks, combined with an unfortunate home life, have given him a bad name as a boy. He is obliged to leave Canaan with a cloud over him, so that when he returns several years later (although he has worked his way through law school and made a man of himself) everything is still against him. He begins the practice of law in Canaan and forces his way to the front, against the unanimous opposition of the "respectable" people of the place. His struggle is briefly described in these words by one of the first to believe in him: "If you'd ever whimpered, or give back-talk, or broke out the wrong way, it would of been different. But you never did. I've watched you and I know; and you've just gone your own way alone, with the town against you because you got a bad name as a boy, and once we'd given you that, everything you did or didn't do, we had to give you a blacker one. Now it's time some one stood by you!" His only friend throughout is the heroine, Ariel Tabor, his boyhood playmate. She is a very charming and unusual heroine, and when Joe Loudon finally wins his merited success, everything comes out satisfactorily. Canaan, the scene of the story, is an Indiana town, and the hero is an example of the best type of young American. The Conquest of Canaan is being pretty generally accepted as Tarkington at his best. It is certainly an intensely interesting story of American life.

The Rev. Dr. James M. Ludlow '61, whose story Deborah, with its description of the siege of Jerusalem, attracted wide attention, has just published a new book entitled Sir Raoul, a stirring romance of a knight of the Rhine valley, who, unjustly degraded from knighthood, becomes in turn an outlaw and a Crusader, and finally wins back his knighthood by marvelous deeds.

Prof. George M. Harper '84, of the English department in the University, is now engaged in writing a volume on Saint-Beuve, for The French Men of Letters series, and has just completed for The Outlook, an article on French Fiction of Today.

Prof. Arnold Guyot Cameron '86 has edited a book of Selections from Jean Richepin, for use in colleges and academies, which has just been brought out by Silver, Burdett & Company. Dr. Cameron has also written an elaborate Life of Richelieu, the first installment of which is announced to appear in an early number of Pearson's Magazine.

Prof. Thomas Marc Parrott '88 of the English department, who is at present in Europe on leave, has recently completed at Oxford a work on the Elizabethan dramatists, which will be in press soon. Dr. Parrott is just now in Germany. He expects to return to Princeton for the beginning of the second term.

The Fleming H. Revell Company announces a complete edition of the works of Robert E. Speer '89, including volumes on Missions and Modern History, Young Men Who Overcame, Missionary Principles and Practice, The Principles of Jesus, Christ and Life, Remember Jesus Christ, Missions and Politics in Asia, A Memorial of a True Life, A Young Man's Questions, Studies of the Man Christ Jesus, and Studies of the Man Paul. In the December Intercollegian Mr. Speer writes on Why Send Delegations to Nashville, urging that all American colleges should be represented at the Fifth Student Volunteer Convention at Nashville in 1906.

V. Lansing Collins '92, the Reference Librarian of the University, is editing for the Princeton Historical Association the hitherto unpublished "Narrative of the Ravages of the British and Hessians" in and around Princeton at the time of the battles of Trenton and Princeton. This manuscript has heretofore been ascribed to Thomas Olden of Princeton, but by internal evidence Mr. Collins has discovered that Mr. Olden did not write it, though he has not yet been able to identify the author. The manuscript formerly belonged to Governor Olden, then to the late General W. S. Stryker '58, and was bought by the Library when General Stryker's collections were sold. It contains an account of the battle of Princeton, and was written in April, 1777, the author having been an eye-witness of that memorable conflict.

Mr. Collins expects to have this interesting work ready for publication soon after Christmas. As recently announced in The Weekly, Mr. Collins is also preparing a Life of President Witherspoon, which he hopes to have ready by another year. He will be grateful for any data bearing on Dr. Witherspoon, which may come to the notice of readers of The Weekly.

Owing to the difficulty of finding just the right actor for the hero of Jesse Lynch Williams' ('92) new play, The Stolen Story, Mr. Henry W. Savage, under whose management it is to be produced, announces that there will be some delay in putting the play on. It was intended that The Stolen Story should first be presented during the holidays, at Wallack's, but now Mr. Savage is reserving it as his trump card of the season, till the end of January. Meantime, Mr. Williams has written a novel, dealing with the same subject-matter as this play, thus reversing the usual order of making a play out of a novel. The book is to be published early next spring by the Scribners. The December Bookman prints, along with a full-page portrait of Mr. Williams, several paragraphs concerning another novel on which he has been working, describing, under the title of The Purloined Pages, the following exasperating experience of which Mr. Williams was the victim:

"Fate, said Kipling in 'A Conference of the Powers,' never does things by halves. Only a few months ago we heard of a wild-eyed and irate author who was rushing madly from one London publishing house to another excitedly inquiring if any one knew anything or had heard anything of the whereabouts of his manuscript entitled Lost, Strayed or Stolen. Still more recently Fate's business was to look about for an author to be made the victim of the stealing of a story, and doing the work with unfortunate thoroughness, selected the man who first won general attention by the publication of a yarn entitled The Stolen Story, which along Park Row is still held to be the best tale ever written about the office of an American newspaper.

"Mr. Jesse Lynch Williams's misfortune, however, was not in the matter of The Stolen Story itself, which, by the way, has been dramatised and is, we understand, to be played in New York some time this winter, but concerns the novel upon which he has been working pretty steadily for the past two or three years. This novel was originally called The Real World. Then Mr. Robert Herrick's book came out under that title, and Mr. Williams changed the name of his manuscript to His Share of the World. Early last summer, when near the end of the first draft, Mr. Williams engaged as secretary an Englishman—whose name does not matter, since he has other names in other places—who professed to have been graduated from Oxford. From the very beginning the secretary insisted upon an ethical standard that was positively embarrassing. Whenever in the course of the narrative the hero did or said anything that was in any way too human he would shake his head sadly and remonstrate gently. That might be life, but it was not the ideal. Apart from this over-sensitiveness, however, he proved efficient and enthusiastic. One part of the novel in particular appealed to him. It would in itself, he said, make a remarkably good plot for a shorter story. That he was thoroughly sincere in expressing this opinion became evident when, one day, the manuscript of his favourite chapters disappeared, and likewise the appreciative secretary, with a hundred dollars more than was due him."

Mr. Williams is the author of the leading article in the November Outing, being a description of The Workers of the Great Lakes.

Other books and writings by Princeton men include a volume of essays entitled The Pardoner's Wallet, by the Rev. Dr. Samuel M. Crothers '74, author of The Gentle Reader and a leading contributor to The Atlantic Monthly; The Evolution of the Horse, a volume of lectures delivered by Prof. Henry F. Osborn '77 at the American Museum of Natural History; the two volumes on The Jordan Valley and Petra, by Prof. William Libbey '77 and the Rev. Dr. F. E. Hoskins '83; a work on Psychiatry by Dr. Stewart Paton '86; William Frederick Dix '89 contributes to the elaborate Christmas number of Town and Country, of which he is the enterprising editor, a story called Their First Christmas Together, and a poem entitled Forgotten Girls—The Bachelor's Christmas Reverie; James Barnes '91 has a new novel, Outside the Law; Prof. Jesse Benedict Carter '93 is announced as the author of a volume of essays entitled The Religion of Numa; Prof. Ralph Barton Perry '96, of the Harvard faculty, is the author of a work entitled The Approach to Philosophy, recently published by the Scribners; the Rev. Robert R. Gailey, A. M. '97, contributes to the December Intercollegian an article on Chinese Students in Japan. Mr. Gailey is at present in this country on leave of absence from his work as Secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association of Tientsin, China, where he has officially represented the Princeton undergraduates in the foreign mission field. W. J. Henderson '76 and Prof. W. M. Daniels '88 are announced to continue their interesting criticisms of significant books, the former on music, the latter on economics, in The Atlantic Monthly; Robert Bridges '79 still writes in Collier's his clever review of current fiction; and among the younger Princeton writers who are coming to the fore are Frederick Ridgely Torrence '97, Frederick Walworth Brown '97, Stephen French Whitman '01, Ernest Poole '02, Robert Haven Schauffler '02, Arthur B. Reeve '03, Associate Editor of Public Opinion; C. A. Brooks '05, and K. S. Clark '05.

The Alumni Reunion in Tennessee

By David Fentress '96

WITH about fifty banqueters, mostly Princeton men, gathered around the festive board at the Maxwell House in Nashville, Tenn., on the night of Nov. 28th, a new sphere of Princeton influence and a new Princeton alumni association were created.

The occasion was the first official reunion of Princeton alumni of Tennessee and, as was to be expected, the evening, and for that matter a part of the morning, was filled with good cheer, good fellowship and good smoke. Much spell-binding of good, bad and indifferent sorts was indulged in; but, like true Princeton men, we all took it good-naturedly and with indulgence; even the speakers seeming to enjoy their own efforts.

President Wilson '79, who was somewhere near his native heath, regaled us with modern Princeton—her hopes, ambitions, and accomplishments, and spoke at length on the wonderful tutorial system with its half a hundred additional tutors. One was impressed with the fact that, whether consciously or unconsciously, the modern Princeton undergraduate is fast being made the victim—willing victim though he be—of a system which will, in spite of himself, fill his head with knowledge. The banqueters regretted that the trustees have not seen fit to send out as "exhibit A" at least one of these most worthy tutors. And much talk of tutors beings to recollection that ancient ditty in point,—

"A tooter who tooted a flute
Once tutored two tutors to toot.
Said the two to the tooter
Is it better to toot
Or to tutor two tutors to toot?"

President Wilson's talk on Princeton's educational ideas and her tutorial system was most attentively listened to and enjoyed and vociferously applauded, in spite of the fact that every father present was wondering how in the world he would prevent his son, a modern Princeton graduate, from seeing how ignorant his daddy was.

When one noticed the wide range of classes represented at the banquet, it seemed remarkably like an alumni dinner at Princeton, on a small scale. After the band and representatives of the faculty and Board of Trustees, came the venerable and courtly gentleman John H. Voorhees '41, who spoke most gracefully on "Princeton, Past and Future." It was noted that though he failed to return to his class reunions for fifteen years after his graduation, when he once got the habit, you couldn't stop him. And it should be said in passing that no Princeton alumni banquet can hope to be complete until it has this modern Nestor at its board. The Rev. Dr. Robert H. Nassau '54, M.D., D.D., who has, as appears in the issue of The Alumni Weekly of Dec. 2nd, written so charmingly of Princeton's Commencement of 1904, will be re-rejuvenated, if it ever is his good fortune to meet the courtly and courteous Voorhees of the Class of '41 — the youngest graduate out.

Of the more mature (it's hardly fair to call them "older") alumni, Judge J. E. Richardson '77 of Tennessee spoke interestingly of the "Tennessee Alumni," showing conclusively that while they were not overly possessed of "scads" with which to back modern Princeton development, they had the Princeton spirit "to burn"; that one of the results of Princeton life to those Southerners who went there directly after the civil war was to lose every vestige of sectional feeling. Henry E. Davis '76 of Washington responded to the toast "Princeton Men in Professional Life," at times speaking eloquently, at others facetiously. John D. Davis '72 of St. Louis (Alumni Trustee) addressed himself to the toast "The Alumni Trustees" and showed beyond doubt that the Princeton trustee fills the very important position of being the "sine qua non" to the proper balancing of the Princeton Ledger. Laps G. Walker '76, Editor of the Chattanooga Times, helped stretch 1 a. m. to 2 a. m. by recounting some of the lessons the newspaper man gets from his heart-to-heart talks with the great American public, insisting that the press route was "the only way" to the sanctum sanctorum of the people.

Of the younger alumni, Scott Bullitt '98 of Louisville declaimed in most approved style on "The Young Alumni." The programme did not state that Mr. Bullitt was fresh from the Princeton Theological Seminary, but judging from his most ready references to the books of the old and new dispensations, one could fairly conclude that he had joined the clergy,—or at any rate become a modern advocate of reform.

Col. Finlay '56 of Yale adopted the Princeton colors for the evening and responded most graciously to the toast "Yale," never once referring to the late unpleasantness at New Haven.

It is a suggestion born of the experience of the Tennessee alumni executive committee, that for all Princeton affairs conducted at points distant from Princeton, a committee be appointed to force the representatives of the press to learn once for all that Princeton colors are orange and black, not yellow or old gold and black.

It was also voted at the overflow meeting that Robert E. Annin '80, President of the Orange Alumni Association, be appointed national and international reporter for alumni associations with a salary of $100,000 per,—and that the trustees of Princeton University be called on to pay his salary.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: W. L. Granberry '85, President; Laps G. Walker '76, Vice-President; William L. Talley '03, Secretary; Executive Committee — John E. Richardson '77, Chairman; David Fentress '96, James J. Elliott '96, Duncan McCallum '06.

In addition to those already mentioned, the alumni present included: From Nashville — Dr. A. A. Lyon '59, P. B. Spence '60, B. Kirk Rankin '94, H. Z. Kip '94, Thornwell Jacobs, A.M., '99, J. G. Sims '02; from Chattanooga — W. H. Watkins '00, H. B. Henson '04; from Murfreesboro — Leland Jordan '67, W. M. Richardson '05, M. B. Murfree '05; from Columbia — C. J. Akin '94; from Franklin — H. P. Fowlkes '68; from Lebanon — O. N. Smith, A.M., '01.

The next reunion will be held in Chattanooga in October, 1906.

JOHN LEETE ROGERS '01

John L. Rogers '01 died on Dec. 5th, 1905, at Englewood, N. J., after an illness of a little over four weeks. The funeral services were held on Dec. 7th at New Britain, Conn., where the internment took place. At the time of his death Mr. Rogers was in his twenty-sixth year. His marriage to Miss Florence Hazen Talcott took place on Oct. 14th last. Immediately after his wedding he spent two weeks in the Berkshires, where in some unknown way he contracted typhoid fever. He did not, however, become aware of the nature of his disease until some days after his return to Englewood, where he expected to live, and notwithstanding a splendid constitution and a naturally strong physique he was unable after four weeks of fever to withstand an attack of extraordinary violence, accompanied by hemorrhages, and he died on Dec. 5th at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

John Rogers was the son of Mr. and Mrs. D. O. Rogers of New Britain, Conn., and the brother of D. C. Rogers '99 and D. M. Rogers '03. He entered Princeton in September, 1897, and throughout his course was prominent in undergraduate life, being particularly noted for his splendid business management of various college periodicals. He was Business Manager of the 1901 Bric-a-Brac, and of the Nassau Herald; and upon the establishment of The Princeton Alumni Weekly he was chosen as its first Business Manager. His work in the latter capacity was particularly effective in getting the paper started and bringing it through the trying period of organization. He was a member of the Intercollegiate Debating Committee and actively engaged in the work of the Philadelphian Society. After graduation he was first in the employ of the American Locomotive Company and later associated with the firm of Crawford, Dyer & Cannon, bankers and brokers, in New York City. He was a member of the Class Executive Committee and the Class Reunion Committee since their inception, and since October, 1904, had been Treasurer of the Class Memorial Fund, which he managed with marked success.

For the second time in three months the Class of '01 mourns the loss of one of its strongest and ablest men. John Rogers represented from every standpoint the best that the class possessed. In him were united the qualities of strength and purity, coupled with great natural ability, in a degree and to an extent rarely existing in any one person. His strong principles, high ideals and rugged honesty bespoke his Puritan ancestry and were an ever present factor in his daily life. His love and enthusiasm for his University and his class were unbounded, and the labor he performed in countless ways on behalf of each can never be wholly reckoned. He never missed a class reunion and frequently sacrificed other personal interests in order to attend, even though the greater part of his time on such occasions was taken up by labor of one kind or another on behalf of the class. His faithfulness and reliability rendered him constantly in demand for service of every character, and each task was invariably performed with an ability and thoroughness which left nothing to be desired. The class mourns him as one of its picked men whom it has delighted to regard as representative and whom, least of all, it could afford to lose. It shares deeply the grief of his wife and family and extends to them

COLLIER'S EXPOSÉ OF THE PATENT MEDICINE FRAUD

Death's Laboratory (A CARTOON)

"Patent medicines are poisoning people throughout America to-day. Babies who cry are fed laudanum under the name of syrup. Women are led to injure themselves for life by reading in the papers about the meaning of backache. Young men and boys are robbed and contaminated by vicious criminals who lure them to their dens through seductive advertisements."

Criminal Alliance of the Newspapers with Fraud and Poison

"Newspapers have done so much to create the success of 'fakes' in medicine that their duty is clearly to help remove them. It sounds high-minded for Journalism to bark ferociously against the reign of graft in politics or in high finance, but it can practice a little real reform, if it chooses, by canceling some of the most profitable results of its own limberness of conscience."

The Great American Fraud

"Gullible America will spend this year some seventy-five millions of dollars in the purchase of patent medicines. It will swallow huge quantities of alcohol, an appalling amount of opiates and narcotics, a wide assortment of varied drugs, ranging from powerful and dangerous heart depressants to insidious liver stimulants; and, far in excess of all other ingredients, undiluted fraud."

Peruna and the Bracers

"So well recognized is the use of Peruna for its alcoholic effects that a number of Southern papers advertise a cure for the 'Peruna habit.' What makes Peruna profitable to the maker and a curse to the community at large, is the fact that the minimum dose first ceases to satisfy; then the moderate dose, and finally the maximum dose; and the unsuspecting patron, who began with it as a medicine, goes on to use it as a beverage, and finally to be enslaved by it as a habit."

Conspiracy Against the Freedom of the Press

"So it was no mean intellect which devised the scheme whereby every newspaper in America is made an active lobbyist for the Patent Medicine Association. The man who did it is the present president of the organization; its executive head in the work of suppressing public knowledge, stifling public opinion, and warding off public legislation."

Liquozone

"Liquozone is sulphurous and sulphuric acids (corrosive poisons) heavily diluted; that is all. Will the compound destroy germs in the body? A series of tests conducted by the Lederle Laboratories answers the question in this summary: 'To summarize, we would say that Liquozone had no curative effect, but did, when given in pure form, lower the resistance of the animals so that they died a little earlier than those not treated.'"

The Subtle Poisons

"Nostrums there are, which reach the thinking classes as well as the readily gulled. Depending as they do for their success upon the lure of some subtle drug concealed under a trade-mark name, or some opiate not readily obtainable under its own label, these are the most dangerous of all quack medicines, not only in their immediate effect, but because they create enslaving appetites, sometimes obscure and difficult of treatment; most often, tragically obvious. Of these concealed drugs, the headache powders are the most widely used."

Essays in Application

Such keen social satire as "Publicomania"; such vigorous doctrine of citizenship responsibilities as "The Powers that Be"; such sane economic reasoning as "Property and Theft"; such noble expositions of the business of living as "The School of Life", are all virile voices to the times accurately keyed to counteract current failures and fallacies.

The Spirit of Christmas

Dr. van Dyke has perhaps more perfectly expressed the true spirit of Christmas than any other writer of today, and this little book holds his most loving and beautiful expression of that spirit in story and essay. It contains "Christmas Giving and Christmas Living," "The Christmas Angel," "Keeping Christmas" and two "Christmas Prayers".

SATURDAY, JANUARY 6, 1906

NO. 13

CHRISTMAS vacation closed on Thursday, January 4th, the regular exercises of the University beginning at ten a. m. of that day. During the vacation an unusually large number of the Princeton faculty participated in the holiday meetings of the educational associations, of which further mention will be made here next week.

THE ALTERATIONS in the first floor of University Hall, to provide for the reception of the freshman eating clubs, have been pushed to completion during the holidays, under the supervision of Curator Bunn. This good work has been done in carrying out the latest plan for giving the freshmen better food at a reasonable price, and for improving the conditions generally of the freshman clubs. The experiment of the freshman commons started a couple of years ago having been abandoned, a committee of upperclassmen, in coöperation with the University authorities, worked out another plan. This provided for giving to each of the leading freshman clubs a separate dining-room and a separate club-room, on condition that the clubs pledge themselves to support the enterprize. Six of the clubs have done this, assuring their aggregate membership of about 180 for the tables of the Freshman Dining Halls. Accordingly, at the December meeting of the Board of Trustees, $4,000 was appropriated for the necessary alterations in University Hall. These alterations have now been made, and at the opening of college the freshman clubs took possession of their newly furnished club-rooms. The old lecture-room in University Hall has been divided into six dining-rooms, one for each club,—they are large, light, and well ventilated, finished in buff and white, with round tables for groups, and everything shipshape and cheerful. The six club-rooms, four in the former quarters of the Nassau Club and two at the University Place entrance, are tastefully finished, with weathered oak furniture, large divans, rugs, etc. Old graduates would call them luxurious. They are certainly comfortable, and there ought to be no kick coming from the freshmen for whom all this provision is made.

AS A STARTER each freshman pays $5.75 a week, and each club retains its managers. Later it will doubtless be found practicable to reduce the price. But the first consideration is to give the freshmen good food, properly served, under healthful and comfortable conditions. The University charges them no rent for the building, and nothing for the equipment of their dining- and club-rooms. So that most of their money is spent on the table. A competent caterer, on a salary, is in charge, the kitchen being in the basement, where the meals are prepared for the six clubs. The committee of upperclassmen, who have pledged themselves "to maintain a high standard in the management and operation of the Freshman Dining Halls," is composed of Coleman P. Brown '06, chairman; L. D. Froelick '06, O. H. Perry, Jr., '06, Francis M. Brooke '06, Dumont Clarke, Jr., '05, Samuel J. Reid, Jr., '06, O. De G. Vanderbilt, Jr., '06, N. B. Tooker '06, D. F. Macpherson '06, and J. L. Cooney '07.

BY ACTION OF OUR FACULTY COMMITTEE on out-door sports, in consultation with President Wilson, Princeton is now committed to the following three propositions as the principal changes needed for the proper reformation of football:

First—That all interference be abolished.

Second—That all coaching by men who are paid in any way, directly or indirectly, or who receive their expenses, or any part of them, be done away with.

Third—That the number of intercollegiate contests be much decreased and the length of the season for such contests correspondingly shortened.

The object of the first suggestion—the abolition of interference—is to do away with mass plays and to restore the original open game,—an object which its adoption would undoubtedly accomplish, for interference is the very essence of mass play. The second suggestion—the abolition of paid coaching—is designed to place the game on a purely amateur footing, and to restore to the players themselves the initiative of which in recent years they have been deprived,—one of the reforms most needed in football. The third proposition, to shorten the playing season for intercollegiate contests, aims to decrease the amount of time and energy now required of the players. The football season need not necessarily be shortened; for the preliminary practice there could be a schedule of interclass or interclub games, or both; but limit the games played with other colleges to say half the present number. Certainly some such change is needed for the relief of the overworked players, and to cut out the absurdly solemn strenuousness of the fall term and get back to normal conditions in the life of the campus.

ON ALL SUITABLE OCCASIONS the Princeton faculty committee on out-door sports will urge these suggestions. It has instructed John B. Fine '82, who has been formally appointed Princeton's official representative on the football rules committee, to advocate the abolition of interference at the meetings of the latter committee, the other proposals not being considered as coming within the jurisdiction of the committee on rules, as now constituted.

AT A MEETING of the football rules committee in Philadelphia during the holidays, a cordial reception was given, informally, to a committee appointed by the conference on football reform, called by Chancellor McCracken of New York University. The visiting delegates proposed the amalgamation of the two committees into a national board for the control of football, but the older committeemen were unable to act upon this proposal until they had reported back to the institutions they represent, and obtained instructions. Another meeting is to be held next week, in New York, after which, doubtless, the atmosphere will begin to clear, and the football legislators, whether as a national committee or simply representing their respective institutions, will get down to the business of reforming the rules.

PRINCETON'S VICTORY in the annual debate with Harvard, at Cambridge on Dec. 16th,—brief mention of which was made in the last number of The Weekly, which was in press when the good news arrived,—made it two straight and four out of the last five in Princeton's favor, though before that Harvard had an unbroken record of seven victories, so that the record for the whole series is now Harvard 8, Princeton 4. The Princeton committee had chosen to argue for the affirmative of the question (proposed by Harvard), "Resolved, that intercollegiate football in America is a detriment rather than a benefit," and the Princeton team, composed of K. M. McEwen '06, P. McClanahan '06, and T. S. Clark '08, presented their arguments with such clearness and spirit that they obtained a unanimous decision over their Harvard opponents, A. Fox, 3L.; W. M. Shohl, 3L., and G. J. Hirsch '07, two of whom, it will be noted, are third-year law students. The judges were the Hon. John T. Blodgett, a graduate of Brown University and Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of Rhode Island, the Hon. John McLane, Governor of New Hampshire, and Mr. Robert A. Wood, a graduate of Amherst College and a prominent lecturer of Boston.

THE PRINCETON TEAM based its argument chiefly upon three points: That the game of football fails as a means of physical exercise because its extensive requirements absolutely prohibit the majority; that to those engaged it is a detriment physically and mentally; that its nature is such as to lead easily to foul play. Harvard contended that football is a benefit because of its excellence as an outlet for undergraduate surplus energy, thus eliminating many vices and abuses in college life, and that it is beneficial as a developer of individual efficiency and executive ability, and as a fosterer of a spirit of loyalty to an ideal. The Harvard debaters displayed superior form in speaking, but the Princeton team made good with convincing arguments.

THE ENERGETIC Princeton Alumni Association of the Oranges announces a prize of $25.00 for the best popular article on Undergraduate Life at Princeton, the competition being open to all Princeton undergraduates. Manuscripts are to be sent to Francis Speir, Jr., '77, South Orange, N. J., by Jan. 20th. The conditions of the contest are as follows: First, the article to cover undergraduate life in two sections—(a) freshman and sophomore years; (b) the upperclassmen. Second, length not to exceed 2500 words per section, or 5000 words in all. Third, articles not to be signed, but with each shall be the name and address of the writer in a sealed envelope, which will not be opened until the winner has been chosen. The award will be made by a committee appointed by the Alumni Association of the Oranges. We trust that a large number of undergraduates will enter this interesting contest.

THE BEN GREET PLAYERS are to present Macbeth in Alexander Hall on Monday evening, Jan. 8th; and the first concert of the season by the New York Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Walter Damrosch, conductor, is announced for next Friday evening, Jan. 12th, in Alexander Hall.

President Wilson's Annual Report

BELOW is given our first instalment of President Wilson's Annual Report to the Board of Trustees, which was submitted at the last meeting of the board, on Dec. 14th:

The most noticeable and noteworthy changes in the University since my last report are to be found in the personnel of the Faculty. Four members of the Faculty who had become our familiar friends have retired from it, and fifty-three new members have been added to it.

Professor William Alfred Packard, Professor Charles Augustus Young, Professor Charles Greene Rockwood and Professor Arthur Lincoln Frothingham have retired from active work as teachers.

Dr. Packard was appointed Professor of the Latin Language and Literature and of the Science of Language in 1870, at the age of forty, and now, at the age of seventy-five, unimpaired in faculty, lays down his work after thirty-five years' association with the University, not because his health is broken, but because it has become necessary carefully to conserve it. I had the pleasure of being one of Dr. Packard's pupils and feel that I can speak with personal knowledge of the deep and abiding impression he made as a teacher, the impression of exquisite refinement, of precise scholarship, united with discriminating taste and a quick literary feeling. His influence as a scholar and a gentleman has touched generation after generation of undergraduates in subtle ways of which he has probably himself been unaware, and he has a right to look back with pride upon a life in which he has, with a distinction all his own, maintained the scholarly traditions of a singularly accomplished family.

Professor Packard continues to live with us; Professor Young has, to our great loss, removed to his old family home at Hanover, N. H. His contributions to scientific knowledge all the world is cognizant of, but only those who were privileged to be his associates can know the loss of stimulation that came with his departure from among us. Professor Young was appointed to the chair of Astronomy in 1877, when in his forty-third year, and had given to the University, when he retired last June, twenty-eight of the best years of his life. And certainly no years of service as a teacher have ever yielded a finer fruitage. It was hard to determine which most to admire in Professor Young, his achievements or his modesty. He has ever been a true man of science, approaching the great secrets of Nature with the simplicity, the eagerness, and the piety of a child, and using great powers without thought of self. Both his achievement as an investigator and his nobility as a man will long serve us as an inspiration and an example.

Professor Rockwood was appointed Associate Professor of Pure and Applied Mathematics in 1877, and Professor of Mathematics the following year, so that his term of service has been exactly coincident with that of Professor Young. Professor Rockwood is, however, nine years Professor Young's junior, and leaves us to enjoy a well-earned leisure and opportunity of travel, while still in the midst of years of full vigor. The University owes him a debt of grateful appreciation for services rendered, not only through many years of uninterrupted labor, but also with singular unselfishness and devotion.

Professor Frothingham leaves us, after nineteen years' service in the Faculty, to devote himself, at the maturity of his powers, to free investigation in the field of Archæology in connection with which his name has become so widely and so favorably known. His equipment for the work to which he has devoted himself is most unusual and complete, being quickened by both learning and enthusiasm; and we sincerely felicitate him upon his opportunity to push his inquiries forward with the entire freedom afforded him by a release from exacting academic engagements.

On the 13th of February, 1905, our true friend and one-time colleague, William Cowper Prime, was taken away by death. The influence of his enlightened life, enriched by the interests of the versatile scholar and the liberal man of letters, was at one time very directly felt here in Princeton in the development of our instruction in Art and Archaeology, and we had for some time the privilege of retaining his name upon our Faculty list as Professor of the History of Art. His death removes a notable figure and leaves us to mourn an influential friend.

The new appointments of the year have been very numerous and have introduced into our Faculty an infusion of fresh strength which must permanently distinguish the present academic year as a notable turning point in the development of the University.

Mr. James Hopwood Jeans, Master of Arts of Trinity College, Cambridge (1902), comes to us this year as Professor of Applied Mathematics, fresh from the associations and the unusual training of that distinguished school of mathematicians and physicists which has persisted for so many generations at Cambridge and which has maintained with such handsome usury the spiritual inheritance directly transmitted to it from Sir Isaac Newton. Mr. Jeans was elected Fellow of Trinity College in 1901, and in 1904 was appointed University Lecturer.

Dr. Charles Henry Smyth, a member of the Faculty of Hamilton College since 1891, comes to us as Professor of Geology. His academic training he received from the School of Mines of Columbia University, from which University he received the degree of Bachelor of Philosophy in 1888 and the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in 1890. During the year 1900-01 he studied at the University of Heidelberg. He has been connected with the geological survey work both of the Federal Government and of the government of the State of New York and has won an enviable reputation as an authority upon physical and petrographical Geology.

Mr. Howard Crosby Butler, since 1895 lecturer on Architecture, is this year advanced to the rank of Professor of Art and Archaeology, an advance which he has earned not only by unusual success as a teacher and by very solid attainments as a scholar, but also by the remarkable success of the archaeological explorations in Syria, of 1899-1900 and 1904-05, which he directed with such distinguished ability. Mr. Butler, after graduating from Princeton in 1892, was twice Fellow in Archaeology here and pursued advanced studies in the school of Archaeology in Columbia University, the American School of Classical Studies at Rome, and the American School of Classical Studies at Athens.

Dr. George Augustus Hulett, whom we welcome back to Princeton as Assistant Professor of Physical Chemistry, was graduated Bachelor of Arts here in 1892 in the same class with Mr. Butler and served the University as Assistant in Chemistry during the four years which followed his graduation. Since leaving Princeton in 1896 he has taken the degree of Doctor of Philosophy, after two years of study, at the University of Leipzig (1898) and has served the University of Michigan for five years most acceptably, first as Instructor in Chemistry and then as Assistant Professor of Physical Chemistry. By his researches he has established a reputation, which bids fair to grow with the facilities afforded him for investigation, as an investigator and elucidator of those chemico-physical problems which are now drawing physicists and chemists together into the same laboratories.

Dr. William Foster, promoted from the rank of Assistant in Chemistry to that of Assistant Professor, was graduated Bachelor of Arts from Hartford College, Kentucky, in 1892; was a special student in science at Vanderbilt University during the year 1892-93; and from 1893 to 1895 was Instructor in Science and Mathematics at his Alma Mater. He became a graduate student at Princeton in 1895 and received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy from the University in 1899; having meanwhile, from 1896 to 1898, been Assistant in Chemistry. During the year 1899-1900 he served as Professor of Chemistry at the Central University of Kentucky. In 1900 he returned to Princeton as Instructor, and has served in that capacity, with constant and increasing efficiency, for five years.

Mr. Lucius Hopkins Miller, who becomes Assistant Professor of Biblical Instruction, was graduated Bachelor of Arts from Princeton in 1897, Master of Arts in 1899. He was for the two years following his graduation General Secretary of the Philadelphian Society, serving with singular efficiency and helpfulness. From 1899 to 1902 he taught in the Syrian Protestant College, at Beyrut, Syria, first as Instructor in English and the Bible, and afterwards as Instructor in Bible and Assistant Principal of the Preparatory Department. In 1902 he returned to this country and entered Union Theological Seminary, where he remained until called to Princeton. From 1903 to 1905, in connection with his studies in New York, he acted as Instructor in Biblical History and Director of Religious Work at the Hill School at Pottstown, Pennsylvania.

Dr. Hamilton Ford Allen, who takes Professor Jesse Benedict Carter's place for the year, was graduated Bachelor of Arts from Williams College in 1888; taught Latin and Greek in Allen Academy, Chicago, from 1888 to 1892; and pursued advanced studies in Classics at the University of Berlin from 1892 to 1894. In 1897 he was graduated from the McCormick Theological Seminary, and during the two following years studied at the University of Chicago, during the first year as Orme Smith Fellow from McCormick Seminary and during the second as Fellow in Biblical and Patristic Greek by appointment from the University of Chicago itself. He spent the summer of 1899 as a student at the University of Leipzig and the winter of 1899-1900 in the American School of Classical Studies at Athens, paying particular attention to modern Greek. Two years, 1900-02, he again spent as Fellow at the University of Chicago. Since 1902 he has been Professor of Latin at Washington and Jefferson College.

We found it necessary last year, in view of the contemplated changes in our methods of instruction, to create a new title, that of Preceptor, carrying with it the rank of Assistant Professor; and forty-seven Preceptors have been appointed,—gentlemen who constitute in every way a most notable addition to our Faculty and who have entered into their work here with an intelligence and enthusiasm wholly delightful.

Dr. Wilson then gives a brief statement of the academic record of each of the preceptors. Altogether, there are 109 degrees and thirty-six institutions of learning represented by the forty-seven preceptors, nineteen of the degrees being from Princeton, sixteen from Harvard, eight from Yale, seven from University of Chicago, six each from Johns Hopkins and University of Michigan, five from Columbia, four from Cornell, two each from Williams, Brown, Halle, University of Pennsylvania, University of Texas, Dartmouth, Vanderbilt, University of North Carolina, University of Virginia, and Luther College, and one each from the Universities of Vermont, California, Iowa, Wisconsin, Heidelberg, Oxford, Leipzig, and Toronto; and Iowa State, Colby, Hampden-Sydney, Denison, Dalhousie, Centre, Hamilton, Bowdoin and Gettysburg Colleges. Thirty-three of the preceptors have the doctor's degree, twenty-six the master's degree. The President's Report will be continued in the next number of The Weekly.

H O C K E Y

- Jan. 6 Princeton vs. Columbia.
- 10 Princeton vs. Brown.
- 13 Harvard vs. Columbia.
- 17 Yale vs. Brown.
- 20 Princeton vs. Harvard.
- 27 Yale vs. Columbia.
- Feb. 3 Columbia vs. Brown.
- 10 Harvard vs. Brown.
- 10 Princeton vs. Yale.

R. H. Leake '05, captain of last year's Princeton team and now a member of the St. Nicholas Club team, is President of the League this year, and Mr. B. Prentice of Harvard is Secretary and Treasurer.

In addition to the Intercollegiate League games, Princeton has one match each with Williams College at Williamstown, Mass., on Feb. 8th, and the Albany Hockey Team at Albany on Feb. 9th. The Crescent Athletic Club beat Princeton 10-1 at St. Nicholas Park, New York, on Dec. 12th, and the New York Athletic Club beat Princeton 5-2, at St. Nicholas Park, on Jan. 3rd. During the holidays Princeton played three games with the Quaker City Hockey Team at Norfolk, Va., on Dec. 28th, 29th, and 30th, the Quaker City team taking the first game, 7-6, and Princeton winning the other two, 4-3, and 5-0.

It was expected that Princeton Lake would be completed in time to provide a fine place for the hockey team to practice this winter, but the meadows have not yet been flooded, and the hockey practice has been held at Stony Brook as usual (when there is ice—otherwise in the Casino).

S. STANHOPE ORRIS '62

Dr. S. Stanhope Orris '62, Emeritus Professor of Greek Language and Literature, died of paralysis at Harrisburg, Pa., on Dec. 17th. In 1902, upon his retirement from active work in the University, Prof. Orris started upon a tour around the world, and while in China he suffered a stroke of paralysis from which he never fully recovered. For the past three years he had been an invalid. Prof. Orris was born at Icksburgh, Pa., Feb. 19th, 1838. He was graduated from Princeton in 1862, with the honor of the Classical Oration, and from the Princeton Theological Seminary in 1865. He spent one year as tutor in the college and in May, 1866, after being ordained to the ministry by the Presbytery of Huntington, Pa., he became the pastor of the Spruce Creek, Pa., Presbyterian Church. In 1869 he spent a year in post-graduate study in Germany, and upon his return to this country he was for three years the stated supply of the Mission Chapel of the Collegiate Reformed Church of New York City. In 1873 Dr. Orris was elected Professor of Greek in Marietta College, Ohio, and in 1877 he came to Princeton as Associate Professor of Greek Language and Literature and Instructor in Greek Philosophy, being advanced to a full professorship the following year. Prof. Orris received the degree of Ph.D. from Princeton in 1875 and the degree of L.H.D. from Lafayette College in 1889. The following tribute is from Prof. George L. Raymond's address at the funeral of Dr. Orris, on Dec. 21st: "Not anywhere in published books, at least, could there be found so profound a study, and so valuable an analysis and grouping together of all the theories of Plato, and of some of those of Aristotle, as Professor Orris was accustomed to give to his classes. He had studied these works with the thoroughness which characterized his examination of every subject to which he devoted himself. It must not be supposed, however, that for them he had neglected other departments of Greek literature. I doubt if there was anything in classic Greek with which he was not reasonably familiar. I know that at one time—taking several years for it—he read through all the volumes of the Greek Christian fathers that he could find in the Theological Library; and modern Greek, I have been told by those who had travelled with him, he could talk like a native."

WHO'S WHO IN MYTHOLOGY?

Embarrassing, isn't it, when we run across the name of some god or goddess, in the daily paper, or in a poem, not to know? Or perhaps one just fails to enjoy perfectly a beautiful painting or engraving or piece of statuary, because ignorant of the myth implied.

We publish a convenient little book that gives the name of every god or goddess, or hero whose name is ever likely to be broached, with quite enough description to enable one to connect with the story—just enough to rescue one from seeming so distressingly ignorant, as if one had never even heard of Pallas, or Aphrodite, or Thalia, or Ariadne.

The title of this little book is,

Essays in Application

Such keen social satire as "Publicomania"; such vigorous doctrine of citizenship responsibilities as "The Powers that Be"; such sane economic reasoning as "Property and Theft"; such noble expositions of the business of living as "The School of Life", are all virile voices to the times accurately keyed to counteract current failures and fallacies.

THROUGH the courtesy of Wilford S. Conrow '01, The Weekly takes pleasure in presenting to its readers with this issue the autobiography of Karl Langlotz and a portrait of the venerable composer of Old Nassau, both being from the recent book in which Mr. Conrow has preserved in permanent and beautiful form the history of our noble college hymn. The faithful portrait of the composer, which forms the frontispiece of his book, is drawn by Mr. Conrow himself, as is the portrait of the late Harlan Page Peck '62, the author of the words of Old Nassau, which accompanies sketches of Mr. Peck's life by his classmates Joseph L. Munn and Dr. Frederic E. Shearer. The life of Karl Langlotz, written by himself with such charming simplicity and humor, his comments on the Princeton of half a century ago, so illuminative of a period in the annals of the college little known to most of its graduates now living, particularly his recountal of the circumstances of the composing of Old Nassau,—the "peaceful pipe" interrupted by "the energetic Stitt," the off-hand writing of "the music then and there, with Stitt standing guard over me," the "thinking I would never hear of it again," and the modest mention that as a matter of fact the composer never did hear his most famous composition "until long years afterwards,"—all this unaffected record comes as a new appeal to the affections of Princeton alumni who sing his song today with such reverence of spirit.

PRESIDENT WILSON '79 LEFT PRINCETON on Tuesday the 16th, to lecture on Americanism before the Lyceum of Charleston, South Carolina, on the 18th, and to spend a couple of days with the Princeton alumni in that section. He expects to return to Princeton this Saturday night. Dr. Wilson was one of the speakers at the service held by Columbia University on January 14th, in memory of the late President Harper of the University of Chicago.

THE ENROLLMENT BLANKS for this year's Alumni Trustee election will be mailed next week from the office of the Secretary of the Alumni, Charles W. McAlpin '88, to all Princeton graduates eligible to vote in this election. One Alumni Trustee is to be chosen this year, to succeed Alexander Van Rensselaer '71 of Philadelphia, whose term expires next June. Any graduate of ten years' standing is eligible to this nomination, and all graduates of three years' standing who have paid the enrollment fee of one dollar are eligible to nominate and vote for Alumni Trustee. The Class of '03 thus qualifies to participate in the election for the first time this year, bringing the number of eligible voters up to about five thousand. The enrollment fee is required of those only who have not heretofore paid it; once having paid the fee, a voter is qualified to participate in all subsequent elections, the only restriction being that he shall not fail to exercise his privilege of nominating or voting for a period of five years. In case of such neglect, he is required to pay the fee again, in order to get his name on the eligible list. The nominations close on April 1st, after which the Secretary of the Alumni will send out the official ballot.

THE AMALGAMATION of the old Intercollegiate Football Rules Committee and the New York Conference Committee, forming the American Intercollegiate Football Rules Committee, with fourteen members fairly representative of the country east of the Rocky Mountains, has finally opened the way to the transaction of the main business for which these committees were appointed,—the revision of the football playing rules. And the adoption of the provision that any measure before the new committee may be carried by eight affirmative votes—a majority, instead of the unanimous-consent understanding of the old committee—ought to insure satisfactory results from the pending legislation on the rules. The new committee is constituted as follows: Prof. L. C. Dennis, Cornell, Chairman; W. T. Reid, Jr., Harvard, Secretary; Walter Camp, Yale, Editor of the Rules; J. B. Fine '82, Princeton; John C. Bell, University of Pennsylvania; Paul Dashiell, Annapolis; A. A. Stagg, Chicago University; E. W. Hall, Dartmouth; Lieut. C. D. Daly, West Point; Prof. J. A. Babbitt, Haverford; C. W. Savage, Oberlin; Prof. F. H. Curtis, University of Texas; H. L. Williams, University of Minnesota; J. T. Lees, University of Nebraska. Four sub-committees, one on rough play, one on a central board of officials, one on opening the game, and one on a field laboratory for testing the results of changes in the rules, have been appointed, Mr. Fine being a member of the last. It is expected that these sub-committees will report at the next meeting of the general committee, to be held in New York on Jan. 27th.

AT HARVARD it seems improbable that there will be intercollegiate football next fall,—though he would be a rash prophet who would attempt to predict what a day may bring forth at our largest American university. Following the action of Columbia, the Harvard Board of Overseers have forbidden their students to play intercollegiate football until the rules shall have been revised to the satisfaction of that board; the Harvard Athletic Committee has resolved that intercollegiate football ought to be continued, but only under radically different conditions; the Athletic Association of Harvard Graduates has put forth a statement in substantial accord with the faculty committee's resolution; President Eliot is for stopping the game for at least one year, and The Harvard Bulletin ventures the guess that Harvard will "not next year play any team representing another college." So there you are. Meantime, Mr. Reid continues Harvard's representative on the new intercollegiate football rules committee, as he was on the old committee, although the game as an intercollegiate sport has been officially abolished at Harvard, and the Harvard Overseers declare in their report, drawn before Mr. Reid's resignation from the old committee, that "no man now a member of the so-called Intercollegiate Rules Committee should have a hand in" revising the rules.

IN THE PARDONER'S WALLET, Dr. Samuel M. Crothers '74, author of The Endless Life, The Gentle Reader, Miss Muffet's Christmas Party, etc., (all published by Houghton, Mifflin & Co.) has added to his growing reputation as a leading American essayist, and a kindly philosopher on practical things of every-day life. In his latest book a modern Pardonier, assuming the rôle of a mediæval indulgence-seller, appears in all the essays and makes allowance for "aspects of human nature which, while open to friendly criticism, are excusable." The common sense of these essays, their humor, and the unexpected and original point of view of the author, combine to make the book interesting and profitable reading. "Something ought to be done," declares the Pardonier, "for the peace of mind of the quiet, respectable, good people who bear the heat and burden of the day. . . . If anything goes wrong they are sure to hear about it, for they listen to sermons, and read the newspapers, and attend meetings. No reformer can be truly eloquent who does not point his finger at his hearer, and say, 'Thou art the man!' Now, unfortunately, the real delinquents are usually absent." And college men, particularly, will appreciate the gentle humor of the following introduction to one of the essays:

"The exercises of Commencement Day had been unusually interesting, though prolonged. I had attended them all. I had listened to the wisdom of the selected members of the graduating class, and afterwards to the less dignified but more optimistic remarks of the old graduates. The general impression that I received was that though the country had been in danger, the worst was over." (Dr. Crothers lives in Cambridge, Mass., and is this year's incumbent of The George Goldthwait Angeroll Lectureship in Harvard University.) There are eleven essays in the book, the subjects being The Pardonier, Unseasonable Virtues, An Hour with our Prejudices, How to Know the Fallacies, The Difficulties of the Peacemakers, The Land of the Large and Charitable Air, A Community of Humorists, A Saint Recanonized, As He Sees Himself, A Man Under Enchantment, and The Cruelty of Good People.

AMONG RECENT CONTRIBUTIONS to current literature by Princeton men are, The Telling of a Dream, a poem by Prof. Henry van Dyke '73 in the January Harper's Magazine; a story, De Profundis, by Van Tassel Sutphen '82, in the January Harper's; an article by Prof. G. M. Harper '84 on French Fiction of Today, in a recent number of Outlook; two articles in the December Indoors and Out, one by Prof. H. C. Butler '92, on Princeton, a Typical American University Town, and its Beautiful Architecture, and the other by Mr. John Rogers Williams of the University Secretary's office, on The Clubhouses of a Great University; and a story, The Ichi-ban Mascot, by Stephen French Whitman '01, in Collier's Weekly for Jan. 13th,—the third in a series by Mr. Whitman, recording "the strange adventures of Shorty and Patrick, blue-jackets of the U. S. S. 'Oklahoma.'" Edwin H. Kellogg '02, who is now in his senior year at Princeton Theological Seminary, has edited, in collaboration with his mother, a volume entitled The Past a Prophecy of the Future, being a collection of twenty-five sermons by his father, the late Dr. S. H. Kellogg '61. The book has been very favorably reviewed in America, in England, where it is published, and in India, where Dr. Kellogg was for many years a successful missionary.

THE UNIVERSITY PREACHERS announced for the second term are: Feb. 4th, Prof. M. W. Jacobus '77, of Hartford Theological Seminary; Feb. 11th, Prof. Paul van Dyke '81; Feb. 18th, the Rev. Dr.

William R. Richards, of New York; Feb. 25th, Prof. Henry van Dyke '73; March 4th, President James G. K. McClure, of McCormick Theological Seminary, Chicago; March 11th, President Patton; March 18th, the Rev. Dr. F. C. Dewhurst; March 25th, the Rev. Dr. J. ## The Autobiography of Karl Langlotz

THE LIFE OF THE COMPOSER OF PRINCETON'S FAVORITE SONG, WITH THE CIRCUMSTANCES OF ITS COMPOSITION. REPRINTED FROM THE BOOK ON OLD NASSAU, BY PERMISSION OF THE EDITOR, WILFORD S. CONROW '01

WITH considerable hesitancy I attempt to give a correct account of my life. I am able to remember certain experiences, but having never kept a diary, I cannot always vouch for accuracy as to dates. Therefore I beg that my readers will be lenient toward my attempt, remembering that I must go back seventy years.

My father was a musician at the Court of Saxe-Meiningen and teacher of the piano to the Duke, who was then Crown Prince. There were four daughters in my father's family when I was born on June 20, 1834. Being the first boy, great things were expected of me. I do not know, but imagine, that my father decided to make a musician of me upon first hearing the brilliance of my vocal powers. Having only four sisters for my playmates, it was natural that I should fall in with their games and amusements, such as playing with dolls and sewing. Seeing this, my father became very much disturbed, and decided to take a boy into the house, so that I might learn boys' ways. In that

I showed sufficient aptness. I remember distinctly that on breaking one of our neighbors' windows I was not punished, but was given a great ovation. Dolls were dropped. And soon my companion and I were introduced into school life.

From that time on I was taught the piano by my father, and the violin at first by Professor Mähr, and later by Professor Sulot. In due time I entered the Gymnasium Bernhardinum, where I stayed until I was eighteen. At that time my oldest sister, who had come to America to live, and was giving splendid accounts of the life there, advised me to leave the Gymnasium, devote my entire time to music, and join her in that country. At that early period, when the intercourse between the United States and Germany was in its infancy, the most absurd reports about the former were spread about, and believed implicitly by the older Germans. Therefore my father was strongly opposed to my going. But at last with many misgivings, he gave his consent.

About 1851 I was sent to Weimar

where Liszt was Capellmeister, and Joachim, Concertmeister; and under these two I gained my ideas of music. I had the privilege of playing in the orchestra, when Wagner himself conducted, in the first production of "Lohengrin," which was given at Weimar. When I was thought sufficiently trained, the question of my going to America came up again. I was then nineteen years of age, and hence only one year before conscription would claim me. I applied to the police for a passport to make a journey to America to visit my sister, but was told it would be impossible for me to make the trip there, and back, in the year. Then I asked for a passport to Hamburg, and it was given me. So, accompanied by my father, I left home for that place. Hamburg being a free city, my home police could not prevent my going on board ship. My father's parting advice was, to be very careful when I landed about going out in the evening; to be sure to walk in the middle of the streets, as the sidewalks were not safe on account of the many trap doors which might give way at any moment, and engulf an innocent stranger in a cellar from which he would never return.

After a sail of seven weeks, I arrived in New York in the year 1853. Of course, having left my native country in such a manner, I was an exile until I should have become a naturalized citizen of the United States. In the meantime my parents died, so that I had no desire to return.

I had studied some English in Germany by myself, but I found that I could neither speak nor understand it. At my request my sister found me a boarding house where I had for my roommate an American who was very talkative. He and I would go to our room, and make ourselves comfortable each on his own bed, smoking my cigars. Then he would start in to talk, stopping only when out of breath, when I would chime in with a "yes" or "no," the only English words I had at my command. Very soon, however, my ear became sufficiently cultivated to understand him perfectly, and I frequently interpreted his words to our landlady. One great mistake in studying a language is to feed the brain without training the ear.

I lived in Philadelphia for two years, engaged chiefly in teaching music or concert playing. During my stay in that city I met, and on January 10, 1856, married Miss Emma Rae. Among my pupils were the daughters of a Rev. Mr. Helm, then the head of a Young Ladies' Seminary. After this had closed, he took charge of the Edgehill Grammar School for boys at Princeton. Wishing me to continue teaching his daughters, he procured me, as an inducement, twelve pupils from among his boys, and so persuaded me to move to Princeton.

To Princeton, then, I came with my wife on the day after our wedding, January 11, 1856. At that time Princeton was only a little country village, quaint and picturesque, where knowledge and learning were sold for a consideration. The Camden & Amboy R. R. ran just back of the Canal, and from there hacks carried the passengers to the town, up Canal Street to Mercer, and thence to Nassau Street. On arrival we took two rooms in the Nassau Hotel, the only one that kept open the year round. We had the best rooms the house afforded, which was, to be sure, some comfort to our pride. But we were not greatly pleased with our quarters, owing to the quality and quantity of the furniture. In our parlor was a sofa with three ancient claw feet; two bricks took the place of the fourth, so that the sofa could be used as a rocking chair as well. Two chairs and a two-legged table propped against the wall completed the equipment. However, our rooms were almost opposite the gate of the campus, and we could thus see all that was going on. As life in Princeton was quiet and monotonous, my wife and I used to amuse ourselves by looking out of the windows watching the students. We could see them at the sound of the college bell going to prayers, attendance at which was compulsory; then to two recitations in the morning, and another in the afternoon; and again to prayers in the evening.

The first year in Princeton was very prosperous for Mr. Helm. But unfortunately the second year (1856-57) only twenty-five of the seventy-five boys returned to the school, and among the missing were ten of my pupils. This left me with only the four children of Mr. Helm and two of the school boys. The outlook at that time seemed gloomy. I had made a few friends among the college students, and when calling on one of them, I found him fencing with a friend of his. It happened that they differed on some points, and having learned to handle the foils in the Gymnasium, I showed them what they needed. They were so delighted that they urged me to take a class in fencing, saying that there were a number of them who wished to learn. Of course I did not refuse, for it seemed as if Providence had sent me this opportunity. In a few days I had a class of fifty students who continued for the year. Of these, to my regret, I can remember but two—a Mr. Fuller and J. Dundas Lippincott. I think that with my fencing class I may lay claim to the honor of being the first, or among the first, to introduce athletics into Princeton College life. Athletics, such as football or baseball, were not then known. At that time there was not even a gymnasium. And a cane spree I never saw until some years afterwards.

After the work of the day, the students needed some physical exercise, which took the form of walks. The men, many of whom were Southerners, mingled much more with the families of the town than at present. The streets of Princeton were practically deserted by young ladies until about a quarter after five in the afternoon, when all the young people took their recreation together.

In the meantime I was becoming better known in Princeton. About a year after the Edgehill School began to fail, Dr. Maclean, President of the College, engaged my services as a tutor or German teacher at a salary of $300 per year. This was in the fall of 1857. As the study of that language was entirely voluntary, the classes at the beginning of the session were generously attended. But as it involved extra time to attend class and to prepare the lessons, the men would drop off until my class of forty members would be reduced to ten or so faithful ones. As the class was so irregular, I can recall but three names—Hutchinson, Howell and Evans. Three recitations a day all the week excepting Saturday, when there were but two, Chapel attendance morning and afternoon, and Sunday morning services, at which the Professors took turns in preaching,—this constituted the order of my days.

My musical efforts were all private engagements between the students and myself. To be sure, I very frequently played the Chapel organ, but not for remuneration. My first undertaking in the musical line in the College was the forming of a class of about thirty, known as "The Nassau Maennerchor." We gave a number of concerts in the town and nearby places. The members whose names I can bring to mind were F. B. Dorrance, E. Turner, John A. Gammon, J. F. Joline, A. G. Hoyt, E. E. Green, J. P. Hutchinson, J. C. Owens, W. H. Miller and E. A. Van Wagenen. We met for three years in what was known as Philosophical Hall. I think the breaking up of our organization came about in this way. We were asked to furnish the music for a Junior Speaking Contest which was to be held in the Chapel. Dr. Maclean asked me what we were to sing. The book we used was called "The Arion Glee Book," and our selections were taken from it. I answered, "A glee called 'The Valse,' another 'Kiss Me,' etc., etc.," all being particularly well sung by the class. But the good Doctor thought they were entirely out of the question, and wanted to know if we could not sing "Jesus, Lover of My Soul" to one tune, and some other hymns to the other airs, as that would be more suitable music for the Chapel. Upon my saying that that was impossible, we were not allowed to sing.

Meanwhile had come the time for "Old Nassau." During the winter and spring of the year 1859, some of the seniors and tutors used to meet with me in a little old house on William Street, just east of the college grounds, where we would smoke and sing college songs over our glass of beer. When "Old Nassau" was written, we tried to sing it to the air of "Auld Lang Syne," but found this utterly unsuitable. Mr. W. C. Stitt, one of the company (probably then a tutor in the college, as he received his degree of M.A. the following Commencement), suggested that I should write original music to the words. I agreed, thinking the proposal and my agreement would vanish like the smoke from our pipes. I took the words, however, promising to compose the music sometime,—and then thought no more about it. But my memory was strengthened from day to day by Stitt, who requested it for "to-morrow." That day was long dawning. At last his determination brought me up to the mark. I was living in a house opposite the large entrance leading into the Park of the late Judge Field, now owned by Professor Allan Marquand. There I was sitting on my front porch smoking my peaceful pipe, when the energetic Stitt arrived on the scene, and asked me in an off-hand way if I had anything particular to do that afternoon. I answered "No." Immediately he produced pencil and music-paper saying, "Here is the 'To-morrow' so long promised. Here is 'Old Nassau.' Now do as you promised, and put the music to it." I did write the music then and there, with Stitt standing guard over me. When it was at last finished, I handed it to him thinking I would never hear of it again. With a smile and a "Thank you," he left me.

I have no recollection of hearing my music to "Old Nassau" until long years afterwards. I did not know of any editorial mention of my name in connection with this music in the Nassau Literary Magazine for March 1859. Nor did I hear either of the publication that same spring of the "College Glee Book" containing my music to "Old Nassau," or of the publication later in the year of the song in sheet music form. It was only after coming to Trenton that I picked up a College Song Book and saw my music on the first page. Let me here express my heartiest thanks to the students of Princeton, who, by rendering it in a masterful manner and with exceeding enthusiasm, have given it a name and worth I little dreamed of when I wrote it.

For nine years — until Commencement 1868—I continued to teach German in the college. During that time we had a "Musical Club" of about fifty voices, which proved a great success. During my last year as instructor in the college (1867-68), a friend of mine, Captain A. Edmund Veyer, taught French. In 1868 Dr. Maclean resigned, and Dr. James McCosh was elected to the presidency. The chair of Modern Languages was about to be formed. Dr. McCosh told me that it was much better to have the languages taught by natives, and that the intention was to have this chair of Modern Languages divided between two, the salary being divided also. But about that time Captain Veyer died. General Joseph Kargé was called to fill the professorship, and my services on the teaching staff of the college terminated.

In the fall of 1868 I entered the Theological Seminary, from which I was graduated in 1871. Previous to that my wife died, leaving me with four small children, three boys—Karl A., Jr., Clifton A. and Rae Langlotz—and one daughter, Emma E. Langlotz. During my Seminary terms

I formed a Philharmonic Society of about one hundred and forty members. We met in the Seminary Chapel for two years and then disbanded. In 1872 I married Miss Virginia I. Dunn, daughter of Dr. Jared I. Dunn, and two years later moved to Trenton. Here I have been teaching music ever since. My second wife died October 2, 1902, leaving one daughter, now Virginia I. Kirk.

This must end my sketch. What is before me, I shall know hereafter. I close with kindest regards for all Princetonians, and with thanks to them for their appreciation of my "Old Nassau."

KARL A. LANGLOTH.

On the Campus

THE Princeton track management has taken the right step toward the development of an all-round track team, instead of leaving Princeton's point winning to a few individual stars, by the appointment of a regular track coach. Mr. A. F. Copeland of New York, for several years the successful coach of the New York Athletic Club and himself a well known athlete, has been secured, and under his direction preliminary practice is being held daily in the Gymnasium. The management is making a special effort to get out all the possible track material in college, and already nearly a hundred candidates have reported for practice.

FENCING

Princeton was admitted into the Inter-collegiate Fencing Association, at its annual meeting held during the holidays. The members of this association now include Yale, Princeton, Pennsylvania, Annapolis and West Point; Harvard, Columbia and Cornell having withdrawn, and, with the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, formed a new league called the University Fencing Association. Princeton's fencing team has a dual meet with the Army at West Point on Feb. 17th, and will also enter the championship meet of the Inter-collegiate Fencing Association, in New York, March 16th and 17th. Other dates for Princeton's schedule are being arranged.

The Alumni

THE Princeton Board of Trade was organized at a public meeting held recently in Princeton, at which Prof. W. M. Daniels '88 presided and Prof. H. A. Garfield was one of the speakers. A Board of Directors of fifteen members was elected, among them being Profs. Garfield and Loomis, and the Hon. Bayard Stockton '72, Edward L. Howe '91, Thornton Conover '96, and C. Whitney Darrow '03.

The Rev. Dr. Henry U. Swinnerton, Class Historian of '63, writes that he has received from Yokohama, with New Year's greetings, "an enigmatical card photograph 'The Clay MacCauley ['63] Memorial Toro, 3rd. Nov., 1905, Tokyo, Japan., Within an ornamental enclosure of brick and iron work, amid shrubbery, rises a monument in solid stone of Japanese architecture richly carved, apparently about fifteen feet high. A round column, belted, and with foliated capital and base, not unlike a heavy Norman pillar, rests on a panelled hexagonal plinth, and supports a lantern-shaped, hexagonal superstructure, which bears an inscribed tablet on one of its sides with certain peculiar spiral devices, and has a ribbed roof with heavily curving eaves, the whole topped with a large acorn finial. What is the meaning of this striking and expensive, and withal evidently honorable, tribute of Japanese taste and means to an American scholar, is evident only vaguely. MacCauley's obituary was printed during the Civil War, and now his tombstone is set up, and he isn't dead: we hope he will explain it. He was a professor in the University, Keiagi-jiku, and later, President of Senshin Gakuin (College of Advanced Learning), spending eleven years in that country, whither he recently returned."

A brochure of twenty-four pages, by Dr. MacCauley, with the imprint of the "Japan Mail," Yokohama, Nov., 1905, has also been received. It is on "The Cause and Meaning of the Japan-Russia War," and forms portions of an address, apparently, tracing the antagonisms which resulted in the late war.

Dr. Swinnerton's recent writings include articles in The Presbyterian, of Philadelphia, on "Prayer not Inconsistent with Law," and on "Our Lord's Theory of Prayer," and in the Christian Work and the Evangelist, of New York, on "Is It Wholly Wise?"—the last questioning the policy of diverting the Sunday School from

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1906

NEXT week, or as soon as it is available, The Weekly will publish the annual report of the Treasurer of Princeton University, showing the present financial condition of the University, the increase in funds since the last public statement by the Treasurer, a year ago, the list of donors during the year, etc. Meantime, we are enabled to report informally on the first year's work and the plans of the Committee of Fifty prominent alumni appointed by the Board of Trustees in December, 1904, "to provide for the immediate necessities and the future development of the University."

THIS COMMITTEE WAS ORGANIZED with Cleveland H. Dodge '79 as Chairman and George W. Burleigh '92 as Secretary. Mr. Dodge still remains Chairman, but Mr. Burleigh, having resigned on account of the stress of his private affairs, has been succeeded as Secretary by Harold G. Murray '93, lately Assistant Secretary of the Board of Water Supply of New York City, and who, as Chairman of the committee on the dormitory of the ten classes '92-'01, now under construction, has already had much practical experience, in coöperation with the members of that committee, in planning and carrying through to a successful issue a good Princeton work. Mr. Murray is now devoting his entire time to the task undertaken by the Committee of Fifty, visiting the principal alumni centers, laying before the graduates the needs of the University and the plans of the Committee to meet them, and perfecting the organization of a systematic and continuous canvass of the whole body of the alumni. His office is at No. 52 Wall street, New York, and he will be glad to receive subscriptions to the various funds described below, suggestions concerning the work of the committee, changes of addresses of Princeton alumni, etc. Class Secretaries, in particular, can be very helpful to Mr. Murray in his work for the University.

IN ORDER THAT ALL MAY PARTICIPATE in the privilege of providing for the immediate needs and future development of the University, the Committee of Fifty has adopted the following three forms of subscription: 1. The endowment form, by which the donor agrees to give a fixed sum, and pays five per cent. yearly interest on such sum until it is paid, and upon any unpaid balance of it. 2. The term form, in which the donor agrees to give a specified amount each year for a given term of years. 3. The "flat" gift, in which the donor gives a certain sum outright. For the general body of Princeton alumni, the second is proving the most popular form, because it is within the reach of all of us. But one of the three forms will, we assume, be found to meet the requirements of any intending donor.

DURING THE FIRST YEAR of its work the Committee has received subscriptions aggregating over a million dollars, of which $500,000 is in the (1) endowment form, $199,370 in the (2) term form, $23,325 in the (3) "flat" gift form, and the balance is for the building of McCosh Hall, the foundations of which have already been laid. This is a most encouraging start. For one thing it has already enabled the faculty to begin successfully the Preceptorial System, which is now receiving recognition as the most noteworthy movement of recent years, for the improvement of higher educational methods in America. But, as stated in the Committee's circular last year, to put the Preceptorial System in full operation, with the number of teachers sufficient for its needs, "would require the income of $2,500,000; and this is only one of the large plans, formulated after earnest investigation, which the University must carry out if it is to keep its place among the foremost institutions of learning."

BUT AS YET THE COMMITTEE'S CANVASS has reached only a small minority of the alumni. And all of us are no doubt aware that if our Alma Mater were to look upon the job of educating her sons merely as an unsentimental business proposition, she would shut up shop and wind up her affairs in short order. For, as is well known, the tuition fees paid by a student fall far short of balancing the University's actual outlay for his education. The obligation we have all incurred, therefore, in participating in Princeton's benefactions, merely from the standpoint of a just and honorable debt, need not be emphasized.

THE LAST OPEN SECTION of the big dam at Kingston, to hold the Princeton Lake, will be closed early in the spring, according to our latest information. It is estimated that about a fortnight will be required for the combined waters of Stony Brook and the Millstone to cover the three and a half miles of meadow land; then it will be a lake. The excavating was practically completed several weeks ago, and the dam has been ready for some time, all but the superstructure of the final section of fifty-four feet, which can be put on in a week. It would have been possible, therefore, to back the water up before Christmas; but it was found inadvisable to do so until certain work had been completed in connection with the bridges at Harrison and Washington streets. Meanwhile the contractors, the Hudson Engineering and Contracting Company, are making favorable progress with the work on these bridges; at Harrison street the masonry is completed and the steel structure is being put on; at Washington street the foundations are ready for the abutments and piers, but as the superstructure of this bridge is to be concrete, reinforced with steel and faced with stone, it is necessary to wait for warmer weather before going ahead with such work. However, the dam will doubtless be closed and the water backed up about the first of April, without waiting for the completion of the bridge at Washington street.

ANOTHER GIFT OF RARE AND INTERESTING EDITIONS of classical authors has been received by the University Library from Robert W. Patterson '76, who, as an enthusiastic collector, is a constant benefactor of his Alma Mater. The most noteworthy volume of his present donation is the 1712 edition of Cæsar, edited by Samuel Clarke, with eighty-seven large copper plate illustrations and twenty-nine vignettes, also on copper. The volume is bound in full Russian, by the celebrated Roger Payne. It is a huge folio, and the famous first edition of this work, the Princeton copy being especially fine, not only for the brilliancy of the copper plate engravings, but also because it contains the noted folding plate of the French Bull or Bos Gallicus, usually missing from copies of this work still extant, or mutilated when present. This is the volume of which Addison's Spectator said, "the finest book I have ever seen."

BUT JOSEPH ADDISON had not seen the latest and finest example of American printing, illustrating, and binding. The executors of the estate of the late Mr. H. R. Bishop have presented to the Princeton Library one of the one hundred copies of Mr. Bishop's two volumes "Investigations and Studies in Jade," together with a box of jades in the original state, for use in the mineralogical department and in studying the book itself. These volumes are very large folios, printed by DeVinne, on special hand-made paper, and bound in full crushed Morocco, in severely plain style. The illustrations represent the finest modern work in color lithography, copper engraving, and wood-cuts.

STILL ANOTHER NOTABLE GIFT to the Library is a copy of the Letters of George Washington to Tobias Lear, published in a limited edition of three hundred copies, by Mr. W. K. Bixby of St. Louis, from the originals in his private collection. It will be remembered that Mr. Bixby also owns the manuscript of the Journal of Aaron Burr, of the Class of 1772, and that he published two or three years ago an unabridged edition of this Journal in two large volumes, presenting copy No. 1 to Burr's Alma Mater.

AS A CHRISTMAS GIFT to the University Library, Mrs. Laurence Hutton presented a copy of the Hutton "Books of Association,"—one of one hundred and fifty-two copies only, the edition being privately printed for friends of the Hutton family. As implied by the full title, "Laurence and Eleanor Hutton, Their Books of Association," the volume is a catalogue of the remarkable collection of presentation books which came to Mr. and Mrs. Hutton through many years of association with authors, actors, and their other friends of the artistic world generally. The prefatory note puts it delicately that the volume is "founded and builded upon the title pages and the fly leaves of the men and women who, in their books, have put themselves on record as knowing and loving us; and whom we are glad to have known and loved." The frontispiece is an excellent portrait of the late Mr. Hutton.

COPY No. 1 of the Presentation Edition-de-Luxe of the beautiful book on "Old Nassau," which Wilford S. Conrow '01 has recently edited and published, has been presented to the Library by Mr. Conrow.

WHETHER THE MANAGEMENT of the hockey teams or the management of the St. Nicholas rink in New York, where the intercollegiate hockey games are played, is responsible for the state of affairs described in the following communication, we are not informed :

New York, January 30th, 1906.
The Alumni Weekly,

Dear Sir : Having read in The Weekly that the Princeton-Yale hockey game was to be played in this city on February 10th, I went up to the Princeton Club in order to obtain seats. There I was told they had some seats at $2.50 each, and to say I was amazed would be putting it very mildly. I was also informed by the clerk at the desk that "everybody's kicking and refusing to pay the price." Now, as an alumnus, I think such a state of affairs is outrageous,—that we should be expected to pay one dollar for admission plus one-fifty for a seat, making, as I stated, $2.50 for practically a seat. There has been a great deal of discussion lately about commercialism in athletics, and this is to my (poor) mind a good sample of it.

It might be advanced that the hockey team is in need of the money, which may be very true, but it seems to me that the general athletic fund could be counted on for enough so that we alumni here could see and cheer our representatives at a fair price. There are many alumni here who in all probability want to see the team play, but I infer from what I was told at the club that they will have a great deal of trouble in disposing of the seats at the exorbitant price asked.

Perhaps my views in this matter will not meet the approval of The Weekly, but I respectfully submit that it would be welcomed here to hear your views apropos of what I have said. Perhaps it will be said that the Princeton men would go to see the game at any price, but I doubt if they are going to allow themselves to be "held up" by the St. Nicholas rink management, which it virtually means is being done, in my estimation.

Yours very truly,
F. L. S.

THE WRITER OF THIS communication need have no doubt of The Weekly's hearty endorsement of his eminently proper and just protest against paying $2.50 to see a hockey game,—a very exciting form of sport and entertainment, to be sure,—but two-fifty! That's going some, in the gentle art of sticking the alumni! The playing time of a hockey game is, we believe, forty minutes. At $2.50 a seat, that's something over six cents a minute for this sort of entertainment. At that rate, you'd pay between nine and ten dollars for a theatre seat,—and probably get a better seat at that. So it seems that even the Theatre Trust could learn things from the financial geniuses of the hockey league! Or from the St. Nicholas Skating Trust, if that's where the credit belongs. . . The answer is, obviously, that if the college hockey teams expect their older brothers of the alumni to attend and support their games, it is up to them to set (or insist upon) a reasonable price of admission.

IF IT WERE ONLY hockey prices that are too high, we would not take up so much of our readers' time and The Weekly's valuable space in discussing the matter. But this communication gives a definite case in point, and shows how the alumni feel, we take it, about the prevailing charges of admission to all our athletic games. That the undergraduates, too, feel that such charges have been too much increased, was shown by a recent editorial in The Daily Princetonian, advocating their reduction. For the big games, it is true, the athletic managements can get almost any admission price they choose to impose, though, we feel sure, no one would urge that as an excuse for rewarding loyalty with extortion. And if at most of the minor games on the home grounds the attendance has dropped to a meager minority of the faculty and undergraduates, in recent years, we believe this to be due in a large measure to the gradual increase in prices of admission. Let the charges be placed within reach of every student; the aggregate gate receipts would, we think, show an actual increase, and the teams would not then lack the encouraging support of the undergraduate body which comes of full attendances at all of the games.

THE REORGANIZED INTERCOLLEGIATE football rules committee held a meeting in New York on Jan. 27th, and made a beginning on the revision of the rules. According to unofficial reports, the ten-yard rule is to be adopted; very severe penalties are to be imposed for foul play; the center, guards and tackles of the team having the ball are to be required to be in the line, except that one of them may be taken back not less than five yards,—for a kick; the forward pass is to be permitted back of the line, etc. Pending receipt of the official report of the amendments, we reserve comment.

Professor John Grier Hibben '82 on the Preceptorial System

AN ADDRESS BEFORE THE UNIVERSITY CLUB OF BRIDGEPORT, CONNECTICUT

ON INVITATION of the University Club of Bridgeport, Conn., Professor John Grier Hibben '82 lectured on Jan. 25th, before the members of that club (most of whom are alumni of Yale University) on The Preceptorial and Honor Systems at Princeton. In elucidating the Preceptorial System, Professor Hibben said in part:

As many of my audience tonight are manufacturers, it has occurred to me that one of the chief problems of our large universities is the same as that which confronts you in your work, namely, how to save the waste material. Whenever in your factories you realize the fact that although you are turning out excellent products, there is nevertheless an unusually large waste in the process, you at once suggest a change of method and of machinery. So in a large university it has been found that there is much waste due to numbers alone, not to mention other causes. The professor who lectures to one hundred or two hundred men can know nothing of individual needs and limitations, and many are not reached satisfactorily by instruction of this general nature. The preceptor's function is largely that of the conservation of such waste energy and material. He meets the students in small groups of three or four, or preferably, when it is practicable, one man at a time, in weekly conferences upon the collateral reading assigned in each course. His work is thus complementary to that of the professor who is lecturing to the class as a whole and whose aim is to coördinate his lectures with the subject matter of the required reading.

There are three classes of students, each presenting a different problem to the preceptor, and his work with them should be adapted to their various needs. First, the students whose aim is to do a minimum amount of work and to follow the lines of least resistance through their college course. They desire to attain the so-called gentleman's group, which is commonly the fourth group or possibly the third, but never the second or first. These are men whose best friend in their college course is the syllabus, which serves as a kind of life-preserver at the time of trial. Now there are two things which the preceptor can do for this type of students. He can create a feeling of responsibility, or rather, this is done not so much by the preceptor as by the system itself, by the very logic of the situation. When a student enters a classroom where there are twenty or thirty men who may be called upon to recite, he is willing to take a gambler's chance, but when he meets his preceptor alone, to carry out the figure, he is betting on a certainty, if any wager should be suggested at all. He has to do a certain definite amount of reading assigned to him, and face to face with the preceptor he has to give an account of the same, to state his difficulties, to ask questions, suggest objections, to carry on, in short, some kind of rational conversation upon the subject. There is no escaping such a test or such an opportunity. The emphasizing of the individual responsibility of the student is thus assured. The complete dissipation of responsibility in connection with large lecture courses where the only test is the examination, is in a like manner overcome.

In the second place, the preceptor for this class of students must create an interest in his subject. No system, no machinery can do this; it must turn upon the personality of the preceptor. He is a man who from all possible fields of work has chosen one, and devoted his life to it. It is natural to expect that he should be enthusiastic about his subject, and should impart his spirit to the student. Dr. McCosh at one time was asked what he considered the prime requisite for a teacher, and his answer was, "He must be alive." By the quickening spirit of the teacher the dry bones of his subject must be made to live. The student who from time to time meets his preceptor in an informal manner, which tends to the full revelation of personality, cannot fail to catch the inspiration of his guide; and if once his interest is incited, it means the increase of his attention, and with increase of attention comes concentration, and where there is concentration there is always efficiency. It may be said by some that if a man cannot of himself maintain a respectable standing in college, then, not being able to stand the test, he should be dropped, and has only himself to blame. But however much the responsibility of a man's failure in college may be due to himself, the fact still remains that he leaves an unsolved problem. That something might have been done to save him, is always suggested. And this is the problem that the Preceptorial System is attempting to solve. To utilize the waste material and to save it and to turn the possible failure of such men into a creditable performance through their college course, is one of the chief ends set before it.

Second, there is the student who is conscientious in his work, but who is discouraged. This may be due to insufficient preparation, and very often this is the case. It is more often due to the fact, however, that the student does not know how to study. He is an unskilled workman. He is like the athlete who may have native ability, brawn and muscle, but who has to be taught the rudiments of the game, and before anything else, how to fall on the ball. And so it is with a student who is bewildered by the mass of details confronting him. He has never learned the trick, if I may so call it, of getting at the central thought of his subject and correlating everything else with it, of dropping out the non-essentials, of seeing that things hang together, and of learning in the domain of thought how to fall on the ball. Now the function of the preceptor in reference to such a man is not that of a nurse, nor is it that of a mere coach, but it seems to me that it is essentially that of a physician. The case of such a student needs an expert diagnosis. It may be that he is using his memory entirely in getting up his tasks, and not his reason at all, or it may be that his imagination needs to be quickened, or he may need some helps to concentration, such as the use of written exercises, abstracts, themes, etc. Whatever is his need, it is the problem presented to the preceptor to discover it and to adapt his methods of instruction accordingly. The greatest service that a preceptor can perform for his student is to teach him a true method of study. With it comes facility and pleasure in one's work.

The third class are students of ability who are doing excellent work in all of their studies. Such a student will succeed, whatever may be the curriculum or the nature of the instruction, but there may be and often is a very serious waste. A student of this type may be doing his task; learning his lesson, passing examinations, even taking honors at the end of his course; but he may also be missing much by the way. The function of the preceptor in reference to such a class is largely that of suggestion. The student is going through unknown territory and sticking closely to the beaten paths, and it is possible to do him a great service by pointing out the by-ways into which he may wander, and where he may discover much that is hidden from the main way; or at times he may lead him to higher levels, whence there is a wider prospect and a lifting horizon, and he can look over and beyond into the land which one day he may possess. The preceptor should impart to him not merely the letter but the spirit of scholarship. With such direction and inspiration the student falls naturally into the habits of critical judgment. He has opinions and he is able to justify them. He knows how to conduct himself in unknown regions of investigation. He is not bewildered by new problems. He has learned to see beneath the surface of things and to get at the heart of their hidden meaning, and above all to discriminate between the real and the seeming or false value of things, and to put supreme emphasis upon the things of supreme worth and significance.

In this sketch of the preceptorial function, it will be readily recognized that the success of the system turns naturally upon the personality of the preceptor. It is through the personal and intimate contact of the student with his guide in intellectual matters that the desired end is to be reached. For, when there is mutual understanding and coöperation between preceptor and student, the right kind of scholarship must be the inevitable result.

THE Princeton Club of Philadelphia's reception to the Hon. John Stewart '57, Judge of the Superior Court of Pennsylvania, on the evening of January 27th, was well attended by the judiciary and members of the club. A collation was served, after which the younger members gathered around the piano and sang the college songs. State Senator A. B. Roberts '96 introduced the guest of the evening, Judge Stewart saying that it was a great pleasure to be present in a college atmosphere, and that he felt it was "rejuvenating, invigorating." He went on to say that of the faculty as in his day, not one was left. He contrasted the old Princeton with the new, and concluded by thanking the members of the club for a very enjoyable evening.

Among those present were Justice S. L. Mestrezat, Justice W. P. Potter, Judge James B. Holland of the United States Circuit Court; Judges Penrose and Dallett of the Orphans Court, and Judges Barratt and Beitler of the Common Pleas of Philadelphia. The Class of '01 held its fifth annual mid-winter reunion at Terrace Garden, New York, on Jan. 27th, and, notwithstanding the counter attractions of two masked balls in the same building, there were times during the evening when over fifty were seated together at the tables. A quartette of colored artists supplemented the usual soft music incident to the gatherings of this class. The President, Dr. J. W. Jameson, after a short address of welcome, called upon Secretary W. E. Hope, who spoke on class matters in general and the memorial fund in particular. S. F. Whiteman, C. G. Meinken, R. R. Whiting, and S. W. Dodd related anecdotes picked up in the course of their sociological investigations since leaving college, while R. Schaff of Boston delivered an address on "Me and Lawson." Other contributors to the evening's entertainment were O. K. Badger and C. E. Patterson, with songs, F. L. Janeway and R. S. Steen. The spirit and voice of a celebrated Princeton excogitator, to the great delight of the class, let fall a few pearls of wisdom from the lips of W. R. Gelston; while Meinken brought moisture to the eyes of all by his affecting rendition (with gestures) of "Dolly Grey." Before the closing "Old Nassau," J. H. McLean delivered an instructive dissertation on "The Church Congregation in Contradistinction to the Football Congregation." The affair was unanimously voted the most successful of the five mid-winter reunions thus far held by the Class of '01. Among those present, in addition to the performers, were: V. H. Berghaus, J. A. Bernhard, W. Black, P. T. Bruyere, F. T. Carstensen, E. T. Casebolt, A. D. Childs, E. Y. Clausen, J. J. Coale, W. S. Conrow, J. E. Crane, E. L. Crawford, A. V. Duncan, M. W. Forney, S. Frazer, W. G. EVAN GOLDSMITH CHANDLEE, JR., '05 and J. D. Elliott '97, who found that the disease had made such progress that there was no hope. As an undergraduate Mr. Chandlee was a leader in his class, having been Secretary, last year, of the Interclub Treaty Committee, and a member of the Committee on the Honor System. Since graduating he had been in business with his father, in Philadelphia. The following tributes are from his classmates and from the Cap and Gown Club, of which Mr. Chandlee was a member :

We, the members of the Class of Nineteen Hundred and Five, classmates of Evan G. Chandlee, Jr., feel in his death the loss of a strong man whose place cannot be filled. His strength of will, his sincerity of purpose, his utter fearlessness to do his duty, made him a man valued and admired by all. He was true to the ideals of Princeton. The frankness, absolute honesty, and steadfastness of his character endeared him to us as a helper, a companion and a friend. Our sorrow is deep that the class is so early deprived of his power, manliness, and firm friendship. To his family and to all his friends, we extend our heartfelt sympathy.

HAROLD H. SHORT,
WILLIAM H. SAYEN, Jr.,
FORDYCE B. ST. JOHN,
For the Class of '05.

In the death of Evan G. Chandlee, Jr., we, his clubmates and friends, feel that we have suffered a loss so severe and lasting as to render impossible an adequate expression of our grief. He was one whose manliness impressed all with whom he came in contact, ever faithful and loyal to his friends, and who, by his fearless efforts in the performance of the duties which were assigned to him, rendered the University such service as is given to but few undergraduates to perform. We shall always refer to him with pride as a Princeton man and as a clubmate.

We desire to extend to his family and to all who were near and dear to him our sincere and heartfelt sympathy.

Essays in Application

Such keen social satire as "Publicomania"; such vigorous doctrine of citizenship responsibilities as "The Powers that Be"; such sane economic reasoning as "Property and Theft"; such noble expositions of the business of living as "The School of Life", are all virile voices to the times accurately keyed to counteract current failures and fallacies.

PRINCETON'S second term began on Thursday the 8th, the mid-year examinations, which have been in progress during the past fortnight, having been finished on the 7th. In an early number we hope to be able to report on the effect of the Preceptorial System on the examinations.

BY THE WILL OF THE LATE Professor S. Stanhope Orris '62, who died in December at the home of his sister in Harrisburg, Pa., Princeton University receives a bequest of $25,000, to found ten scholarships. Dr. Orris' will, which was recently probated at Harrisburg, appoints as executor the Rev. J. Stockton Roddy '91, pastor of the Olivet Presbyterian Church of Harrisburg.

ON THE INVITATION of the Commercial Club of Providence, R. I., President Wilson '79 is visiting that city this Friday night, to lecture on The Relation of the University to Commerce. Dr. Wilson delivered an address on January 27th before the University Club of Brooklyn, on The University Man, and during his recent trip to Charleston, S. C., he was the guest at a dinner given by J. P. Kennedy Bryan '73, the alumni present including Henry W. Conner '89, Dr. Archibald T. Buist '93, and Richard B. Smythe '97. President Wilson was elected a Vice-President of the American Academy of Political and Social Science at its annual meeting held recently in Philadelphia.

CORNELIUS C. CUYLER '79, of New York, who for some years has been the Chairman of the Committee on Grounds and Buildings of the Board of Trustees of the University, has resigned that chairmanship in anticipation of an absence in Europe.

The committee has elected Mr. Archibald D. Russell of Princeton to succeed Mr. Cuyler as its Chairman.

AS AN ADDITIONAL SAFEGUARD of the health and general convenience of Princeton students, the trustees have promulgated the following rule: Plans for all buildings to be erected in which students are to room, must be first submitted to the University authorities for their approval. Otherwise, the trustees reserve the right to refuse permission to students to room in such buildings.

THE PRINCETON CLUB of Western Pennsylvania held a business meeting and smoker at the Union Club, Pittsburgh, on the evening of Jan. 18th, at which the following officers were elected: President, Robert H. Totten '86; Vice-Presidents, Judge Harry White '54 of Indiana, Pa., Rev. Dr. J. H. McIlvaine '66, A. A. Speer '69, G. C. Wilson '72, Rev. W. S. Miller '75, W. M. Trainer '83, and John G. Jennings '84; Secretary, W. A. Steinmeyer '02; Treasurer, J. R. Wardrop '01; Executive Committee, L. C. Woods '91, H. Lee Mason '92, A. J. Barron '02, and J. C. Rea '04. This active Princeton association is preparing for its thirty-second annual dinner reunion, to be held the latter part of February, probably on the evening of the 24th, date, time and place to be definitely announced later. The Dinner Committee has sent out a preliminary announcement, urging that every Princeton man in that section attend the dinner, and asking the assistance of all in sending in the name and address of every Princetonian who has either recently come to Pittsburgh, or who will be there or near there on Feb. 24th. The Dinner Committee is Robert D. Totten '86, Joseph B. Shea '85, Lawrence C. Woods '91, Joseph F. Guffey '94, Charles L. Hamilton '95, Benjamin Dangerfield, Jr., '96, Daniel E. Nevin '97, Watson Marshall '99, James R. Wardrop '01, Robert W. Sutton '01, W. B. Salsbury '02, H. Hugbert Laughlin '00, A. Blaine Robinson '00, Chairman, Wood and Diamond Sts., Pittsburgh; W. A. Steinmeyer '02, Secretary, 1228 Frick Building, Pittsburgh.

AT THE JANUARY MEETING of the Presbytery of New Brunswick, the Rev. Sylvester W. Beach '76, pastor-elect of the First Presbyterian Church of Princeton, was received from the Presbytery of West Jersey, and arrangements were made for his installation on Feb. 28th, in the First Church, Prof. Henry van Dyke '73 to preach the sermon; the Rev. Dr. Charles Wood of Philadelphia, member of the Board of Trustees, to give the charge to the pastor, and Prof. W. Brenton Greene '76 to offer the prayer. Also arrangements were made for the installation of the Rev. William I. Campbell, A.M. '98, as pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church of Princeton, on March 2nd, when the sermon is to be preached by the Rev. Dr. Henry C. Minton, with the Rev. Charles R. Erdman '86 as alternate; the charge to the pastor is to be given by the Rev. Henry A. McKubbin of Flemington, with the Rev. Samuel McLanahan '73 of Lawrenceville as alternate; and the prayer to be offered by Prof. John D. Davis '79, with the Rev. Dr. Samuel M. Studdiford '56 of Trenton as alternate. At this meeting of presbytery, Edwin H. Kellogg '02, who is in his senior year in Princeton Seminary, was received as a candidate for the ministry, from the Presbytery of Allegheny.

THE WEEKLY IS IN RECEIPT of the annual report for the year 1904-5 of the Bulgarian Evangelical Society, "the only native Society which spreads sound moral and religious literature and assists various churches both in the support of their pastors and in awakening them to evangelical activity." The Rev. D. N. Furnajieff '95, of Kustendil, Bulgaria, is the Secretary of this society, and the Rev. W. P.

Finney '83, of Moorestown, N. J., is a member of a committee through whom contributions may be sent.

THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY for February contains a poem, Nature Poetry, by Prof. Henry van Dyke '73; an article, Pianists Now and Then, by W. J. Henderson '79; and a story, The Blue Girdle, by Latta Griswold '01. In the February McClure's, Ernest Poole '02 has a story entitled Old Bernstein and "de Great Fiddle."

A NEW EDITION of the Directory of the Living Graduates and Former Students of Princeton University is now in preparation at the office of the University Secretary, to be published in the near future. All alumni who have changed their places of residence or business during the past year should immediately notify the Secretary, C. W. McAlpin '88, Princeton, N. J., in order that the new directory may contain their latest addresses.

COMMUNICATION

Princeton, N. J.

Dear Sir: Although every Princetonian, at all familiar with the history of Princeton University, is well aware that the first three Presidents of the College of New Jersey,—Dickinson, Burr, and Edwards,—were graduates of Yale College, it is not generally known that six of the seven trustees named in the first charter of the College of New Jersey, viz., William Smith, Peter Vanbrough Livingston, William Peartree Smith, Jonathan Dickinson, Aaron Burr, and John Pierson, were Yale men; the seventh, Ebenezer Pemberton, being a graduate of Harvard. Of the five trustees chosen as associates by virtue of the power contained in the charter authorizing an increase of the number of trustees to twelve, one, Richard Treat, was a Yale graduate. The remaining four, Gilbert Tennent, William Tennent, Samuel Blair, and Samuel Finley, were educated at, and connected with, the Log College.

In view of the large part which the graduates of Yale had in the establishment of Princeton, it would be a good idea if, from time to time, a leading Yale graduate could be made trustee of Princeton, or elected to membership in the faculty. In this way, our University would be paying a worthy tribute to the splendid work of those Yale men of the eighteenth century who took such a prominent part in the founding of our Alma Mater, and, at the same time, help bring about the most cordial and helpful relations which should always exist between universities, working along similar lines for the accomplishment of the same end,—the best education of the young men of America.

ALUMNUS.

[Apropos of the foregoing suggestion, it is interesting to note that there are at present nine Yale graduates in the Princeton faculty, including a professor emeritus, five preceptors, and three instructors.]

THE PROPOSED CHANGES IN THE FOOTBALL RULES

THROUGH the courtesy of John B. Fine '82, Princeton's representative on the American Intercollegiate Football Rules Committee, we are now enabled to give an authentic report of the meeting of that committee in New York on January 27th. At that meeting reports were presented from all of the sub-committees, and definite action was taken as follows:

On recommendation of the Sub-Committee on Brutality these amendments were passed:

Disqualification. Striking with the fist or elbows, kneeling and kicking shall be punishable by the disqualification of the guilty player for the rest of the game, and the offending team shall lose half the distance to its own goal line. We further recommend to the institutions playing under these rules that upon being disqualified a second time, in a season, the player be declared ineligible to play football for one year from the date of the second offense; also that this same penalty apply to the deliberate injury of an opponent, not including the offenses specified or included in the next succeeding section.

Unnecessary Roughness. To include striking the runner with the ball in the face with the heel of the hand on defense, meeting with the knee, piling up, striking with the locked hands by linemen, in breaking through, tripping, tackling the runner when out of bounds, and all other acts of unnecessary roughness. Penalty, loss of fifteen (15) yards.

Unsportsmanlike Conduct. To include use of abusive, or insulting language to opponents or officials. Penalty, suspension for remainder of game.

It shall be the duty of all the officials to penalize for the above offenses.

Holding. The players of the side that has possession of the ball shall not hold, block or otherwise obstruct the opponents, except with the body; but a player running with the ball may ward off an opponent with the hand. Holding or unlawful obstruction includes (a) grappling the opponent with the hands, (b) placing the hands upon an opponent to push him away from the play.

It was then voted that all votes accepting any portions of sub-committees' recommendations shall be understood to represent simply the sense of the committee and does not commit the committee as a matter of final action to the express wording in the vote.

On recommendation of the Sub-Committee on Opening up the Game, the following was voted:

That any man back of the snapper-back be allowed to make a forward pass, provided it does not extend beyond the line of scrimmage or to a man who was in the line of scrimmage when the ball was put in play.

That hurdling in the line be prohibited: A definition of hurdling to be formulated at the next meeting.

That not more than six men shall be on the line of scrimmage on defense, the balance to be clearly behind the back feet [sic] of all the linemen, and inside the men on the end of the line.

Six men shall always be on the line of scrimmage; the five center men shall always be on the line, except that one of the center men may drop back at least five yards or more, another man to take his place in the rush line.

There shall be no tackling below the knees except by the men on the line of scrimmage on the defense, and of these, the two men occupying the positions on the ends of the line of scrimmage cannot tackle below the knees.

Neutral Zone. That in a scrimmage the holder of the ball shall place it flat upon the ground and put it in play with its long axis at right angles to the line of scrimmage, and until the ball is put in play, no part of any player, except the man who puts the ball in play, shall be allowed to be ahead of the point of the ball nearest his own goal.

That there shall be a referee, two umpires, and a linesman for each game. (Foot note: In games of minor importance, or where question of expense becomes important, the second umpire may be dispensed with at the discretion of the two institutions involved.)

That it shall be the duty of the referee to impose the penalty for violations of rules reported to him by either of the umpires or the linesman.

Action was deferred on the proposed ten-yard rule, on additional recommendations of the Sub-Committee on Brutality, on the definition of tripping, on the report of the Sub-Committee on the Central Board of Officials, on the players changing their positions during the game, and on the report of the Sub-Committee on the Field Laboratory. These various matters will come up for consideration at additional meetings of the general committee, one of which is to be held in New York on this Saturday.

The deferred portion of the report of the Sub-Committee on Brutality includes a recommendation that any player before participating in an intercollegiate game shall have passed the regular examinations on the first full year's work and shall have been advanced with his class, which would prevent freshmen from playing; a recommendation for the further protection of a player making a fair catch, and a recommendation that the ball be declared dead when any part of the body except the hands or feet of the player carrying it touches the ground.

The report of the Sub-Committee on the Central Board of Officials recommends that five members of the intercollegiate rules committee be constituted a national committee on officials, a permanent secretary to be appointed outside of the committee; that colleges accepting the provisions of the rules committee be invited to submit names of college men for officials; that from these nominations a complete list of officials be constituted by the national board; that the colleges be requested to select from the above list the officials three weeks prior to the date of a game, and that the competing colleges be requested to make reports of the efficiency of such officials; when incompetency is proven, the name of the offending official to be withdrawn from the list.

The Sub-Committee on Practical Field Experiments recommended testing important changes in the rules before their final adoption, by actual trial on the field of play, and that the experimental laboratory should be established at the United States Military Academy, in accordance with an invitation from West Point.

Concerning the proposal that the distance to be gained in order to retain the ball be made ten yards instead of five, which was thoroughly discussed during the meeting, it was apparent that this rule in some form is to be passed, though whether it shall apply to the entire playing field or only to the middle belt of the field between the 25-yard-lines, and whether three or four downs shall be allowed for gaining the ten yards, the fourth down to be used only for a kick, was not decided. But the committee's action in weakening the defense was a preliminary to the adoption of the ten-yard rule.

Although these amendments have not all been definitely passed upon, they indicate the general lines along which the American Intercollegiate Football Rules Committee propose to codify the rules at their subsequent meetings. So we may take them as showing pretty clearly the committee's answer to the demand for football reform. Whatever else may be said of them, they are in no sense radical.

The penalties for unnecessary roughness and unsportsmanlike conduct are certainly severe enough; but we have had severe penalties before, and foul playing has continued, because officials have not strictly enforced the penalties. The establishment, therefore, of an authorized list of officials, responsible to a central governing board, will no doubt improve matters, though the central board may encounter difficulty in finding a sufficient number of unbiased and fearless officials, men who know the game thoroughly and who have the courage to enforce the rules. A more effective means of reducing muckerism in football lies in a general elevation of the ethics of the game; for, whatever penalties are imposed, there will be unfair playing so long as the chief aim of players and coaches is to win, without regard to the means of winning. And the first step toward the improvement of the ethics of the game lies in the abolition of professional coaching, a step which has already been recommended by the Princeton Faculty Committee on Outdoor Sports. But this is not part of the rules committee's job. It is a matter for the consideration of faculty committees, though no college can be expected to take such action singly. It could be brought about, however, by mutual agreement between the athletic authorities of competing colleges.

It is not to be expected, of course, that such a mutual agreement, or any legislation, would bring the millennium in football.

The "ape and tiger instincts," as Mr. Huxley says (with no reference, we trust, to the Princeton tiger), still survive wherever human nature survives,—and there is much human nature in football.

While, therefore, the rules committee is not called upon to reform by legislation the carnal man, they can do much by way of reducing to a minimum the outbreaks of the brute in human nature on the football field. One way that this can be accomplished is by making the game so wide open that any such outbreaks would be seen of all men, and the offender and the offense receive not only the penalty of the officials, but the condemnation of the public. This brings us to a consideration of the committee's amendments designed to open the game,—the disappointing part of their recent and pending legislation.

We take it that there is a genuine demand for the complete abolition of what is generally termed mass play. Unless we are very much mistaken in the meaning of the public protest against football as it is played, that protest is aimed primarily at the formations in which heavy linemen are drawn back to carry the ball, or to assist the runner in breaking through the line. To this particular kind of football, whose only excuse is that it gains ground, most of the evil ways into which the game has fallen are due. It is not only a shield for intentional injuries, which defy the detection of the most alert officials; it limits the possibility of competition to a few specialists, thereby debarring from this game the majority of college students, no matter what qualities of athletic skill, of courage, of speed and alertness they may possess, if they do not happen to be of unusual weight and stature; for the spectator it has reduced the great college game to a dreary succession of composite encounters; it has spoiled football. All these things are apparently granted. The American Inter-collegiate Football Rules Committee acknowledges them by appointing a sub-committee to legislate against them.

Is it not reasonable to expect, then, such legislation as will put beyond the possibility of peradventure a continuance of this sort of football? But what does the committee propose to enact? First, that the distance to be gained in order to retain the ball shall be ten yards; second, that the first line of defense shall be weakened by the removal of one man, in order to make it easier to gain the additional distance; third, that the team having the ball shall be required to keep six men in the line at all times, including the center, the guards, the tackles, and one end, but one of any of the seven linemen may be drawn back not less than five yards,—ostensibly for a kick, though that is not definitely specified; fourth, that the forward pass be allowed back of the line of scrimmage.

On paper these measures for opening up the game, and, in particular, for encouraging end runs, look very well. But is it the intention of the committee merely to encourage open play or is it their aim entirely to eliminate mass play? If the former, no doubt the foregoing amendments would prove in a measure successful. To a certain degree they would foster the development of end runs. But that is by no means an adequate answer to the urgent demand for football reform. For while, on the one hand, by increasing the distance to be gained for a first down, the committee aims to discourage mass plays, on the other hand they propose making such plays even more profitable than heretofore by weakening the defense and at the same time allowing one lineman (an end) to be drawn back to carry the ball or to assist the runner. Mass plays, therefore, are not to be entirely eliminated by these amendments.

In this particular the new legislation, it seems plain, would result merely in the substitution of an end for a tackle or guard in the objectionable formations. The obvious argument in favor of such a change is that ends being lighter than tackles and guards, the end-back formation would not gain ground. But it is a well known fact that the ends are being played by heavier men every year,—a tendency which will not be checked by legislation favoring still heavier ends.

What this proposed action of the committee means, then, is that linemen showing capabilities for gaining in the mass play formations would be placed at the ends, that we should still have the same old pound, pound, pound for three yards per encounter, which, bear in mind, would be even more profitable than it has been heretofore, because the line of defense would be weakened by the withdrawal of one man.

The tackle-back formation, as is well known, is most effective when sent not directly at the opposing line, but when the impact is at an acute angle to the line of resistance, the group of players carrying the ball glancing off of the opposing group, usually outside of tackle. When the formation comes directly at a right angle to the line of resistance, it is more easily stopped; but one of the hardest problems in defense has been to stop it when the mass hits the line at an acute angle. The committee's proposed legislation would simply increase the difficulty of this problem of defense, for with only six men in the defending line instead of seven as heretofore, the tackle-back formation (or end-back,—merely a different name for the same thing) would glance off for even more distance from a line of defense shortened by one-seventh.

Now we do not agree with the reported statement of one member of the committee that it is impossible to eliminate mass play,—mass play, that is, in the form of tackle-back or guard-back or end-back (for of course it is not desirable that there should be no attacks on the line or that end runs should be used exclusively.) It seems obvious that mass play in the sense just indicated can be very effectually eliminated if the committee will pass a rule simply stating that every lineman must be in his position in the line when the ball is put in play.

It may be desirable to allow one lineman to be drawn back to kick, but let it be specified that he is there for that purpose only. Then increase the distance to be gained for first down to ten yards, and weaken the defense, if necessary. For the possibility of a lineman going back to participate in carrying the ball being removed, the intended purpose of the ten-yard rule, to encourage the open game, will become its effective purpose. But if the committee does not make sure of the seven forwards being in their positions in the line when the ball is put in play, what guarantee have we against the development next fall of the same objectionable sort of football which has already exhausted the patience of the entire college world? As long as that kind of football is possible and profitable under the rules, there will be coaches to teach it.

The Rev. Dr. Clay MacCauley, whose

"Memorial Toro" was mentioned in a recent number of The Weekly, has returned to America, and is at present in Boston, where he addressed the late meeting of the Princeton Alumni Association of New England. Dr. MacCauley has written a letter to Dr. Swinnerton, the Class Historian of '63, explaining that the "Memorial Toro" is not a tombstone at all, but is a stone lantern, and may be dedicated to either a dead or a live man, and he adds, "I am very much alive." The Toro was erected by the Japan Unitarian Association in honor of Dr. MacCauley, who has contributed largely to the development of the Unitarian movement in that country. The ceremonies incident to the dedication of this striking memorial included a reception to Dr. MacCauley, who at that time had just returned to Japan.

The Hon. Bayard Stockton has been appointed a member of the Princeton Board of Health, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late L. H. Anderson '61.

During the recent yellow fever epidemic in the South, the Rev. Dr. Beverley E. Warner, of Trinity Episcopal Church, New Orleans, devoted all his time to work as head of the citizens' committee in that city, for the victims of the plague. The fever did its greatest havoc among the poorer Jews, and to show their appreciation of Dr. Warner's services several wealthy men of that race presented to him on Christmas day a dining-room set of twelve pieces of old English oak, handsomely carved, and a chandelier, a large rug and footstools. A New Orleans paper says editorially: "Few men occupy the unique position which is Dr. Warner's lot in the civic life of this city, for few men have ministered to the wants of this people with more pronounced liberality of mind and unselfishness of purpose."

The last Annual of the Princeton Club of New York shows that 83 members of the Class of '95 are members of that club. This is larger than the representation from any other class. A big delegation from '95 is expected at the dinner in honor of Tracy H. Harris '86, former President of the club, which is to be held at the Hoffman House, Feb. 21st.

The Rev. William J. Bone was installed as pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Stockton, N. J., on Jan. 2nd. The charge to the pastor was given by the Rev. Dr. Lewis W. Mudge '62, of East Downingtown, Pa. In connection with the service, Dr. Mudge also baptized the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bone.

Charles S. Waldo and Miss Lillian M. McLean were married on Aug. 16th, 1905, at Hulberton, N. Y. Mr. Waldo is practicing law in Rochester.

Several members of the Class of '01 are at present in Southern California. S. H. Park is traveling in that section, for the National Biscuit Co. His offices are at 402 Aliso St., Los Angeles, and he is living at Pomona. R. F. Swigart is spending the winter at Pomona; and W. M. Howell and H. H. Braly are at Los Angeles, Mr. Braly being Treasurer of the new Princeton Club of Southern California.

The Class Secretary has not altogether abandoned the hope of getting a reply from the delinquents who thus far have failed to respond to his appeals for the "story of your life" for the Triennial Record. The matter in hand has been compiled, but there still should be replies from more men. This medium is used to say to those who have written to inquire about the Record, that it is on the way, but every possible effort will be made to get a reply from all the men. At an early date the Secretary hopes to have all matter in hand, and each member of the class will receive a copy of the book. In the meantime he will appreciate any additional information that may be sent from those who have responded to his appeals for letters.

The Class of '03, which ever since graduation has prided itself on being a great reunion class, fulfilled all expectations at the third annual mid-winter dinner in the Hotel Manhattan, New York, on the evening of Feb. 3rd. Over eighty men were present, the record-breaking attendance at a triennial mid-winter class dinner, and the enthusiasm was in proportion to the numbers. Percy R. Pyne, 2nd, the chairman of the reunion committee, to whom much of the success of '03's reunions has been due, presided, and called upon several members of the class for speeches. Howard Ameli, the Class Secretary, spoke on class matters, financial and otherwise, and "Cap." Sellers, chairman of the Memorial Committee, made an earnest appeal for support in his efforts to raise a creditable memorial fund. "McSwishy" Hamilton came down from Boston and entertained the class with his popular song of freshman days, "Speed Bonnie Boat like a Bird on the Wing," his efforts being applauded in old-time form. Courtland Nicoll delivered an "oration" in his best oratorical style, and "Bill" Donald got off a stirring eulogy of the presiding officer. Alexander Stobo, of the Standard Oil Company, refused to speak "by advice of counsel," but J. J. MacDonald made a few incoherent remarks. Charley Dugro spoke on the Class Boy, who is now seven months old and weighs nineteen pounds. The class resolved to send greetings to President F. G. Pearson, who was unable to attend the dinner. The singing was led by Otto Hack, and an impromptu quartette composed of Hack, Mixsell, Lantz, and Roberts added to the entertainment. The class singing was supplemented throughout the evening by a clever negro quartette, who performed both instrumentally and vocally. Besides those already mentioned, the men present included: Bingham, McNamara, N. H. Donald, Platt, Childress, Blakeman, Greene, Guile, Keeney, Daniel, Parsons, H. R. Decker, Close, Sterrett, Detwiler, G. B. Hall, C. W. Hall, Pitkin, Horton, Higgins, O'Neill, Hodgman, Griswold, Wallner, Woods, Baylis, Roche, Barr, Wilcox, Doe, Herr, Scudder, R. E. Anderson, R. McClave, S. McClave, Little, Odell, Wheeler, Dear, Hamlin, Ashley, Perry, Levick, Garretson, Holt, Kays, Babson, Hull, Moore, A. Pelham, E. T. Pelham, Pate, Herrmann, J. W. Ames, A. C. Smith, Jr., Faber, Thomas, Nevius, Hedges, Andrews, Bayles, G. Scott, Chase, Hopkins, Barnes, Bauerdorf, Janeway, and Taylor.—G. F. C.

Charles Latham, Jr., is with the Carnegie Steel Co., Homestead, Pa. His address is 896 Eight Ave., Munhall, Pa.

C. D. Robert is with Granger, Farwell & Co., bankers and brokers, 71 Broadway, New York City.

C. A. Lyon is with the Mexican Plantation Association, at their branch store in El Salto de Agua, Chiapas, Mexico.

Thomas W. Harvey is studying medicine at Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore.

AUGUSTUS MACDONALD '62

Augustus Macdonald '62 died Jan. 27th at his home on Mercer St., Princeton. He was born in Jamaica, Long Island, Dec. 24th, 1841, and was the son of the

Rev. Dr. James M. Macdonald, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Princeton from 1853 until his death in 1873. He was graduated from the Princeton Theological Seminary in 1867 and was licensed to preach by the Presbytery of New Brunswick. He acted as supply for various churches, but was never ordained, and soon gave up the ministry. He took an active interest in Princeton politics, and was Mayor of the Borough from 1891 to 1893. He also served as Collector of Taxes and in other public offices. During the political campaign of 1880 he edited a paper called The Other Side, advocating Democratic principles. He is survived by his widow and two children. The funeral services were held on Jan. 30th, in the First Presbyterian Church, of which he was a member, and were conducted by the Rev. Sylvester W. VOL. VI

WHILE the American Intercollegiate Football Rules Committee is revising the playing regulations of football,—see report and discussion on another page,—representatives of the Harvard, Yale and Princeton committees in charge of the eligibility rules for athletes have come to an agreement of far-reaching importance toward the purging of our college sports of many of their objectionable features. By this agreement, after next September no Yale, Princeton or Harvard student will be permitted to represent his university in intercollegiate athletics for more than three years. This means the debarment of freshmen from such competition and of nearly all professional school students. Competition by special students is also to be limited to those taking a schedule of studies equivalent to the requirements for a degree.

THE TEXT OF THE AGREEMENT thus entered into by Harvard, Yale, and Princeton, as announced this week by Prof. Howard McClenahan '94, Secretary of the Princeton Faculty Committee on Outdoor Sports, is as follows: 1. No man shall be eligible to compete in intercollegiate athletics unless he shall have completed a full year's work at the university and passed the examinations satisfactorily for advance with his class. 2. No man shall be eligible who has a degree equivalent to that required to enter the senior class at Harvard, Princeton or Yale. 3. No special student shall be eligible. Exception: A special student may be eligible in case he is vouched for by the Dean (1) as having satisfied entrance requirements equivalent to those required of freshmen, (2) as having completed a full year's work and as having passed a satisfactory examination upon that year's work, and (3) as taking work during his year of competition equivalent to that required of those who are candidates for a degree. 4. No man shall compete as a member of any university team for more than three years. These rules are to go into effect in September, 1906, but it is understood that Rule 4 shall not apply to any man now in college.

THE FOREGOING ELIGIBILITY rules were drawn up at a conference in New Haven on February 7th, at which Princeton was represented by Dean H. B. Fine '80 of the Princeton Faculty Committee on Outdoor Sports, Harvard by Prof. White, the Chairman of the Harvard Committee on Athletics, and Yale by Mr. Walter Camp and Prof. Wooster. Their final adoption this week by the several committees cuts down the number of students from which the athletic teams are to be drawn to about 1600 at Harvard, somewhat over 1400 at Yale, and approximately 900 at Princeton.

FROM ALL POINTS OF VIEW the debarment of professional school students and of undergraduates taking only a partial course is for the good of intercollegiate sport. That undergraduates ought not to be placed in competition with the older men of the professional schools has long been recognized, and it is unfair also to bona fide candidates for a degree to require them to compete with students taking partial courses. From the point of view of clean sport, the benefit that will accrue from this agreement, by way of keeping off the teams men who enter the universities chiefly for athletics, is obvious. The debarment of freshmen seemed to the committees desirable as a check upon canvassing for athletes in the preparatory schools. It may be just as well, also, to remove the distractions of participating in athletics from students during their first year in college. It will give them much-needed time for study.

IN ADDITION TO THESE NEW RULES, the high standard of scholarship required of athletes by the Princeton faculty remains unchanged, so that by no means all members of the sophomore, junior and senior classes will qualify for athletics. The scholarship eligibility rule now in force at Princeton is: No student shall be eligible for any team while under scholarship conditions. In applying this rule, a student with but one condition will not be declared ineligible until after he has had two opportunities to remove that condition. The effect of this requirement, which has been in operation for a year or so, is that in football a player carrying a single condition for more than a half year is ineligible on account of that condition; but in baseball and track athletics a student may carry a single condition for a year. This difference for fall and spring athletics is due merely to the different periods at which the conditional examinations occur.

APROPOS OF CERTAIN "EXPOSURES" of the deplorable state of college athletics, Prof. McClenahan has compiled some interesting statistics. He finds that of the 220 Princeton students who last year had tuition remitted in whole or in part, only ten were athletes, and before the year was over the number was reduced to six, because four of the athletes receiving such assistance failed to comply with the rigid requirements for the assignment of scholarships. Prof. McClenahan also reports that of the ninety-six Princeton students who ran eating clubs, twenty-four could be classed as athletes; and by that classification he includes all students who have ever been members either of a 'varsity or a scrub team,—in baseball, in football, in track, in wrestling, in fencing, in golf, in tennis, in gymnastics, in basketball, in hockey, in shooting, etc., etc. Taking 300 as a fair estimate of the number of athletes in college, according to the foregoing classification, the proportion of such athletes running eating clubs is just about normal; that is, of the total number of undergraduates, in round numbers 1200, 300 or one-fourth are athletes in the foregoing sense; and the 24 of such athletes running eating clubs is exactly one-fourth of the total number of men who were managing such clubs last year. The proportion of athletes receiving their tuition in whole or in part was far below normal, being one in 22, whereas the normal, as just indicated, would be one in four.

AT THE Boston Athletic Association indoor track meet in Mechanics' Hall, Boston, on Feb. 10th, Cornell defeated Princeton in the one-mile relay race. The only Princetonian to secure a place in the meet was R. P. Lingle '08, who came in third in the thousand-yards run. The practice of the track team, which was interrupted by the mid-year examinations, has been resumed in the Gymnasium. Here is the schedule for this year:

April 21 Tenth annual interscholastic meet at Princeton.

24 Caledonian games at Princeton.

28 Pennsylvania relay races at Philadelphia.

May 5 Dual meet with Cornell at Princeton.

12 Dual meet with Yale at New Haven.

19 Dual meet with Columbia at Princeton.

25 Preliminary trials, intercollegiate meet, at Philadelphia.

26 Intercollegiate meet at Philadelphia.

The Princeton hockey team closed its season on Feb. 10th, when Yale won the final game on Princeton's schedule, 3-0, at the St. Nicholas Rink, New York. Princeton is fourth in the intercollegiate league, with Yale and Harvard to play off the tie for first place this Saturday. Columbia is third and Brown fifth. Of the thirteen games played, Princeton won six and lost seven, the victories being over the Quaker City team, 4-3 and 5-0; Brown, 5-4; St. Nicholas second team, 3-2; Albany Hockey Club, 5-4; and Williams, 4-3. Princeton was defeated by the Crescent Athletic Club, 14-1; by St. Nicholas first team 10-1; by the Quaker City team, 7-6; by the New York Athletic Club, 5-2; by Columbia, 4-2; by Harvard, 3-2; and by Yale, 3-0.

B A S K E T B A L L

After four successive defeats, two by Pennsylvania and one each by Harvard and Yale, the Princeton basketball team has taken a brace and won two league games in succession. On Feb. 10th Princeton defeated Cornell at Ithaca, 30-14, and on Feb. 14th Princeton won an exciting game from the strong Columbia team by 23-19, in the Princeton Gymnasium. At this writing the standing of the teams in the intercollegiate league is as follows:

	WON	LOST	P. C.
Pennsylvania	5	1	.833
Harvard	3	1	.750
Columbia	4	2	.666
Yale	2	2	.500
Princeton	2	4	.333
Cornell	0	5	.000

In games outside of the league, Princeton was beaten by Colgate 49-9, at Hamilton, N. Y., on Feb. 8th, and by Syracuse 38-19, at Syracuse on Feb. 9th. Princeton and Harvard play their second game this Friday afternoon at Princeton.

FOOTBALL REFORM IN AMERICA AND ENGLAND

ADDITIONAL amendments to the football rules tentatively adopted by the American Intercollegiate Football Rules Committee at their last meeting in New York on February 10th, provide that after a kick all the players shall be on side as soon as the ball touches the ground; that one (only) forward pass shall be allowed on a play, provided the ball has not touched the ground before being touched by a player of either side, such a pass to be made by any man who was behind the line of scrimmage when the ball was put in play; that if the ball touches the ground before being touched by a player of either side it shall go to the opponents on the spot from which the pass was made; that the pass shall not be received by a man who was on the line of scrimmage when the ball was put in play, except by the two men playing on the ends of the line; that a direct lob over the line within the space of five yards on each side of the centre shall be unlawful; that the ball shall be dead if any portion of the person carrying it, except his hands or feet, touch the ground, when he is in the grasp of an opponent; and that the distance to be gained in order to retain possession of the ball shall be ten yards, instead of five, three downs (only) being allowed for gaining such distance.

The committee made no changes in the other rules outlined here last week, the more important of which being that there shall be not more than six men on the line of scrimmage in defense, that one end man of the team having the ball may be drawn back (allowing five men back of the line), and that one lineman may drop back not less than five yards (presumably for a kick), another man to take his place in the rush line,—six men always to be on the line of scrimmage.

The most interesting of the latest changes is the rule putting all players on side after a kicked ball has touched the ground. This provision, if finally adopted, will do more to open up the game than anything else the committee has done. For it increases tremendously the chance of regaining the ball after a kick, and will therefore encourage frequent punting. And while there is some apprehension that this amendment may tend to increase injuries,—in the general scramble for the ball,—even if that prove true the play will be in the open, where intentional roughing can be easily detected. Accidental injuries are not to be altogether avoided in the strenuous game of football. It is against the formations that shield intentional injuries that the committee is particularly called upon to legislate.

In declaring the ball dead when any part of a tackled runner, except his hands or feet, touches the ground, the committee is also providing for cleaner football. For this amendment will prevent squirming along on the ground, after the runner has been tackled, and the consequent piling up on him by opponents.

So far, so good. But we regret that the committee has not yet seen its way clear to cut out mass play entirely, by re

ing that all seven forwards of the team ing the ball shall be in their places line when the ball is put in play.
why the committee, while seemingly ous of doing away with these objec-ble formations, persists in allowing one man to be drawn back to assist in rushthe ball, is not apparent. In all the ment on the committee's recent legislative, we have not seen a single dissenting opinion on the proposal to keep seven in the line, in rushing. On the contrary, that requirement is almost invariably orthodox as the first essential of effective action against mass play.

The following vigorous endorsement of this essential of football reform is from a Princeton alumnus who, as a 'varsity man, played the game before it needed reform—
one who has served on the Graduate Advisory Committee on Athletics, and who, while gaining distinction for clean leadership in the politics of his state, has always pledged his interest in and exerted his influence for clean college sports :

Greenville Post Office, Delaware,
2d Mo., 12th, 1906.
Sir, Princeton Alumni Weekly,

The layman who has the temerity to accept criticism of the work of the American Intercollegiate Football Rules Committee must of necessity approach the subject with a feeling of humility and a sense of his own unworthiness. The intricacies and subtleties of this subject require the best expert knowledge for their proper elucidation.

With this apology, I shall trespass on the good nature of The Weekly, for some remarks on "The Proposed Changes in Football Rules."

It is somewhat difficult to determine what are the precise objects of the committee on rules, and what results will be attained. Without question, one is the elimination of roughness and brutality, but, as you state in your review of this subject last week—"But is it the intention of the committee merely to encourage open play or is it their aim entirely to eliminate mass play?" It is fair to suppose, after reading their recommendations, they want to encourage open play as a sop to the demand of the gallery for a better spectacle, and also retain mass play in a less strenuous form for the benefit of the "coaches," who are satisfied that the present game is all right, and are willing to return to work on the old lines when the temporary tempest for reform has blown itself out.

Frankly, I cannot see where the changes stand for any radical reform in present methods of play, and they are not likely to accomplish the tentative object sought for. As long as mass play exists, just so long will excessive roughness exist and a fair amount of brutality (which, of necessity, is hidden) be developed.

Educated in the school of "Get there and win," football human nature in action at close range is not giving much thought to methods of gentleness or righteousness; and mass play in many stages will require as many umpires as players in the mass, if the recommendations of the "Sub-Committee on Brutality" are to be honored,— "Striking with the fist or elbows, kneeling and kicking shall be punishable by the disqualification of the guilty player," etc.

A fundamental condition exists which precludes genuine reform until that condition is eradicated. That condition is mass play. To eradicate it means to accept Princeton's proposition,— "No interference." This, it seems, the committee are unwilling to accept, and in fact it has apparently not been seriously discussed. An opportunity was given the committee within a fortnight to see the possibilities of the game without interference, by the New Zealand team, but outside of Princeton's representative, the committee was conspicuous by its absence. This does not argue a spirit open to new ideas.

"No interference" means a radical change in the game, and, of necessity, the abolition of mass play, but, while the committee are willing to play around this question with makeshifts, they are not willing to accept a genuine solution of the question.

The popular hope was that the rules committee would evolve a game more simple, less scientific, cut out all opportunities for brutality, and develop a game for the average student and not for specialists. Possibly they may have accomplished this, but up to date their work has been too much on the lines of so-called scientific treatment.

Unquestionably the ten-yard rule, adopted on Saturday, will produce more punting, and, coupled with the rule that every player on the kicking side should be on side when the punted ball touches the ground, must give the backs more and much better opportunities for open-field work, but how the ten-yard rule with five players back of the scrimmage line eliminates all mass play I fail to see.

Again, will all the changes achieve the ends sought for? For example, the Neutral Zone,—“That in the scrimmage the holder of the ball shall place it flat upon the ground, and put it in play with its long axis at right angles to the line of scrimmage, and until the ball is put in play, no part of any player, except the man who puts the ball in play, shall be allowed to be ahead of the point of the ball nearest his own goal.” This rule reads well on paper, and probably much thought has been given to it. As I interpret it, it means postponing the scrimmage until the ball is put into play, but, in the heat of contest the Neutral Zone will be apt to shrink and be difficult to find,—a subject for controversy, analogous to the constructive recess between the extra session and the regular session of the Fifty-eighth Congress,—a point of time not yet located by some people.

From a recent number of the Spectator, I copy the following from an article on “Spectacular Games.”

“It seems to be inevitable, with many of our games, that as they become more scientific,—in a sense more first-class,—it becomes the more difficult or impossible for them to remain popular games of the people. In their origin they were popular: the people played them; of that there is no doubt. They have become in their scientific evolution no longer popular; they are spectacular. They are not greatly better, as a means of giving health and exercise, as well as interested amusement, than the ancient circus or the modern bull fight. The more a game or a pastime falls or rises into the condition in which the few only take an active part in it, and the many are but spectators, so much the more must it miss,—as we cannot but think,—the right reason of its existence and its vogue. When a game falls into a spectacular condition it is time that it should be reformed, or that we should find a substitute for it.”

And, again, speaking of their own national game,—“It behooves us to keep a watchful eye to see that it does not slip down that easy descent into the vicious condition of the spectacular. Games are valuable primarily for their active interest. We get but little benefit out of them by the merely Platonic excitement aroused by looking on.”

Yours truly,

HENRY B. THOMPSON '77.

While Americans no doubt have something to learn from foreigners in the ideals and practice of our athletics,—note the high development of open-field football recently shown us by the New Zealanders,—it is not to be supposed that the sports of other nations are beyond improvement.

For instance, in England particularly, there is at present a popular clamor for football reform, quite as strong as the demand for the same thing on this side,—with this noteworthy difference, however, that the outcry over there seems to be directed particularly against the foul tactics of the professional teams. The following communication and newspaper paragraphs, sent by one of our younger alumni who has lived in England since his graduation, are illuminative both of the condition of English football and the patriotism of our correspondent,—though, seeing American football at close range, and not from the distance that lends enchantment, we can scarcely be expected to endorse without reservation the amiable jingo implication that whatever is right, if it's American.

17, Stratton Street, Piccadilly, W.,
London, Eng., Jan. 28th, 1906.

The Editor,

Princeton Alumni Weekly.

Dear Sir:

I enclose two articles from a London paper on English football which, while they are too long for quotation in The Alumni Weekly, are interesting from the fact that in America we are assuming that English football is everything that is good and holy, whereas that everything in American football is bad. You will see by them that foul play is possible even in the heaven-chosen rules of English football.

I sincerely trust that all the pother about American football will die away after the ten days' wonder is over,—as has proved the case with most of our would-be reforms.

Yours truly,

JACK R. CRAWFORD '01.

One of the articles enclosed by our correspondent is a criticism of "foul football" written by "a well-known footballer" and printed in the Daily Mail of London. Here are some excerpts:

As an enthusiast of Association football I make a point of witnessing many matches during the season, most of them League or Cup-tie matches. I invariably go there with a pleasant, expectant feeling that I am going to witness a good sporting game of true football as laid down in the rules framed by the Football Association, but invariably I am disappointed. This season I have seen only two games which filled me with pleasant memories—I refer to those played between the Corinthians and Woolwich Arsenal and the Amateurs v. the Professionals of the South. Of the remainder I have sad memories tinged with something of the unsavoury, due to the unwholesome tactics resorted to by the professionals when engaged in a serious match.

I will willingly acknowledge that professional teams can, as well as any amateurs, play a clean, sporting game, and invariably do when opposed to the Corinthians, and this very fact strengthens considerably my argument. But I defy anyone to say seriously that this same spirit pervades in League or Cup-tie matches.

What does one see? Tricks resorted to repugnant in every way, one continual attempt to beat their opponents by fair means and foul—as much of the latter as can be safely indulged in—one continual attempt to dodge the referee, who is, in my opinion, a great deal to blame for the exhibitions we see, simply by lack of firmness and severity in keeping the players thoroughly in hand.

For instance, there is a golden rule among professional backs, which is invariably observed. If a forward breaks away and beats the opposing back, the recognized thing for the latter to do is to trip him. As a proof of this, observe the jump the forward always gives when he has tricked the back, knowing only too well from experience what the back will try to do. Again, it is quite the correct thing to do to "elbow" or "hack" your opponent as hard as you can, in the most vulnerable spot you can reach, during a scrimmage for the ball.

. . . the worst of them will only be made to realize that they must play a clean game by increasing the penalties to extreme degrees, or, better still, suspending permanently those "undesirables" who cannot rid themselves of their degraded instincts. This could be done by keeping a "black list" of men who are frequently penalized.

The other article is not a criticism of rules or of unfair playing, but a lament for the failure of English Rugby teams to win :

The melancholy record of failure which has attended the efforts of English Rugby teams during the last few years has disgusted the supporters of the game, and those who have not gone over to the rival code are clamouring for reform.

But the most regrettable thing about it all is the contempt with which English Rugby football is viewed by the other nations. "Who has the worst footballers?" shouted out the Hartley University students when bidding farewell to the New Zealanders at Southampton last Saturday. "England," was the reply, and they were about right, sad though it is to have to record the fact.

Scotland, 1902—four years ago.

Ireland, 1904—two years ago.

Looked at in the cold light of figures, the situation is simply appalling, and no remedy can be too drastic which is likely to bring about a better state of affairs.

The questions naturally arise : Are the men or the methods most to blame? Are English-born footballers inferior to those nurtured in other countries, or is the English Rugby Union so mismanaged that the good football inherent in our players is not brought out and properly developed? . . . etc.

A recent issue of the New York Herald contains a picture of James Cowden Meyers, and an article about him, from which the following is reprinted:

James Cowden Meyers, the young Princeton man who has displaced "Little Tim" Sullivan as the boss of the Board of Aldermen, has created a new precedent as a lone Republican bossing one branch of the city government by boldly announcing to the entire municipal administration: "You've got to retrench. Stop salary raising. Stop the big schemes. Extravagance doesn't go here. We've got to economize for two years so as to prevent a repetition of the financial conditions that now make it necessary for the city to pay 4 per cent. on its bond issues."

As a result of the change of politics that gave the Republicans the control of the Board of Aldermen Meyers holds the purse-strings, and he and his following will hold the veto power on all the Tammany appropriations.

That Meyers is going to be a very important man in the city government for the next two years has just begun to dawn upon the Tammany officials, who were accustomed to see appropriations slipped through the board by "Little Tim" without friction. Meyers has begun by cutting down some of Tammany's minor appropriations, holding up others and sending still others back.

Meyers is one of the youngest leaders the board ever had. He is a lawyer, with an office at No. 290 Broadway, and is serving his third term in the board. He is still in the middle thirties, tall, rather slender, and has a brown, Van Dyke beard, blue eyes and a frank, boyish countenance. He was one of the hardest fighters of Tammany in the old board in which Tammany had the majority. He was much more aggressive than Elias Goodman, who was then the Republican leader, and this fact caused him to be selected to pilot the Republican majority. He displayed his powers of leadership by arranging the committee in a way to please all the factions.

JOHN WILLIS '39

Captain John Willis '39, who was a student at Princeton seventy years ago, died recently at his plantation, at Pantherburn, Miss., aged eighty-eight years. He was a native of Mississippi and a grandson of Captain Vick, the founder of Vicksburg. At the outbreak of the Mexican War he was elected captain of the Vicksburg South-erns, and his company enlisted and served under Jefferson Davis throughout the war. Captain Willis and his company also served in the Confederate Army through the Civil War. He was a successful cotton planter and was one of the best known citizens of his state. His cotton estate is said to be the largest in Mississippi.

SAMUEL ALLAN JOHNSON '02

Samuel Allan Johnson '02 died at Pasadena, Cal., on Jan. 30th, in the twenty-sixth year of his age, after a prolonged illness. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel C. Johnson, of Wilkesburg, Pa., and entered Princeton with the Class of '02 from the Shady Side Academy at Pittsburgh. After his graduation with the degree of B.S., in June, 1902, he returned to his home in Wilkesburg, entering his father's employment. In the early winter months of 1903, he became ill with severe colds which he was unable to throw off, and, his lungs becoming seriously affected, went to Los Angeles, Cal., in the spring, and subsequently to Pasadena, where he resided till his death. The change of climate, while bringing temporary improvement, was unable to do more and his health was never regained. During his long and discouraging sickness he bore himself with a courage and buoyancy that no disappointment could overcome.

Throughout his college life, he displayed those qualities of mind and heart that endeared him in no ordinary measure to those about him. Warm hearted and affectionate, true and genuine, without thought of self-seeking, clean and upright, the story of his days at Princeton is the treasured memory of those who shared it with him. Loyal to his University and class, he was ever ready in the service of both, and brought to the discharge of his duties as a member of the Class Day Committee the same thoroughness and efficiency which characterized whatever he undertook.

In his death the Class of '02 has lost one of those who best represented that which we are proud to claim as the Princeton Spirit,—a worthy representative of the best in Princeton life.

In our own bereavement we desire to extend to his family our deepest sympathy in their affliction.

NO. 20

SEVENTY undergraduates were dropped from their classes at the recent midyear examinations. Last year at the same examinations the number of failures was seventy-one, and two years ago, sixty-four. The comparative figures of the last two years for the several classes are as follows: This year, five seniors, last year, three seniors; this year, five juniors, last year, ten juniors; this year, twenty sophomores, last year, fourteen sophomores; this year, thirty-five freshmen, last year, thirty-four freshmen; this year, five specials, last year, ten specials.

IN THE PAST TWO YEARS, therefore, the new curriculum and the Preceptorial System have been successfully introduced with very little change in the number of students failing to pass their midyear examinations. Considering the much higher standard in the quality of work done by the students under the new course of study and the searching nature of the Preceptorial System of instruction, the foregoing figures indicate a satisfactory result.

DOUBTLESS AFTER THE Preceptorial System has been in operation longer, and particularly after it has been applied to additional departments of the University, the number of failures will be even less than at present. As for the freshman class, it is believed that until students come to college with better preparation, there will continue to be about the same percentage of failures as at present; that under present conditions the number of freshman flunks is about normal. It is in the first year of a class' course that the weak brethren are weeded out. Until the February examinations have been passed, the composition of a freshman class is unsettled; thereafter there is always a very marked reduction in the number of failures. But in the other classes, it will no doubt be possible, after a year or two of the operation of the Preceptorial System, to cut down the number of failures to say ten in the sophomore class and half that number in the two upper classes. This would bring the number of flunks to somewhat under sixty, or less than five per cent. of the undergraduate registration, which is perhaps about the minimum to be expected in a body of twelve or thirteen hundred students.

IT WILL BE OBSERVED that the largest disparity in the statistics of failures of this year and last is in the sophomore class,—that there were twenty sophomores dropped this year as compared with fourteen last. The present sophomores, the Class of '08, were, as freshmen, the first class to come in under the new course of study, and in the B. S. department particularly they were hit hard by the advanced requirements. Their losses in the recent examinations were largely due to the fact that in one of their important required courses there was no preceptorial help given, and in addition this course was deprived of time and energy required for it, by other courses which had the help of the preceptorial guidance. It is worthy of note that almost half of the number of sophomore failures was due to this condition; and as an illustration of the effectiveness of the Preceptorial System it is also worthy of note that the number of conditions given in one sophomore philosophy course was only about half as large as it was last year, before the Preceptorial System was introduced.

IT SHOULD BE BORNE IN MIND that all conditions carried over from former examinations are taken into account in determining whether a student shall pass,—that when a student accumulates conditions aggregating more than half the number of hours of his schedule, he is dropped from his class. No doubt the conditions carried over from former examinations have made the number of failures larger this year than will be the case in the future, as under the Preceptorial System such conditions ought to be reduced to a minimum.

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY was celebrated in Princeton with the usual exercises,—debating and oratory in the forenoon, the gymnastic exhibition and sophomore-freshman wrestling in the afternoon, and basketball, Yale vs. Princeton, in the evening. For the Class of '76 Prize Debate, in Alexander Hall at 10 a. m., the question was, "Resolved, That the action of President Roosevelt, in March, 1905, in response to the request of the President of Santo Domingo, was justifiable," the debaters being G. L. Burton '06, R. S. Sidebotham '07, T. S. Clark '08, and J. C. Cooper, Jr., '09. Prof. H. A. Garfield presided, and the judges, Hon. B. B. Hutchinson, Prof. W. A. Wyckoff '88 and Prof. C. G. Osgood, Jr., awarded the prize to Mr. Sidebotham. At the oratorical contest, immediately after the debate, S. J. Reid, Jr., President of the senior class, presided, and the speakers were G. H. Fryer '09, on "Nathan Hale," H. W. Elliott '08, on "Present-Day Patriotism," H. S. Breckinridge '07, on "Henry Ware Lawton," and H. F. Bliss '06, on the fads and fancies of his classmates. The contest was won by Mr. Breckinridge, the junior orator, the judges being Profs. Paul van Dyke '81, J. G. Hibben '82, and E. Y. Robbins '89. The sophomores won the wrestling contest in the Gymnasium, taking all of the three bouts. On the evening of the 21st, the glee club concert and the junior promenade were unusually well attended and successful. Concerning the prom. The Princetonian solemnly records that it was "without doubt most successful in abundance of productivity of the regular amount of lingering memories.

Despite the rain and Jersey mud of the outside, as the Glee Club's careful advise 'Take Yo' Feet Out de Mud' was heeded to the letter, the gaiety and spirit of the dance were in no way affected. After an unusually good Glee Club Concert, in which the singing of the Glee Club itself and of the quartet, with a greater number of alarmingly delightful 'swipes' than ever, was the shining light of the evening, the Prom. started at about 10.30 and lasted in one continuous round of pleasure until the usual early hour. As the beauty of the decorations, the splendid management, the superb floor have already been dilated upon to the full extent in these columns and in the conversations at the dance, little more need be said. It may be hoped that the Prom. was as successful in affording fair memories of Princeton as it was in point of enjoyment and good management."

THE DATE OF THE NEW YORK PERFORMANCE of Tabasco-Land, the Triangle Club's new play, has been changed from March 31st to April 7th,—afternoon and evening at the Waldorf-Astoria. Tickets are to be had on application to the management at Princeton, the prices being, for the matinee, $1.50 for a seat, $12.50 and $20. for boxes; for the evening, $2. for a seat, $15. and $25. for boxes.

C O M M U N I C A T I O N S

12 Sumner street, Cambridge, Mass.,
Feb. 14, 1906.

Dear Mr. Weekly:

A paragraph in the last issue of your paper proves you to be the most ignorant of men. What right have you to assume that Henry van Dyke and W. J. Henderson are Princeton men? Evidently you are laboring under the delusion that spending four years in a college and getting a degree from it at the end bind a man forever to that institution. Nothing could be further from the facts. If you lived in this broad-minded centre of culture, you would know that the real way to get a claim on a man is to give him an honorary degree. Read the article on "Books by Harvard Men," in the enclosed number of the "Harvard Crimson" and you will learn that Prof. van Dyke is a '94 man at Harvard and that Mr. Henderson got a degree here a year sooner. I also advise you to consult earlier numbers of this publication, feeling sure that you will be thus able to correct your delusions concerning Dr. Crothers and others.

Yours in the search for enlightenment,
GRADUATE.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 12, 1906.

Dear Sir:

Apropos of the article in your issue of Feb. 10 in regard to Yale men in Princeton affairs, it might be interesting to state that the captain-elect of the Yale football team, Samuel Finley Breese Morse, is the great-great-great-great grandson of the Rev. Samuel Finley, D.D., President of Princeton College, 1761-66.

President Finley was born in County Armagh, Ireland, 1715. He came to this country with his father, Michael Finley, and six or seven brothers, landing in Philadelphia Sept. 28, 1734.

He married Ann Clarkson of Philadelphia, July 30, 1760. Their daughter Rebecca married Samuel Breese of New Jersey. Their daughter Elizabeth-Ann, May 14, 1789, married the Rev. Jedediah Morse of Connecticut. One of their sons was Samuel Finley Breese Morse, the inventor of the telegraph and the grandfather of the present Yale football captain.

Perhaps Captain Morse is not to be blamed for going to Yale, as his great grandfather was a student there at the age of 14, but he ought to have followed in the footsteps of his distinguished ancestor, President Finley.

The Baseball Schedule

PRINCETON'S baseball schedule for 1906, announced this week, contains thirty-two games, one more than last year. As mentioned here some time ago, there are to be two games with Harvard, instead of one, the first at Cambridge on May 19th and the second at Princeton on May 26th. The second of the two games with the University of Pennsylvania is scheduled for Commencement Day at Princeton. There are to be two games with Cornell, also, and the usual series with Yale. The Easter trip begins on April 11th, and includes one game each with Annapolis, Virginia, and the Washington American League, and two games with Georgetown. The third game with Georgetown, which was omitted last year, is restored to this year's schedule,—at Princeton on May 16th. The new games are with the Boston National League, the Washington American League, Annapolis, Virginia, and Williams, which take the places of Tufts, Walbrook Athletic Club, Lehigh, Bucknell, and West Virginia. ## HOCKEY

Harvard won the championship of the Intercollegiate Hockey League for the fourth consecutive season, by defeating Yale 4-3 on Feb. 17th, in an exciting game which took five extra periods of play before the deciding goal was scored.

BASKETBALL

The Princeton basketball team was beaten by Harvard, 34-13, in the Princeton Gymnasium on Feb. 16th, but won from Yale, 21-14, on Washington's Birthday. Princeton defeated the Army 33-26, at West Point on Feb. 17th.

MIND VS. MATTER

The Princeton and University of Pennsylvania wrestling teams had an exciting match in Philadelphia the other day, with a David and Goliath finish. There were seven bouts, and after six had been contested the score was tied at three all. In the final bout, the heavyweight, J. K. Ormond '06, weight 155, was matched against J. Zilligan, weight 235. When the Princeton "heavyweight" and the Pennsylvania football guard appeared on the mat for the deciding bout, the audience laughed scornfully. It was a cinch. . . .

Handicapped by eighty pounds, it took nearly ten minutes for the son of Prof. A. T. Ormond '77 to demonstrate the superiority of mind over matter. The demonstrator is a second grouper of the academic senior class.

In the featherweight (115 pounds) J. F. Cross '06 threw M. S. Pettit in four minutes; in the specialweight (125 pounds) E. O. Howell '07 threw A. B. Kemp in eight minutes; in the lightweight (135 pounds) after twelve minutes C. T. Brown was given the decision over A. H. Ormond '08, another son of Prof. Ormond '77; in the welterweight (145 pounds) A. H.

Scott '06 was thrown by B. J. Joyce in six minutes; in the middleweight (158 pounds) J. R. Dickson '08 defeated J. K. Twyer on points, in twelve minutes; in the light-heavyweight (175 pounds) R. R. King '09 was thrown by A. B. McCullough in four minutes; in the heavyweight, J. K. Ormond '06 (155 pounds) threw J. Zilligan (235 pounds) in ten minutes.

ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL

Some Old Independence Day Celebrations in Princeton

BEFORE the long summer vacation was established in the Princeton calendar, sixty odd years ago, the fourth of July was one of the fest days of the college year, a holiday properly observed by faculty, students, and citizens,—somewhat as Washington's Birthday is now celebrated at Princeton, formally and informally, though perhaps with more emphasis on the significance of the day.

These celebrations of Independence Day began in 1776, the year of the adoption of the Declaration, and continued till 1841, when the change in the college calendar placed July 4th in the long vacation. The New Jersey Gazette bears record that on July 9th, 1776, five days after the signing of the Declaration of Independence, "Nassau Hall was grandly illuminated, and independency proclaimed under a triple volley of musketry." In 1778 the day was commemorated with "the greatest demonstrations of joy." At 6 p. m. a signal gun was fired to collect the citizens, then there was a salute of thirteen guns "succeeded by three huzzas from a large concourse of people," who adjourned to the governor's quarters and, with the members of the legislature, officers and gentlemen, "passed the remainder of the day with great festivity and decorum, and drank thirteen toasts." The village was illuminated in the evening.

In 1780 President Witherspoon and the faculty, the students, officers, soldiers and citizens foregathered at 6 p. m. A salute of thirteen guns was fired, before each of which a toast was read in a loud voice by Major Egbert, and the company gave three cheers. Later, in the chapel, Dr. Witherspoon delivered an address, and at sunset the college and town were illuminated and the festivities were concluded "with greatest good order."

In 1783 a novelty was introduced, which had been duly advertised in the newspapers. An oration was delivered by a representative of each of the literary societies,—Ashbel Green for Whig, Gilbert Tennent Snowden for Clio, both seniors. This is said to be the first time the halls appointed speakers to represent them in public. A distinguished audience was present on that occasion. Congress was then in session in Nassau Hall, and adjourned early to attend the college exercises. The programme started with thirteen guns on the front campus, then came the orations, and at 6 p. m. a large dinner was given at Morven, the guests including the members of Congress, the French Minister, the faculty, the orators, and "gentlemen citizens." Thirteen toasts were proposed, and later there were fireworks, etc.

Doubtless there were similar celebrations each year after the close of the Revolution, until the college calendar was changed in 1842. At any rate the following old letter, written by William J. Gibson '44, then a sophomore, gives evidence of a lively celebration of Independence Day by Princeton students as late as 1841,—the last time the day was observed by the college:

No. 4, West College,
Princeton, July 10, 1841.

Dear J.: * * * Glad to hear you all spent so pleasant a 4th of July. Some account of our proceedings here may prove amusing. 3 weeks ago, at a called meeting of the students, it was triumphantly decided that there should be an Illumination, &c., on the evening of the 5th. A committee was appointed to mark the devices on the windows and collect money for the fire balls, fireworks, &c.

The figure marked on all the first-story windows of East and West Colleges was an hour-glass, requiring 60 candles for our 3 windows.

The figures for the 2d and fourth stories and all the back windows of the old North were much more intricate and beautiful. In the third story of our college the upper sashes presented "Geo. Washington," and of the East College, "General Mercer." On the chapel windows were the dates "1776-1841."

All day Saty, and part of Monday, Olcott and I were both busy in preparing and placing the candles, cutting them in short pieces, turpentine the wicks, and then lighting them to be sure they would go. The penalty for leaving this undone would certainly have been the smashing in of all our fenestras insertas. Usually the students have had a celebration of the 4th out in town, but owing to a misunderstanding between the 2 societies there was none this year.

Thro the day, however, the roar of artillery was kept up as incessantly and noisily as in Albany. In both refectories a very fine Fourth of July dinner was served up. In the P. M. in the back campus were raised 7 or 8 large and costly pieces of Fireworks procured from New York for the occasion. And at dusk the campus was almost filled with the ladies and gentlemen of Princeton and Mercer County. As soon as it was dark, at the ringing of the bell, every window fronting on the back campus was manned by the students.

At the 2d toll the while fronts of the 3 colleges, containing about 200 windows and full 5,000 candles, were instantaneously illuminated. The sight was really magnificent! After about ten minutes, when some of the short candles were burning low, the bell was again tolled, and each student hurried to his window again; and when the bell tolled for the fourth time, every light was as suddenly extinguished. The fireworks were then exhibited, as fine a display as I ever saw. Rain began to fall soon after 8, and put to flight the visitors. Some of the students, disappointed about throwing their Fire balls across the campus, got them going in the long halls of the old college, until the officers dispersed them, after promising them the next evening for that sport. A drenching rain finished the day.

Tuesday evening, July 6, after a short display of fireworks, as animating a scene as I ever witnessed was exhibited in throwing these fireballs. 30 or 40 flaming balls kept constantly in the air, by one or 200 students, running continually hither and thither, shouting at the tops of their voices, and ever and anon some of the balls alighting right in the midst of the ladies, who thronged the stoops and porticos of Whig and Clio Halls, altogether presented a most beautiful and exciting spectacle.

I had been sitting on the stone stoop near our door, on one of our only 4 chairs, enjoying the brilliant bombardment, and as yet unannoyed by its influence;— when a well-directed ball came flaming towards us, and unwinding about the chair, from which I had started up, soon wrapped it in flames:

"Chair afire! chair afire!!" instantly resounded thro the campus, and while I was endeavoring to strip off the devouring element, a roguish student seized the chair, and pitched it streaming in flames, far out into the campus. A general rush was now made for it, but I rushed also, and fortunately rescued it, from the dubious effect of a pitching all over the campus. This sport was kept up for an hour and a half, a great many panes of glass having been broken, and the burning balls having several times lodged on the shingle roof of the old North, whence, however, they were quickly removed. Then, the balls being used up, a bonfire of old barrels was made around the old cannon in the middle of the campus.

Round this about 100 of the conjubilant students had a grand dance, singing "Ha jib-a-long, jib-a-long-a-Josey" in the most inspiring and ridiculous manner. Patriotic songs were also indulged in, in which the voice of Boker rang loud and clear above those of his fellows. The bell now rang for the students to go to their rooms, and the Faculty coming out to enforce obedience to their orders, about 50 of the students set off together, and finished the celebration with a grand race around town, with the Faculty at their heels, for which quite a number have been suspended. Thus has ended the last college Fourth of July celebration which will probably ever be witnessed here, as by the change to be made in 1842, no holidays will come in term time.

ALBERT C. WALL '86 ON FOOTBALL REFORM

Albert C. Wall '86 represented Princeton at the annual dinner of the Yale Alumni Association of Essex County, N. J., on Feb. 16th. In referring to football reform, Mr. Wall said:

Is it not likely that as we think of these things we hark back to our old points of view and look with something of our undergraduate contempt on the feverish doings at Morningside Heights and elsewhere? Do we not overlook the enormous pressure that is being brought to bear on our faculties and advisory committees by the armies of parents who are stirred to action by the agitation against everything connected with football? In times of indifference the rules committee and the various governing bodies of the universities are supreme; but when the pulpit and the press cut loose and the fathers and mothers of a large part of the student body of the country unite in a movement aimed at the abolition of the game, how long do you think the college authorities have or should have the stamina to hold out?

In such a case technical questions are lost and there is no choice except thorough-going reform or obedience to the demands of those who support and nourish the universities by filling them with their sons.

Undoubtedly the game has glaring defects along with its fine quality of courage. "Vat is de greatest ting in de world?" a Polish soldier of fortune who had drifted into teaching modern languages at Princeton, once asked our class, and some teasing hypocrite in the back of the room, in order to draw out the old man, called out in answer in a high falsetto voice, "Religion, Religion." And the old general bellowed back, "No, damn, courage, courage; dat is de ting."

But the spirit in which the game is played is far below the spirit exhibited by the same men in playing other games. When one thinks of it, is it not a singular thing that a lot of very young men, men only by brevet, who come of good stock and are trained in high ideals which they have not even had the opportunity or temptation to dip in salute to the compromises and expedient surrenders of commercial life, should play football not in honorable accordance with the rules of the game which they all perfectly know, but in accordance with the umpires' and referees' conception of those rules—a conception which the players determine by going to the breaking point? It is not the inborn weakness of human nature, for the same players are men of careful honor in games where the spirit of the game is higher. Some say it comes from the professional coaches, and some from the hot desire to win. Whatever the cause, most of us realize the fact.

Besides, as a game, it is tiresome to watch. I could assert this with absolute conviction if I had seen Princeton win from Yale last year, for many of us are so constructed that there is something about victory which differs from all else.

When the streams of people who mount the steps of the Louvre hesitate in awe of the marble figure from the Island of Samothrace, the woman at the head of the stairs, is their loitering all due to delight in the sweep of the ancient draperies or speculation concerning the pose and countenance of the missing head—the lines of the lost arms? Is it not rather that in some way she adequately represents Victory; even if she has no Y on her bosom?

One thing is certain. We all unite in the hope that the gentlemen in whose hands the destinies of the game are fluttering, shall be wise and in time.

WHO'S WHO IN MYTHOLOGY?

Embarrassing, isn't it, when we run across the name of some god or goddess, in the daily paper, or in a poem, not to know! Or perhaps one just fails to enjoy perfectly a beautiful painting or engraving or piece of statuary, because ignorant of the myth implied.

We publish a convenient little book that gives the name of every god or goddess, or hero whose name is ever likely to be bronched, with quite enough description to enable one to connect with the story—just enough to rescue one from seeming so distressingly ignorant, as if one had never even heard of Pallas, or Aphrodite, or Thalia, or Ariadne.

NO. 21

FRESHMAN candidates for the baseball team were called out this week and have begun practice in the cage, under direction of Captain Reid '06 and W. B. Cosgrave '04, the head coach. There were over fifty of the freshman aspirants for the team,—a considerably larger bunch than usual, and some of them give promise of surviving for the varsity squad. If they can bat, there will be plenty of room for freshmen on Captain Reid's nine.

THE SECTION OF ANTHROPOLOGY and Psychology of the New York Academy of Sciences, and the New York Section of the American Psychological Association held a joint meeting at Princeton on Feb. 26th, as the guests of the Department of Philosophy in the University. In addition to several members of the Princeton faculty, seventeen delegates from Columbia, New York University, Lehigh and Bryn Mawr attended the meeting. At the afternoon session in Dodge Hall, Dr. A. L. Jones, Preceptor in Philosophy, read one of the papers, and at the evening session, at the Nassau Club, the Princeton men on the programme were Prof. H. C. Warren '89, Prof. W. H. Sheldon, and Dr. M. Phillips Mason. Between the sessions the visitors were the guests of the philosophical department at an informal dinner at the Nassau Club. The Princeton committee on entertainment was composed of Prof. J. G. Hibben '82, Chairman, and Prof. A. T. Ormond '77.

PRESIDENT WILSON '79 addressed the North Carolina Society of New York, at their annual dinner on February 27th, his subject being The Young Man's Burden. Dr. Wilson was also the Washington's Birthday Orator before the University Club of Washington; on that occasion he spoke on The Character of Washington.

TWO PRINCETON GRADUATES received honorary degrees on the occasion of the celebration of University Day (Feb. 22nd) at the University of Pennsylvania,—the Rev. Dr. J. Addison Henry '57 of the Board of Trustees, and Prof. Henry van Dyke '73, Dr. van Dyke having been the orator of the day. In presenting Dr. Henry for the degree of S.T.D., Dr. S. Weir Mitchell said: "Reverend Sir: The forty-five years of your continuous pastorate of the Princeton Presbyterian Church in West Philadelphia constitute an unusual term of faithful and efficient service. It is hoped by the Trustees of the University of Pennsylvania that you may be spared to see your jubilee year in the church you have served with such conspicuous success. Recognizing in your life the learned divine, the eminent preacher and a title beyond any we can give, the love and respect of all men, I have the honor and pleasure in the name and by the authority of the Trustees of the University to ask the Provost to confer upon you, James Addison Henry, the degree of Doctor of Sacred Theology." Dr. Mitchell's felicitous introduction of Prof. van Dyke for the degree of LL.D. was: "Reverend Sir: It is our custom to consider that he who is asked to speak here on this day is entitled to the highest honor this University has to offer, but they who know in you the eloquent divine, the cherished poet and the man with whose books as comrades they have wandered by lake and forest, will share the pleasure with which, by the authority of the Trustees of the University of Pennsylvania, I request the Provost to confer upon you, Henry van Dyke, the degree of Doctor of Laws."

PROF. W. B. SCOTT '77 of the Department of Geology has received from the Geological Survey of Natal, South Africa, a collection of tertiary mammals, for examination and a report. These fossils are the first of the kind ever found in South Africa, and may, Prof. Scott thinks, upset some accepted theories of animal distribution.

COMMUNICATIONS

New York, Feb. 26, 1906.

Editor Alumni Weekly,

Sir: I have just learned from Graduate's letter to your periodical that I am on record as an alumnus of Harvard, vintage of '93. This is indeed joyful news. It will make my family proud and happy. It will, I think, especially delight my son, who pitched for Cornell three years ago, and who by lightning calculation must be as much as  $9\frac{1}{2}$  years younger than his father.

Alas, it may not be. Life is real, life is earnest, and a Harvard diploma is not its goal. Owing to a chronic state of pecuniary debility I never even saw Harvard while I was an undergraduate, and I have never received notice of the bestowal of any honorary degree from that extensive emporium of sociological information. If you will ask all the present undergraduates to be patient, I promise them that, if all goes well, they shall see me next June in the living flesh, a ramping, roaring, bred-in-the-bone Princeton man, of the correct vintage of 1876.

W. J. HENDERSON '76.

Dear Mr. Weekly:

Apropos of a "Graduate's" communication in your issue of Feb. 24, 1906, it may be interesting to note that Theodore Roosevelt is not a Harvard man, as your readers may think. Others "in the search for enlightenment" may find this very clearly proven in "The Chicago Daily Maroon" of March 4, 1905, where an editorial appeared congratulating Theodore Roosevelt '97 on his election to the Presidency of these glorious United States. The broadmindedness of this centre of culture seems to have been antedated in this particular by a publication from the great Middle West.

Yours for broadmindedness,

ANOTHER GRADUATE.

The Annual Report of the Treasurer of Princeton University

THE Annual Report of the President of Princeton University, with the Treasurer's Report appended, is now ready for distribution, a limited number of copies being available for interested alumni, on application to the Secretary of the University.

From advance proofs The Weekly has already summarized the President's Report proper. The Report of the Treasurer, covering thirty-two of the fifty-three pages of the pamphlet, gives the University's financial receipts and disbursements for the year Aug. 1st, 1904, to July 31st, 1905, and sets forth in detail the income from the general funds, the several special funds, and the gifts of the year, together with a schedule of the securities held by the University. The total of the year's gifts shown in the report includes, of the donations made through the Committee of Fifty, only the cash subscriptions for the period the report covers. As already stated in these columns, the Committee of Fifty has raised over a million dollars in cash and pledges, during the first year of its work.

A l u m n i R e u n i o n s

TWO hundred and fifty Princeton alumni foregathered at Hotel Schenley, Pittsburgh, on the evening of Feb. 24th, for the thirty-second annual dinner of the Princeton Club of Western Pennsylvania. The banquet room was artistically decorated in orange and black, with large banners at each end, and a tiger skin hung over the speakers' table, where were seated, besides President Robert D. Totten '86 and the speakers, the following honor guests: Hon. Harry White '54, the Rev. Dr. J. H. McIlvaine '66, T. H. White '67, A. A. Speer '69, J. K. Bryden '76, R. W. Patterson '76, Dr. W. R. Crabbe, honorary '89, and Harold G. Murray '93.

The 1900 Tiger, which first appeared at the reunion of that class at Princeton in June, 1905, broke into the room during the dinner and created a sensation, prancing up and down the aisles between the tables. A quartette from the University Glee Club, Ambrose '06, Wells '07, McClintock '07 and Cass '09, were guests of the club, their songs adding much to the enjoyment of the evening. Also, a quartette composed of Frederick Hill '02, J. R. Miller '03, H. H. Armstrong '05 and D. C. Hamilton '05, were kept busy singing all the Princeton songs.

Toastmaster R. D. Totten '86, President of the club, made a brief opening speech, congratulating the dinner committee on its success, and introducing the first speaker of the evening, the Hon. Bayard Henry '76. Mr. Henry responded to the toast "Our Bosses," paying a tribute to the former trustees and presidents of the University from Witherspoon to McCosh. He also referred to the Hon. Grover Cleveland, LL.D. '97, and to Mr. Andrew Carnegie, "who gave Princeton one of the most superb gifts in her history." The Hon. Joseph H. Gaines '86, of Charleston, W. Va., responded to the toast "Princeton and Politics;" Thomas C. Noyes '89, of the Washington Star, spoke on "The Push and the Press," and, after a song by R. F. McDowell '94, Prof. E. G. Elliott

'97, in replying to the toast "President Wilson and the System," outlined very clearly the successful working of the new Preceptorial System at Princeton. The Hon. Harry White '54, the oldest alumnus present, was called upon to speak and was given an enthusiastic ovation. He described Princeton in his time, and insisted that though the oldest graduate present, he was as young as the most recent alumnus in his love and interest in Old Nassau. Harold G. Murray '93, the Secretary of the Committee of Fifty, made a hit by insisting on meeting all the alumni, but refusing to open an office for subscriptions at the dinner.

On the afternoon of the banquet William M. Hall, Jr., '85 gave a luncheon at the Union Club in honor of Bayard Henry '76, at which George R. Van Dusen '77, James H. Lockhart '87, and several others were guests, and at the Pittsburgh Club President Totten '86 entertained at luncheon the three other speakers, J. H. Gaines '86, T. C. Noyes '89 and E. G. Elliott '97, and, in addition, J. B. Shea '85, J. P. Shaw '86, W. S. Arbuthnot '87, L. C. Woods '91, J. F. Guffey '94, C. L. Hamilton '95, Robert Pitcairn, Jr., '98, H. H. Laughlin '00, and A. B. Robinson '00.

The dinner committee, to whose faithful work the success of the reunion was largely due, was composed of Robert D. Totten '86, Joseph B. Shea '85, Lawrence C. Woods '91, Joseph F. Guffey '94, Charles L. Hamilton '95, Benjamin Dangerfield, Jr., '96, Daniel E. Nevin '97, Watson Marshall '99, James R. Wardrop '01, Robert W. Sutton '01, W. B. Salisbury '02, H. Hughert Laughlin '00, A. Blaine Robinson '00, Chairman; W. A. Steinmeyer '02, Secretary.

Elliott '97 to "The Preceptorial System"; John G. Wilson '92 to "Alma Mater"; and J. Walter Lord '95 to "The Younger Alumni." President Ira Remsen of Johns Hopkins responded for that university, Dr. Bernard Steiner for Yale, Mr. Hugh L. Bond for Harvard, and Dr. Winterson for Dickinson. #### THE PRINCETON CLUB OF SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

The Princeton Club of Southern California was formally organized at an enthusiastic dinner held at the Hotel Angelus, Los Angeles, on Feb. 6th. The Angelus Orchestra furnished music for the occasion, and the singing of Princeton songs from the Carmina Princetonia (twenty copies of which had been sent out for the event) was a feature of the evening. Lynn Helm '79 responded to the first toast, "Princeton"; Col. James E. Montgomery '45 to "The Youngest Living Graduate"; T. F. Gordon '89 to "Princeton Athletics," and F. Dalton Parker '96 to "The Oldest Living Graduate." Mr. Guernsey Newlin responded to "Fair Harvard," and Dr. Francis B. Kellogg to "Yale." A letter from President Wilson '79 was read, expressing his regret at not being present. The following officers were elected: President, Lynn Helm '79; Vice-President, E. L. Robinson '80; Secretary, Harold H. Braly '01; Treasurer, H. T. Muzzy '04;

SATURDAY, MARCH 10, 1906

BY THE will of the late Mrs. Josephine Thompson Swann, Princeton University is named as the residuary legatee of her estate, after the deduction of certain bequests for which the document provides. While the details of the will have not yet been made public, it has become common knowledge in Princeton that the valuable property on Stockton street, where Mrs. Swann lived for so many years, is bequeathed to the Borough of Princeton, the house to become the town hall, with offices for the mayor and other borough officials, the extensive grounds to be opened as a public park for the benefit of the citizens of the place. It is also understood that the will sets aside a fund of $30,000 for the maintenance of the town hall and park, that there are several bequests to relatives aggregating perhaps sixty or sixty-five thousand dollars, and that the residue of the estate is to be used for the erection of a hall of residence for graduate students of Princeton University. Just how large a sum the University will receive is not yet announced, as at this writing the value of the estate has not been determined, but it is estimated that between $250,000 and $400,000 will be available for a graduate hall,—a gratifying beginning for the proposed Graduate College, the plans for which call for a fund of two and a half million dollars.

Mrs. SWANN DIED at her Washington home on March 2nd. The funeral services were held at Trinity Church and the old cemetery on Witherspoon street, on the 5th. Ever since she came to Princeton as the wife of the Hon. John R. Thompson, who represented New Jersey in the United States Senate from 1853 until his death in 1862, she had been an interesting and attractive member of the community, and one of its most generous benefactors. She was a leader in the formation of the Rocky Hill Washington's Headquarters Association, she gave to the Princeton cemetery its mortuary chapel, and her generosity was extended to the Ivy Hall Library on Mercer street, in the building which she owned, and which was originally the Princeton Law School. Some years after the death of Senator Thompson, his widow became the wife of the Hon. Thomas Swann, Ex-Governor of Maryland, whom, also, she survived by several years.

THE GOOD NEWS of Mrs. Swann's bequest to the University was followed by the announcement, at the meeting of the Board of Trustees on March 8th, of gifts aggregating nearly a quarter of a million dollars,—to be exact, $245,577.45; the intention of DeWitt C. Blair '56, trustee of the University, to extend Blair Hall along University Place to the Halsted Observatory, with an entrance to the campus below the Observatory, and the presentation to the University, by a group of generous alumni, of the Passage property, between the Guyot house and the Carpenter building, on Nassau street. By this welcome acquisition, comprising a strip of land with a frontage of about fifty or sixty feet, and a depth extending back to the old Gymnasium, the University now controls all the property between the Dean's House and University Hall, except the site of the First Presbyterian Church and the Carpenter lot.

THE APPOINTMENT of Harold G. Murray '93 as Secretary of the Committee of Fifty, in place of George W. Burleigh '92, resigned; the election of Enno Littmann, Ph.D., Librarian of the Oriental Department and Lecturer in Semitic Philology, as Professor of the Semitic Languages, and a leave of absence for one year for Prof. W. M. Daniels '88, of the Department of Economics, were also announced.

AT THIS MEETING of the board the resignations of Col. John J. McCook and Charles B. Alexander '70 as trustees of the University were presented and accepted.

STILL ANOTHER ANNOUNCEMENT of much interest was that by the unanimous vote of the Alumni Dormitory Committee the dormitory presented to the University by the members of the ten classes '92 to '01 has been named Patton Hall, in honor of Dr. Francis Landey Patton, and that an appropriate inscription to this effect is to be carved in the west wall of the four-story tower of the building,—this notable addition to the campus being the gift of ten of the eleven classes whose undergraduate courses were wholly under the administration of President Patton.

PATTON HALL, by the way, is now nearing completion, its gray limestone walls looming up imposingly on the east side of Brokaw Field. The stone work is practically finished, and the strong, simple, classic outlines of the building, in harmony with the long line of Gothic bordering that side of the campus, make a fine impression. The interior finishings are now being installed, plastering will be started early in April, and it is expected that Patton Hall will be entirely completed before Commencement, and ready for the students at the opening of the next college year.

TWENTY-FIVE OF THE THIRTY-TWO trustees were present at this week's meeting of the board, namely, President Wilson '79, the Rev. Dr. E. R. Craven '42, the Hon. John A. Stewart, the Rev. S. B. Dod '57, the Rev. Dr. J. Addison Henry '57, M. Taylor Pyne '77, the Rev. Dr. D. R. Frazer '61, the Rev. Dr. G. B. Stewart '76, the Rev. Dr. John Dixon, the Rev. Dr. M. W. Jacobus '77, the Hon. W. J. Magie '52, the Hon. Bayard Henry '76, the Rev. Dr. S. J. McPherson '74, Henry W. Green '91, DeWitt C. Blair '56, the Rev. Dr. Charles Wood, the Hon. Grover Cleveland, Cleveland H. Dodge '79, Mr. A. D. Russell, the Rev. Dr. John DeWitt '61, and Robert Garrett '97, of the life members, and David B. Jones '76, the Hon. J. L. Cadwalader '56, Alexander Van Rensselaer '71, and the Hon. Nathaniel Ewing '69, of the Alumni Trustees.

THE CONTRACT FOR MCCOSH HALL, the new recitation building to be erected on the academy lot east of Marquand Chapel, has been awarded to Mr. William R. Matthews of Princeton, builder of the Fitz-Randolph Gateway, the new Cottage Club-house, etc. The price stated in the contract is $364,365, this fund, together with the sum required for building the foundations of the hall, being the gift of several friends of the University whose names have not been announced.

AS SHOWN IN THE ARCHITECT'S perspective reproduction in The Weekly last fall, McCosh Hall will be a very handsome addition to the collegiate gothic architecture of the University. The walls are to be of gray Indiana limestone, extending four hundred feet along McCosh Walk and one hundred feet on Washington Road. The relief the hall will afford to the overcrowded conditions in the classrooms will be very much appreciated both by the faculty and students. Besides the larger lecture rooms, one seating six hundred, one for four hundred, one for two hundred and fifty, and one for one hundred and fifty, there are to be fourteen recitation rooms, seating variously from fifty to seventy-five students, and twenty-six rooms for preceptorial conferences, which are especially needed since the introduction of the new system of instruction. The forty-four rooms of the building are to be reached by nine separate entrances, so arranged as to facilitate the coming and going of classes with the minimum of confusion and noise. During the winter the foundations have been completed, and work on the superstructure will be started as soon as the materials can be assembled. The contract calls for the completion of the building by May 1st, 1907.

THE LATEST MEETING OF THE American Intercollegiate Football Rules Committee, held in New York on March 3rd, was largely devoted to definitions and minor amendments of rules already adopted. A more adequate definition of holding was agreed upon as follows: "The players of the side that has possession of the ball shall not block or otherwise obstruct the opponents except with the body. Holding or unlawful obstruction includes (a) grappling opponents with the hands, (b) placing the hands upon an opponent to push him away from the play, (c) circling to any degree any part of an opponent with the arm, (d) any use of the arms to lift an opponent in blocking. The only allowable use of the arms in blocking or obstructing an opponent is with the arms close to the body. A player running with the ball may ward off an opponent with the hands. The penalty for holding shall be a loss of fifteen yards."

THE COMMITTEE ALSO ADOPTED this rule on hurdling: "Hurdling in the open field is prohibited; such hurdling to consist of jumping over an opponent who is still on his feet." Hurdling the line also was prohibited, the definition being "jumping or attempting to jump over a player in the line of scrimmage with the feet or knees foremost within a distance of five yards on either side of the point where the ball is snapped." Tripping was defined as "obstructing a player below his knee with the foot or leg below the knee."

THE NEW LEGISLATION on a fair catch is: "A fair catch consists in catching the ball after it has been kicked by one of the opponents before it touches the ground, or in similarly catching a punt-out of the catcher's own side, provided the player making the catch has signalled his intention of making a fair catch by raising his hand clearly above his head and takes not more than two steps after making the catch. It is not a fair catch if the ball after the kick is touched by another of his side before the catch. Opponents who are offside shall not in any way interfere with a player who has an opportunity for making a fair catch, nor shall the player be thrown to the ground after such a catch is made, unless he has advanced more than two steps after making the catch. The point where the catch is actually made shall be the mark, and the side making the catch may put the ball into play from that point, either by a free kick or a scrimmage." Hereafter the referee instead of the umpire is to decide whether there is interference with the fair catch, also regarding the throwing of the catcher.

As an amendment to the new rule providing that "when a ball has been kicked any players of the kicking side shall be on side as soon as the ball touches the ground," the following was agreed upon: "In case of such kicked ball striking the ground, it shall not be kicked further or kicked at from its position on the ground or while bounding, by any player of either side." Also: "If a kick or forward pass goes out of bounds before crossing the opponents' goal line, it shall belong to the opponents at the point where it crossed the side line." Also: "Penalties that would carry the ball over the goal line shall carry the ball back to the one-yard line. Thereafter the distance to the goal line shall be halved for each offense." The actual playing time of the game was reduced from seventy to sixty minutes,—halves of thirty minutes each, with an intermission of ten minutes.

ALTHOUGH ONE OF THE members of the committee, in an interview before the meeting, declared his intention of urging a rule requiring seven men of the attacking team to be on the line of scrimmage when the ball is put in play, that proposal, for which there is such a general demand, did not, it seems, come before this meeting. One cannot but admire the sublime confidence and childlike trust of some of the members of the committee, in the efficacy of the rules already adopted, to "kill" mass play. Though all the world is against them, they stand firm! And let no cynic suggest that if the desire of the majority of the committee were as strong as the public protestations of certain of its members in favor of an open game, they would not stop at half-way measures. . . . The next meeting is set for March 30th.

COL. HUGH LENOX SCOTT, U. S. A., Governor of Jolo, and General Horace Porter, late United States Ambassador to France, addressed Princeton audiences this week. General Porter delivered an entertaining lecture on Diplomacy, before a large audience in Alexander Hall on the evening of March 7th, in the Spencer Trask course, and Col. Scott, who is at his home in Princeton, on leave, spoke interestingly on conditions in the Philippines, to the members of the Nassau Club, on the evening of the 5th. As is well known, the distinguished Governor of Jolo is a brother of Prof W. B. Scott '77.

OTHER RECENT EXTRA-CURRICULUM EVENTS included a lecture before the English department by Prof. W. A. Nielson of Columbia University, on Shakespeare's Treatment of Sentimentalism; an address on The Genesis and Growth of Traffic Facilities on the Brooklyn Bridge, by Mr. Archibald McLean of New York, under the auspices of the Engineering Society; an address on the Jerome campaign, by Prof. W. C. Langdon of New York, before the recently organized Municipal Government Club of Princeton; and the first of the season's Kneisel Quartet concerts, in Murray Hall on the afternoon of March 9th. Dr. Bliss Perry, editor of the Atlantic Monthly, is to be the next speaker in the English department course, his subject being Walt Whitman; and the ladies of the Present Day Club of Princeton announce a song recital by Mr. Charles W. Clark, barytone, for Alexander Hall on the evening of March 17th.

PRESIDENT WILSON '79 is to be one of the speakers at the dinner in honor of the Chinese commissioners to Great Britain, at the University Club this Saturday night. On March 13th Dr. Wilson will address the students of Oberlin College, and on the 14th, he is to lecture on "Patriotism" at the Youngstown, Ohio, Lyceum, and visit the Rayen School. Dean Andrew F. West '74 leaves for California next week, to make an address on "The Changing Conception of the Faculty in American Universities," at the annual meeting of the Association of American Universities, to be held in San Francisco on March 17th.

PRIZES FOR ECONOMIC ESSAYS: In order to arouse an interest in the study of topics relating to commerce and industry, and to stimulate an examination of the value of college training for business men, a committee composed of Prof. J. Laurence Laughlin, University of Chicago, Chairman; Prof. J. B. Olark, Columbia University; Prof. Henry C. Adams, University of Michigan; Mr. Horace White, New York City, and Hon. Carroll D. Wright, Clark College, are offering for the third time, four prizes for the best studies on any one of the following subjects: 1. The practical wisdom of freeing raw materials, essential to subsequent manufactures, from customs-duties when entering the United States. 2. The best methods of obtaining an elastic currency in times of panic. 3. To what extent, and in what form, are socialistic tenets held in the United States? 4. In what respect, and to what extent, have combinations among American railways limited or modified the influence of competition? 5. The best methods of avoiding resort to force by labor unions in their contests with employers. 6. The effect of "trusts" upon the prices of goods produced by them. 7. How far does the earning power of skill obtain under a regime of trade unions? 8. A critical study of modern commercial methods for distributing products to consumers. 9. The development of economic theory since John Stuart Mill.

A FIRST PRIZE of one thousand dollars, and a second prize of five hundred dollars, in cash, are offered for the best studies presented by Class A, composed exclusively of all persons who have received the bachelor's degree from an American college in 1895, or thereafter; and a first prize of three hundred dollars, and a second prize of one hundred and fifty dollars, in cash, are offered for the best studies presented by Class B, composed of persons who, at the time the papers are sent in, are undergraduates of an American college. No one in Class A may compete in Class B; but any one in Class B may compete in Class A. The committee reserves to itself the right to award the two prizes of $1000 and $500 to undergraduates, if the merits of the papers demand it. The ownership of the copyright of successful studies will vest in the donors, and it is expected that, without precluding the use of these papers as theses for higher degrees, they will cause them to be issued in some permanent form. Competitors are advised that the studies should be thorough, expressed in good English, and, although not limited as to length, they should not be needlessly expanded. They should be inscribed with an assumed name, the year when the bachelor's degree was or is likely to be received, and accompanied by a sealed envelope giving the real name and address of the competitor, and the institution which conferred the degree, or in which he is studying. The papers should be sent on or before June 1st, 1907, to Prof. J. Laurence Laughlin, University of Chicago, Box 145, Faculty Exchange, Chicago, Ill.

P RINCETON'S baseball season begins two weeks from this Saturday, March 24th, when the opening game will be played with New York University at Princeton, if the weather permits. The candidates from the three upper classes were called out the first of this week, and, including the freshmen who were retained, about sixty players reported. The squad has since been reduced to about twenty-five, and these candidates are practicing daily in the cage. If the weather keeps good, Coach Cosgrave and Captain Reid expect to be able to begin outdoor practice by the end of this week.

The prospects are good for a strong fielding nine this season. There are some unusually promising players in the freshman class, including Heyniger, from Lawrenceville, pitcher and fielder; Vaughn, from Exeter, (substitute end on the football team) infielder or outfielder; Dillon, from Exeter, (the football quarterback) outfielder; Sides, from St. Paul's School at Garden City, infielder; Jones, from Rayen School, pitcher; Warwick from the Princeton Preparatory School and Myers from Mercersburg, infielders. Of last year's nine, Captain Reid '06, shortstop; Cooney '07, catcher; D. Doyle '05, now in the Graduate School, and Bryam '06, pitchers; McLean '07, third base; Bard '06, first base; and L. Doyle '06, right field, are available for this season. Captain Wells '05, second base, and Forsythe '05, left field, were graduated last June; Cook '08, pitcher and right fielder, has left college; and the center-field position was left vacant by the death, last summer, of Heim '08. Harlan '08, a substitute last year, is showing good form and may secure Captain Wells' position at second base. And among the other substitutes who may make good are Newcomb '07, Wister '08, Hamill '08 and Fish '08.

With the good new material to fill the vacancies, it looks as though the fielding positions would be well taken care of, and the pitching force, with Doyle, Bryam and Heyniger, should be fairly strong. But the problem will be, as usual, to develop a hard-hitting team, and until the candidates get some outdoor practice it is impossible to judge of their batting ability. If the new men can hit the ball as well as they seem able to field, Captain Reid's team should be a good one.

TRIANGLE CLUB

Here is the schedule of the performances of Tabasco-Land, by the Triangle Club, with the exception of the undecided Philadelphia date,—probably during the second week in May. The first Princeton performance, for undergraduates only, will be given during the first week in April:

- April 7 Matinee and evening in the Grand Ball Room of the Waldorf-Astoria, New York.
- 14 English's Opera House, Indianapolis, Ind.
- 16 The Odeon, St. Louis, Mo.
- 17 Macauley's Theatre, Louisville, Ky.
- May 4 Albaugh's Theatre, Baltimore, Md.
- 5 The Belasco, Washington, D. C.
- 12 Orange Music Hall, Orange, N. J.
- 26 Casino, Princeton, (Harvard-Princeton baseball game.)
- June 9 Commencement performance, at the Casino, Princeton.

TRACK

The Princeton track team showed the benefit of their indoor practice, under the direction of Coach A. F. Copeland, by winning the Fordham indoor meet at the Twenty-Second Regiment Armory, New York, on the evening of March 3rd, with nineteen points—three firsts, one second and one third. Yale was second with fourteen points, and the Irish A. A. Club third with twelve. L. H. Simons '08 won first in the seventy-yards dash, novice, in 7 3-5 seconds; R. A. Gamble '09 was first in the seventy-yards dash, handicap, and Captain W. M. Armstrong '07 won the final heat in the seventy-yards high hurdles, defeating Amsler, of Pennsylvania, the present intercollegiate champion high hurdler, by two feet, in an exciting finish. L. Goodrich '06 was second in the pole vault, with nine feet, six inches, and a handicap of nine inches, and H. L. Moore '07, scratch, was third, with ten feet. In the two-mile relay race between Pennsylvania, Columbia, and Princeton, Pennsylvania was first, Columbia second, and Princeton third.

GYMNASTICS

The Princeton gym. team was defeated by New York University, 26-22, in a dual meet at New York on March 2nd. On March 3rd Princeton and Lehigh held a dual gymnastic exhibition in the Lehigh Gymnasium, at South Bethlehem, Pa.

WRESTLING AND FENCING

Princeton defeated Pennsylvania in wrestling, but lost to Cornell in fencing, in the Princeton Gymnasium on March 2nd. Of the wrestling matches Princeton won five and lost two, the winners being J. F. Cross '06, featherweight; E. O. Howell '07, specialweight; A. H. Scott '06, welterweight; J. R. Dickson '08, middleweight, and R. R. King '09, light-heavyweight. R. I. Mount '08, lightweight, lost to C. T. Brown of Pennsylvania, and G. H. Fryer '09, heavyweight, was thrown by R. Folwell of Pennsylvania. Two weeks ago the Princeton wrestling team won from Pennsylvania, 4-3.

The fencing match with Cornell was very close and exciting, the result being in doubt until the last bout, when, after a third extra period, Heckheimer of Cornell finally defeated Captain Breckenridge '07, winning the match for Cornell, five bouts to four. The Princeton team was composed of Captain Breckenridge, K. R. McAlpin '05, P.G., and O. M. Auerbach '09, Breckenridge winning two of his bouts, McAlpin and Auerbach one each.

ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL

The Princeton association football team defeated the Mount Washington Country Club of Baltimore, 2-1, on the latter's grounds, March 3rd. Notwithstanding rain and a muddy field, the match was well played and exciting. After the game the Princeton team was given a banquet at the Mount Washington Country Club.

THE President of the Rocky Mountain Princeton Club, James H. Pershing '88, sends the following account of their annual dinner in Denver: The annual reunion and dinner of the Rocky Mountain Princeton Club was held at the University Club in Denver, Feb. 15th. Formal after-dinner speeches were abandoned and a general conversation about Princeton affairs took their place. The activity of Harvard, Yale and Stanford in sending representative men to visit Colorado was commented upon in contrast with Princeton's apparent indifference. The failure to secure the anticipated visit from the Triangle Club was reported, it appearing that that institution was regulating its tours upon the cold Klaw & Erlanger proposition of profit, and while laying up substantial treasure on earth, could not afford to chance a loss in spreading the gospel in this remote quarter. The comparative merits of the monastic life, at one time supposed to be conducive to high thinking, and the present-day atmosphere of one-hundred-thousand-dollar club-houses, also came in for a fling. Some of the old fogies were fearful lest valued traditions were being endangered. Some pathetic accounts were given of upper-class obsequiousness and lower-class cephalic oedema as an accompaniment of Princeton club life. It would appear therefore that an efficient cure for hazing is in sight. The opinion was hazarded that naturally undergraduate Princeton was a reflex of twentieth-century men and methods, Socratic and Plutocratic. All were cheered with the hope that while the spirit of Witherspoon and McCosh might slumber, it would awaken in apt time to save the tradition of Old Nassau. Those present were W. S. Ward '69, Calvin Whitney '79, Z. C. Felt '79, J. C. Murray '84, William M. Spaulding '87, J. H. Pershing '88, G. P. Shumacher '90, E. Waite Elder '91, J. Frank Adams '91, F. S. Titsworth '93, J. Salisbury Smith '95, W. Rolla Wilson '96, S. H. Thompson, Jr., '97, J. W. Graham, Jr., '97, F. F. Walpole '02, H. D. Philips '04, Oscar D. Cass '05, Henry Swan '05, F. W. Doolittle '05, and Donald McLean '07.

PRINCETON CLUB OF ALBANY

At the annual dinner of the Princeton Club of Albany, N. Y., on March 2nd, at the Fort Orange Club, Albany, the Rev. Charles A. Richmond '83, president of the club, presided, and Dean Andrew F. West '74 responded for the University, the other speakers being David A. Thompson '68, McCready Sykes '94, and E. P. Prentice '98. It was a very successful reunion, about thirty alumni being present.

Walter C. Bond is the subject of one of a series of articles on Toledo Young Men in Business, in The Toledo Daily Blade. The Feb. 17th issue of that paper contains a picture of Mr. Bond, and an article from which we quote the following:

In Walter C. Bond, cashier of the Merchants and Clerks' Saving bank, Toledo can boast of the youngest bank cashier in Ohio, if not in the country. Mr. Bond was born in this city in 1882 and is a son of O. S. Bond, president of the Merchants and Clerks' Savings bank and one of the most prominent and influential residents in Toledo.

Walter attended the local public schools and spent two years in the Toledo High, after which he went to the preparatory institution at Lawrenceville, N. J. He remained there two years and then entered Princeton in 1901. In the fall of 1903 he left college and began his banking career as bookkeeper with the Merchants and Clerks'. In a short time he was promoted to the position of teller and in the spring of 1904 he was made assistant cashier and elected to the board of directors. Early last year Mr. Bond was again advanced, this time receiving a cashier's commission, putting him in this responsible position at the age of twenty-three.

Although Walter owes his present high standing in the financial world to his father, yet he is perfectly competent to discharge the duties of cashier and in the short time he has been in the office he has shown unusual executive ability, and a grasp of detail that might only be expected in one much older in years.

Mr. Bond is also Assistant Treasurer of the Toledo Country Club, and Secretary of The Princeton Alumni Association of Northwestern Ohio.

BURTON G. WINTON '82

Burton G. Winton '82 died at Addison, N. Y., on Feb. 8th. He was born at Addison, Nov. 13th, 1859, and entered college from the schools of that town. Since his graduation in 1882 he had been, except for a very brief period after leaving college, a resident of his native place, engaged in manufacturing. His fellow citizens held him in esteem as a man of the highest character, broad-minded, always standing for the best things in every department of life, interested in active politics, but never holding office, an elder and active worker in the Church, and superintendent of the Sunday School until ill health compelled his resignation. His college mates cherish him in memory as just the kind of man of whom such a life history might be expected. He played on the 'varsity nine, and in work and friendship, as in sport, was ever the same quiet, reliable, high-minded man. He is survived by his wife, a son and a daughter.

FREDERICK CLARK PAULMIER '94

Frederick Clark Paulmier '94 died at his home in Madison, N. J., on March 3rd. He was thirty-three years old. After graduation from Princeton he took advanced work at Columbia University, receiving the degree of Ph.D. from that university in 1900. He was then an instructor at Columbia for one year, and had since been zoologist in the State Museum at Albany.

THE will of Mrs. Josephine Thomson Swann, in which Princeton University is made the residuary legatee of her estate, was admitted to probate this week. The details of the several bequests are thereby made public, although it will be some time before the executors will be able to report definitely on the amount available for building the residential hall for graduate students, which is the special object of Mrs. Swann's benefaction to the University.

PERSONAL BEQUESTS amounting to $34,000 are provided for in the will, and $13,000 is left to Trinity Church in Princeton, of which Mrs. Swann was a member. As mentioned here last week, Belgrade, Mrs. Swann's Princeton home at No. 50 Stockton street, is bequeathed to Prof. W. M. Sloane, the Hon. Bayard Stockton '72, and Francis Larkin, Jr., '79, as trustees, "to be held in perpetual trust for the use of the municipal corporation known as 'The Mayor and Council of the Borough of Princeton,' and the inhabitants of said borough as and for a public hall and garden." The sum of $25,000 is set aside for the purpose of remodeling the house and placing upon it a tablet engraved 'Thomson Hall,' an office for the mayor and a council chamber are to be fitted up in the house, and the grounds are to be maintained as laid out by Mrs. Swann. Certain portraits, pictures, and works of arts are to remain in the house, and the will provides that rooms may be rented for "social, political or for public gatherings." A further fund of $30,000 is set aside for the maintenance of this notable bequest to the borough.

AFTER THESE BEQUESTS have been satisfied, the residue of the estate goes to the Trustees of Princeton University, for "the erection and construction, upon the grounds of the said University, of a building to be known as 'The John R. Thomson Graduate College of Princeton University,' the said building to contain sitting and sleeping rooms for officers and students, with a dining hall, kitchen and the necessary appurtenances, in a portion of the building entirely separate and apart from such sitting and sleeping rooms. The living rooms shall be rented at the best prices they will command, to graduate, senior and junior students of the University, and the income derived from such rentals, after deducting the cost of maintaining said building, shall be devoted to the maintenance of as many fellowships of four hundred dollars each as the funds will provide. These fellowships shall be awarded by a committee to be designated from time to time by the Trustees of the University, and shall be given to Bachelors of Arts of the male sex, of high character and ability, who would not otherwise be able to continue their studies at the University, and they shall be terminable at the discretion of said committee. The fellows, to a number not exceeding thirty, shall have unfurnished rooms in said building free of rent. The tuition fees of the fellows shall be remitted by the Trustees as a condition of this gift. The number and situation of rooms allotted to the officers and fellows shall be fixed by the said committee but in no case shall the rent of more than thirty rooms be remitted. The board at the college table shall be regulated by the committee, and the fellows of the graduate college shall pay the regular charge therefor, and they shall eat at the college table, unless dispensed therefrom by the Dean of the Graduate Faculty, for good and sufficient reasons. Other students of the University may be admitted to the college table at the discretion of the said Dean."

MRS. SWANN ALSO DIRECTED "that the said fellowships shall be bestowed upon bachelors of arts who are engaged in literary and scientific research other than that directly connected with professional studies, so called; that said fellowships shall be known as 'The John R. Thomson Fellowships'; that in making the appointments to said fellowships Bachelors of Arts of Princeton University shall have preference in the order named: first, from the borough of Princeton; second, from the county of Mercer; third, from other parts of the state of New Jersey; provided always, that the attainments of such persons are fully equal to those of other applicants. In default of such candidates the appointments shall be open to male Americans holding the degree of A.B. from any approved college or university. No one of such fellowships shall be given to or held by a married man."

IT IS ALSO WISELY PROVIDED "that in case the number of said applicants for said fellowships who come within the above designations shall not, at any time or times, be sufficient worthily to fill all the said fellowships, then the surplus moneys arising from said rentals shall be placed in an endowment fund, the income of which, after the fund reaches the sum of one hundred thousand dollars, shall be applied to a University Professorship in American History." Prof. W. M. Sloane, the Hon. Bayard Stockton '72, and Francis Larkin, Jr., '79, the trustees of the bequest to the borough, are also named as the executors of the will, which is dated July 30th, 1902. There are several codicils, none of which, however, affects the foregoing bequests.

PROF. JAMES HOPWOOD JEANS, Master of Arts of Trinity College, Cambridge (1902), the brilliant young scientist who recently came to Princeton as Professor of Applied Mathematics, has just been elected a member of the Royal Society of London, an honor which Prof. Jeans shares with only two others on this side of the Atlantic, Prof. Rutherford of McGill University and Prof. Ernest Brown of Haverford College.

THE PRINCETON FRIENDS of Gordon Johnston '96 were not surprised to learn, by the newspaper reports of the recent engagement between United States troops and outlaw Moros at Mount Dajo, that Lieut. Johnston was one of the first to scale the rim of the crater where the enemy was intrenched. For that's the kind of a "boy" he was. As president of his sophomore class he was always among the first to scale the rim of the crater of volcanic underclass rivalry. Though too light for the varsity eleven, as a substitute and a member of the scrub he showed the proper spirit. He was an editor of The Princetonian, and in Whig and Murray Halls, also, he was a leader.

ACCORDING TO THE REPORTS, while commanding (and leading) one of the attacking columns, Lieut. Johnston was seriously wounded, a slug from a bursting bomb, apparently, passing through his shoulder. Upon learning of this, President Roosevelt sent by cable the following:

Lieut. Gordon Johnston.

Manila:

How are you?

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

This was the reply:

Zamboanga.

President,

Washington:

Fine; thanks.

JOHNSTON.

During the Spanish war Lieut. Johnston was Col. Roosevelt's orderly, in the Rough Riders.

ANOTHER MEMBER OF THIS CLASS who is in the government service, William F. Doty, American Consul at Tahiti, Society Islands, has recently had some exciting experiences. From a letter addressed to his classmates to be published in the forthcoming '96 Decennial Record, which C. B.

Bostwick, the Class Secretary, is now preparing, The Weekly is permitted to quote the following concerning the cyclone which recently devastated Tahiti and French Oceania: "The sea inundated the city of Papeete, lifting its waves ten or fifteen feet over the quay. Buildings along the water front, to the number of more than seventy-five, were swept away, including many fine government edifices and mercantile establishments. Among them the American Consulate, that had sheltered my brother for fifteen years, and myself more than three years, collapsed to the regret not only of myself and my relatives, but also of the entire American colony here. It was my misfortune to be in the district of Atiewaona, inspecting a large sugar plantation, when the storm broke. Fearful that the Consulate at Papeete might be destroyed and jeopardize the lives of my mother and sister and my brother's son, and perceiving that it was impossible to take a carriage or even a horse over the debris of fallen trees and houses, I started on foot in the morning and walked about thirty miles in nine hours. Nearly all the bridges were down, and the swollen streams were exceedingly difficult to pass through. Having accomplishing half of the distance, I was confronted with an apparently unsurmountable barrier; the large iron bridge over a deep river, in the district of Paeca, had been swept away, and to attempt to swim the river was to court almost certain death, so the natives informed me. Two Tahitians volunteered to take me in a canoe to the other shore, by way of the sea. In the midst of very large waves we passed through the wreckage of the demolished bridge, and after a most exciting struggle reached shore again and I continued my journey on foot. Great trees were bending over me as I hurried on in the storm. At length reaching Papeete I found the Consulate destroyed, albeit the lives of my kindred had been spared. My library, however, and a collection of curios which I greatly prized had been swept away. Nor can I, even yet, drive that storm out of my thoughts as we wait patiently day by day for news from distant islands, where it is feared that hundreds if not thousands have lost their lives."

BEFORE GOING TO TROPICAL TAHITI as the American Consul, Mr. Doty was a missionary "on the ice-bound coast of St. Lawrence Island, near Behring Strait, among Eskimo," where also he was an agent of the United States Government, making meteorological observations for the Navy and the Agricultural Departments. Writing of this experience, Mr. Doty says: "On occasion I went on hunting trips with the Eskimo far out to sea, and began to love somewhat their dangerous sport. The distress of the Eskimo was very great at times by reason of scarcity of food; but a worse phase than that oppressed me, their proneness to commit suicide when under the spell of a demon, which severe pain always signified. While I was attempting to dissuade persons in comparatively sound health from taking their lives, in some never to be forgotten instances the suicide took place in my very presence. Sadly, I have followed as a pall-bearer the remains of these unfortunates, wrapped in their winding sheets of fur, over the frozen plain and far up the steep, icy slopes of a mountain to their last resting places. I cherished a plan in those days to secure to all American Eskimo St. Lawrence Island as a reservation, believing that, if the Government would place there a large herd of reindeer, the fifteen hundred Eskimo, along the Alaskan coast, would find along with the St. Lawrence Island natives an excellent resort from whiskey traders and immoral prospectors on the mainland, who were bent on their destruction. Later, I am glad to say, a reindeer herd was located there." Mr. Doty adds that during his consulate at Tahiti he has seen only three Princeton men.

THE MARCH INTERCOLLEGIAN contains several articles by Princeton men. The Rev. T. H. P. Sailer '89 writes on Suggestions as to Policy in Mission Study; Prof. Lucius Hopkins Miller '97 on The Training of College Bible Class Leaders; and B. O. Satterwhite '04, Secretary of the Columbia University Young Men's Christian Association, on Conserving the Impressions of the Nashville Convention.

COMMUNICATION

Editor,

Princeton Alumni Weekly,
Sir:

Are the members of the Rocky Mountain Princeton Club consistent? I couple the two following sentences from your account of their last annual dinner:

"The failure to secure the anticipated visit from the Triangle Club was reported, it appearing that that institution was regulating its tours upon the cold Klaw & Erlanger proposition of profit, and while laying up substantial treasure on earth, could not afford to chance a loss in spreading the gospel in this remote quarter."

"The opinion was hazarded that naturally undergraduate Princeton was a reflex of twentieth-century men and methods, Socratic and Plutocratic. All were cheered with the hope that while the spirit of Witherspoon and McCosh might slumber, it would awaken in apt time to save the tradition of Old Nassau."

Do the Rocky Mountain members hope to awaken the spirit of Witherspoon and McCosh by advertising the University broadcast by the "Socratic and Plutocratic," undergraduate pirouetting through the country at large, disguised as the "Female Ballet Dancer?"

Shades of Witherspoon and McCosh, also John Calvin, forbid such methods!

Dean Fine's Report to the Trustees

DEAN Henry B. Fine '80 has prepared for publication in The Weekly the following extract from his report to the Board of Trustees, at their meeting last week :

The number of men dropped at the end of the first term because of failure in their studies was the same as last year, namely 71. They were distributed as follows among the several departments and classes :

	A. B.	B. S., LITT. B.	C. E.	TOTAL
Seniors	2	2	1	5
Juniors	4	1	0	5
Sophomores	7	11	3	21
Freshmen	10	14	11	35
Specials	2	3	0	5
	25	31	15	71

This year, as last, more than half of the dropped students were freshmen or first year specials. About nine per cent. of the freshmen failed and about four per cent. of the men in the three upper classes. It is to be expected that a class will lose many more men at the end of its first term in college than at any other time. Some men succeed in passing the entrance examinations who are not adequately prepared. Others are demoralized for a time by the transition from school to college life. Last year I was inclined to attribute the failures of the freshmen almost as largely to idleness as to inadequate preparation. But this year, generally speaking, the freshmen have been industrious. One reason, and I think the principal reason, that there was not a more marked decrease in the number of failures is that the preceptorial method of instruction led to an earlier and more complete discovery of the men who were not fitted to do the work required of them here.

Five less juniors were dropped than last year and five less specials, but, on the other hand, two more seniors and eight more sophomores.

The B. S. Department makes a decidedly better showing, relatively speaking, this year than last, especially in the freshman class, which indicates that students are already entering that department more fully prepared to meet the requirements of our revised course of study.

Some surprise may be felt that the preceptorial method of instruction has not lessened the number of failures, but a little reflection will convince one that this result should not have been expected of the method, at least at the outset. The preceptorial system was not introduced for the purpose of keeping weak students in college, but for the purpose of promoting scholarship in the University. Its immediate effect has been greatly to increase the diligence of our undergraduates and the intelligence and satisfaction with which they pursue their studies. More work and a better quality of work has been done by most of the students in the courses to which it has been applied. As a consequence, it has become more difficult rather than less difficult for weak and idle students to pass in such courses. In particular it is a necessary condition of success in a preceptorial course that a student do good and consistent work throughout the term. When it is remembered how largely it has been the practice of our undergraduates to neglect term work and to rely upon cramming for the final examinations to carry them through, it will be seen that at the outset the preceptorial method was quite as likely to increase as to diminish the number of failures. That the method has been introduced without increasing the number of failures shows how generally even the more careless of our students have responded to its stimulus.

FOOTBALL REFORM: THE AVERAGE GAIN IN MASS PLAY

MEMBERS of the American Inter-collegiate Football Rules Committee have repeatedly asserted that the new rule requiring a gain of ten yards in three downs, in order to retain possession of the ball, will "kill" mass play. Their invariable rejoinder to the demand that the seven forwards be required to remain in their positions in the line of scrimmage until the ball is put in play, is that the legislation they have already adopted is a sufficient guarantee of the open game, and of the cleansing of the great college sport of those objectionable formations which have brought it into such wide disrepute. They hold that with ten yards to gain in three downs, it will hereafter be impossible to make the increased distance by such formations. Notwithstanding that they have weakened the defense while still allowing one lineman to be drawn back on the attack, the football legislators declare, in short, that mass play is not to be relied upon for an average gain of  $3\frac{1}{2}$  yards per down.

While heartily endorsing most of the amendments to the rules the new committee has so far promulgated, we have been unable to agree with the foregoing optimistic opinion concerning the solution of the most vital problem in football reform, the problem of effectually doing away with the lineman-back subversion of the game.

Fortunately, however, this is not a matter which need be left to opinion; for it may easily be settled by an appeal to documentary evidence. If it can be shown, by the records of football games played during the last few years, when the mass formations have reached their highest development, that it is impossible to make an average gain of  $3\frac{1}{2}$  yards by such formations, the committee's contention might be conceded,—though not definitely proven, in view of the fact that they have weakened the defense. But if, on the other hand, it can be demonstrated that, without the defense weakened, it has been possible in the past to make an average gain of  $3\frac{1}{2}$  yards by the style of play under consideration, it would seem plain that the committee has by no means solved this most important problem in the reform of the game.

Now in order to gain light on this interesting matter, we have been looking over some old accounts of football games played in the last three years, and in the course of an hour's cursory investigation we have come upon the following rather striking evidence in refutation of this particular contention of the spokesmen of the committee:

The Yale Alumni Weekly of November 18th, 1903, describing the Yale-Princeton game of that year, which Princeton won, 11-6, and in which most of Yale's gains were made by the tackle-back play in one form or another, says: "Yale made a touchdown in the first fifteen minutes of play with surprising ease, 60 yards in six plays straight through the line." An average of ten yards to the rush, or thirty yards for three downs. Following the account of DeWitt's seventy-five-yards run for a touchdown, the record continues: "Not very long after the next kick-off, Yale had carried the ball 42 yards to Princeton's eighteen-yard line in four plays, when the half ended." Ten and a half yards per down. Again: "In the second half Yale took the ball on a fumble at Princeton's forty-yard line and in five plays had carried it to the eight-yard line [six and two-fifths yards to the down], where Hogan's fumble, or what may be more accurately and without offense described as a Princeton steal, spoiled what seemed a certain touchdown; for Princeton was utterly unable to stop the Yale advance. Not long after that Yale had the ball on Princeton's ten-yard line. The gains which put it there were shorter than before, but they were sure and only twice Yale required more than two downs to gain the distance." Further on in the same account the writer gives the following statistics from his "carefully kept note book": In the first half "Yale made 168 yards in thirty-one rushes, an average of  $5\frac{1}{4}$  yards. These figures are exclusive of punts run back and aim to show the distance made by actual rushing. . . . Yale fell off considerably in her attack in the second half, but still averaged 31.5 yards on each try. Her total distance was 94 yards in 29 rushes."

"Hogan [right tackle] was Yale's great ground-gainer. When he took the ball he was never stopped short of a gain. Kinney [left tackle] did some good work in the same way."

Referring again to Yale's touchdown: "Yale, taking the ball in midfield, scored a touchdown in six plays. Hogan [right tackle] was used outside the 25-yard line as a halfback to carry the ball, and inside the 25-yard line in his old place in the tackle-back formation."

The Yale Alumni Weekly of November 4th, 1903, describing the Yale-Columbia game of that season, which Yale won, 25-0, says: "Yale took the ball at midfield and the backs and tackles carried it straight to a touchdown in ten plays." Five and a half yards to the down. "The second touchdown showed Yale at her best. Taking the ball from a punt at Columbia's 40-yard line, Farmer [f. b.], Shevlin [r. e.], Hogan [r. t.], and Kinney [l. t.] smashed through irresistibly and took the ball across the goal line in eight plays. Kinney carried it the last twenty yards in just four assaults." Five yards to the down.

The Princeton Alumni Weekly of November 19th, 1904, in its account of the Yale-Princeton game of that year, which Yale won, 12-0, in describing the first touchdown, made by carrying the ball from Princeton's thirty-eight-yard line, mainly by the tackle-back formation, says: "Bloomer [l. t.] was sent through for four yards and then for three. Princeton lost five on a penalty, and Leavenworth [r. h. b.] and Bloomer crashed through for another first down. Bloomer was again called upon and brought the ball to Princeton's fifteen-yard line. He and Hogan [r. t.] added another first down, and after two more rushes (by Bloomer and Hoyt [l. h. b.]) the ball rested only a foot from the goal line. In the next play Bloomer was rammed through for the first touchdown." Over thirty-three yards in ten plays, an average of just about ten yards for three downs.

The Harvard Bulletin of November 8th, 1905, in its account of the Harvard-Indian game of last season, which Harvard won, 23-11, says: "The most conspicuous man in gaining ground was Brill [l. t.] . . . Harvard's first touchdown was then scored in eleven rushes [from Carlisle's 50-yard line] the Indians being penalized once for offside play." This is a little over four yards to the rush.

The Yale Alumni Weekly of Nov. 29th, 1905, in its account of the Yale-Harvard game of last fall, which Yale won, 6-0, referring to the first part of the game, records: "Squires [r. t.] carried the ball most of the time, and was rarely stopped short of four or five yards. Once he drove through the line for nine yards and once for seven." Again: "Yale, now facing her last opportunity, began an advance which was irresistible. Levine had replaced Quill [f. b.] a short time before, and was fresh and strong. With Forbes [l. t.] to help him, and behind the powerful right side of the Yale line, the two, working like one man, drove under, over and through the Harvard left for down after down. Brill was the chief point of attack, and ten yards from his goal he was replaced by Montgomery. The change made absolutely no difference, for Yale was not to be denied, and in three plays more Forbes was fairly driven through the Harvard wall and across the goal line." Ten yards in three downs.

The Harvard Bulletin of November 15th, 1905, in its account of the Harvard-Pennsylvania game, which Pennsylvania won, 12-6, says: "Lockwood [f. b.] went through centre for seven yards with Squires [r. t.] back, and the latter added five more. On a split play Hurley [r. h. b.] gained four yards and Squires followed with an equal distance through Hobson." Twenty yards in four rushes.

The foregoing excerpts have been selected at random from a large batch of reports of football games. It will be observed that in nearly every instance where the number of downs and the amount of ground gained are specifically mentioned, the average gain per down is in excess of  $3\frac{1}{2}$  yards. A little addition and division of these figures, from accounts of six games of the last three years, will show that the mass play formations here described yielded an average gain of slightly less than five yards to the down, and that against a defense admittedly stronger than the new rules will allow.

This evidence is respectfully submitted to the American Intercollegiate Football Rules Committee.

For President: Woodrow Wilson '79

ALL Princeton alumni will endorse the following leading editorial in last week's issue of Harper's Weekly, which is edited by Col. George Harvey:

At a dinner given the other evening by the Lotos Club of this city in his honor, we ventured to suggest the nomination of President WOODROW WILSON, of Princeton University, as the Democratic candidate for President of the United States, using substantially these words:

For nearly a century before WOODROW WILSON was born the atmosphere of the Old Dominion was surcharged with true statesmanship. The fates directed his steps along other paths, but the effect of growth among the traditions of the fathers remained. That he is preeminent as a lucid interpreter of history we all know. But he is more than that. No one who reads, understandingly, the record of his country that flowed with such apparent ease from his pen can fail to be impressed by the belief that he is by instinct a statesman. The grasp of fundamentals, the seemingly unconscious application of primary truths to changing conditions, the breadth in thought and reason manifested on those pages, are as clear evidences of sagacity worthy of the best and noblest of Virginia's traditions, as was that truly eloquent appeal which last year he addressed to his brethren of the South, that they rise manfully from the ashes of prejudice and lethargy and come back into their own.

It is that type of men we shall, if, indeed, we do not already, need in our public life. No one would think for a moment of criticising the general reformation of the human race in all of its multifarious phases now going on by executive decree, but it is becoming increasingly evident that that great work will soon be accomplished. When that time shall have been reached, the country will need at least a short breathing-spell for what the physicians term perfect rest.

That day, not now far distant, will call for a man combining the activities of the present with the sobering influences of the past.

If one could be found who, in addition to those qualities, should unite in his personality the finest instinct of true statesmanship as the effect of his early environment, and the no less valuable capacity for practical application, achieved through subsequent endeavors in another field, the ideal would be attained. Such a man I believe is Woodrow Wilson, of Virginia and New Jersey.

It was not a hasty or ill-considered utterance. And yet, though based upon earnest conviction and due reflection, there was no expectation that such a suggestion at this early day would evoke substantial response. That it has done so justifies a reference to the subject in these columns. Elsewhere we print some of the journalistic comments based upon the meagre reports in the daily papers. In a more personal way, verbally and by letter, we have received a surprising number of approving messages, which we are not now at liberty to quote. It seems worth while, therefore, to invite consideration of some of the reasons that might properly be adduced in support of the proposal. (1) Mr. Wilson is, as stated, more than the accomplished scholar, the practical educator, the competent executive he has proven himself to be; he is, in truth, a statesman of breadth, depth, and exceptional sagacity. (2) He is an idealist, yet notably sane. (3) He is a genuine orator whose words ring true and bear conviction. (4) He stands for everything that is sound and progressive. (5) He holds the respect of every one with whom he has come in contact, and the admiration particularly of all college-bred men. (6) His fidelity to the interests of the whole people is as unquestioned as his integrity. (7) He represents no class, no creed, no hobby, no vain imaginings. (8) He is at the fulness of his powers in age and experience. (9) He has profound convictions from instinct and learning and the courage of fearless expression. (10) He has no enemies—his is a clean slate. (11) He possesses to a degree unequalled since the days of BLAINE that indefinable quality known as personal magnetism. (12) He is not only high-minded but broad-minded and strong-minded. (13) He was born in Virginia and hails from New Jersey. His nomination would be a recognition of the South which the South nobly deserves. His election would be an everlasting pledge of a country united in fact, in determination to solve all besetting problems, in inspiration to fulfil America's highest destiny. Such is the man, and such a man is needed by the country, from whatever political party he may spring. We have no hesitancy, therefore, in inviting serious consideration of the suggestion.

C L A S S N E W S '96

C. B. Bostwick, Secretary of the Class of '96, will deeply appreciate information, from any Princeton men, about the following "ex-members" of Ninety-six. Present addresses are especially desired. Agens, Bates, Bean, Bedle, Bennett, Burt, H. F. Chamberlain, Drew, Fiscus, F. M. Hall, Harriman, Hatfield, Ogden, Phillip, T. C. Smith, Jr., W. W. Smith, Taggart, B. H. Warner, Jr., L. A. White, Wilkins, R. F. Williams, Work. Can any '96 men tell their Secretary anything about these men during their college days? With what crowds or eating clubs were they associated?

O B I T U A R Y ERNEST GRAVES BERGEN '95

The Class of '95 will learn with deep regret of the death of their classmate Ernest G. Bergen, at his residence, 162 West 96th street, New York, on March 6th. He was ill but a short time, with pneumonia.

The Bergen brothers, Ernest and Herbert, came to Princeton from India in the fall of 1891, entering college as classmates. Herbert, the younger, was drowned in Lake Michigan in the summer of '93. Their father, the Rev. G. S. Bergen, was formerly a missionary in India, but is now living in New York. After graduation in 1895, Ernest Bergen studied at the New York Law School, from which he was graduated with the degree of LL.B., in 1897. Since then he had practiced his profession continuously in New York City; about a year ago he became a member of the law firm of Brower, Bergen & Stout, with offices at 35 Nassau street. At the time of his death he was in his thirty-third year, having been born in India in 1873. He was a member of the Princeton Club of New York, and was unmarried.

To his bereaved family, his Princeton classmates extend their heartfelt sympathy.

GYMNASTICS AND WRESTLING

Princeton and Yale held an interesting dual gymnastic exhibition and wrestling match in the Princeton Gymnasium on March 9th. The gymnastic exhibition was not competitive, but Yale won the wrestling match, four bouts to three. The contest was close, five of the seven bouts being awarded on points. In the featherweight C. S. Murphy of Yale threw J. F. Cross '06; and in the welterweight A. H. Ormond '08 threw B. I. Rouse of Yale; in the specialweight, lightweight and heavy-weight bouts, G. Dole, E. F. Sweeney, and P. P. Paige of Yale, were given the decisions over E. O. Howell '07, R. I. Mount '08 and R. R. King '09, respectively; and for Princeton J. R. Dickson '08, lightweight, and J. K. Ormond '06, middleweight, were successful against D. M. Somers and W. P. Bomar of Yale. S. S. Feagles '00 acted as referee.

The Princeton gym. team also gave a dual exhibition with Newark Academy at Newark on March 10th.

THE success of the new Freshman Dining Hall, opened recently in University Hall, has led to an additional appropriation by the trustees, of $9,000, to enable the Curator to remodel the first and second floors of University Hall, with a view to accommodating all of the freshmen next year. During the coming summer separate dining rooms for all the freshman clubs are to be fitted up on the first floor, with club rooms, one for each club, on the second floor. This plan permits the freshmen to keep their club organizations intact, and provides for good food at a reasonable price.

THE MOST GRATIFYING RESULTS yet exhibited, as a consequence of the introduction of Princeton's new method of instruction, are those set forth in the discussion on another page, by V. Lansing Collins '92, of The Preceptorial System and the University Library. Here are authoritative statistics showing that the system is accomplishing its chief purpose, in stimulating the undergraduates to become "reading men." Very interesting, also, is Mr. Collins' citation of the numerous articles on Princeton's latest contribution to higher education, showing the widespread attention the movement is attracting. More recently, we have noticed these additional articles: "First Fruits of the New Princeton System," in the March Brown Alumni Monthly, being a portion of the paper read before the American Historical Association by Dr. Hiram Bingham, Preceptor in History, Politics and Economics; "The Princeton Preceptorial System," in the March number of The Michigan Alumnus, by Dr. Edward S. Corwin, Preceptor in History, Politics and Economics, who is an alumnus of the University of Michigan; and an article on the same subject in the Dartmouth Bi-Monthly, by Prof. Gordon Hall Gerould, Preceptor in English, who is a Dartmouth graduate. During the winter several delegates from other colleges and universities have visited Princeton for the purpose of studying the Preceptorial System in practice, with a view to its introduction in their institutions.

PRESIDENT WILSON '79 is to be one of the speakers this Saturday night at the banquet of the alumni of Lawrenceville School in honor of Gen. Horace Porter, at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York; on March 30th, Dr. Wilson is to speak on "The Minister and the Community," at the conference (arranged by John J. Moment '96) of the Yale, Hartford and Union Theological Seminaries, at Hartford, Conn.; on April 16th, he is to be the orator at the Jefferson's birthday dinner of the Democratic Club of New York, at the Waldorf-Astoria; on April 30th, he will speak before the Public Schools Principals Association of Newark, N. J., and on May 3rd, he will respond for the University at the annual dinner of the Princeton Alumni Association of New England, in Boston.

CONGRATULATIONS ARE DUE the students of Harvard University on the appointment of Dr. Bliss Perry, editor of the Atlantic Monthly, to a Harvard professorship in English literature, from March 1st, 1907. During his too brief incumbency of the chair of oratory and æsthetic criticism, and, later, of the Holmes professorship of English, Dr. Perry's stimulating lectures were very much appreciated by his Princeton classes. President Eliot has made this announcement concerning Dr. Perry's appointment: This professorship of English literature replaces and is in succession to the Professorship of Belles Lettres, hitherto attached to the Smith Professorship of the French and Spanish Languages. The previous incumbents of the combined professorship have been George Ticknor, from 1817 to 1835; Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, from 1836 to 1854, and

FRANCIS LANDEY PATTON, D.D., LL.D.,
Princeton, N. J.

SIR: The ten classes from 1892 to 1901, who have recently presented a dormitory to the University, have desired to give it a name intimately associated with the progress of Princeton.

We have therefore unanimously decided to call the building "Patton Hall," believing that in this way we shall also indicate the respect and admiration with which our classes regard you, under whose administration as President of Princeton University our undergraduate courses were spent.

COLLEGE MEN GENERALLY, among whom he had a wide acquaintance, will be pained to learn of the death of James Robinson, the trainer, at his Princeton home on the evening of March 19th, of heart failure. Ever since he suffered a stroke of paralysis last summer, Mr. Robinson's health had been failing. He was in his sixty-fifth year, having been born in Manchester, England, in 1841. Coming to this country in 1880, he trained in turn the teams of Harvard, Princeton, the Manhattan Athletic Club, the University of Michigan, Yale, and Princeton again, since 1900.

THE heaviest snowstorm of the year prevented the opening of the baseball season at Princeton this Saturday, and the first game on the schedule, with New York University, had to be cancelled. It is hoped, however, that the snow will be gone and the field dry enough for the second game, with Ursinus next Wednesday, the 28th. Meanwhile the squad has been given about two hours and a half of daily practice in the Cage, with beneficial results. Particular attention is being paid to the freshman candidates (several of whom give unusual promise of making good), in view of the new Harvard-Yale-Princeton eligibility rules, which go into effect next year, preventing freshmen from playing. This will mean that there will be practically no new material for next year's team.

THE PRINCETON ALUMNI WEEKLY

In the interest of Princeton and Princeton men

ON COINING THE PRINCETON SPIRIT

MOST of us know the Prominent Alumnus who is always on hand at his class reunions, foremost in the procession and the cheering; who is invariably among those present and enlivening his local alumni foregatherings; who seldom misses a big game; whose voice is heard and whose presence is felt at all college occasions,—in the van of the Hurrah Boys. And if he happens to be one of those who can always tell you what's the matter with the team, and how to run the University; if, in some instances, he is a bit aggressive with his alumniship, we generally like him for a' that and a' that, for he's usually the Hale Fellow Well Met.

In the public eye, this is the type of Loyal Supporter of Dear Old Alma Mater. And it is true, very likely, that his support is not altogether a matter of his presence and his lungs. For he pays cheerfully for his plate at the annual alumni reunion, and liberally for the usual extras. When the class reunion committee sends him a circular he comes down handsomely. He insists on signing the check at the club. If you happen to run in on him in his home town or city, he entertains you hospitably, and the old campus days are renewed under conditions and in company that make the heart grow warm. You are glad that you went to Princeton and you are happy in the possession of such friends as your Genial Host.

Observing all these outward signs of prosperity, perhaps you make no doubt that this Prominent Alumnus is one of those Liberal Donors whose names are seldom printed, but who constantly supply the oil that keeps the machinery of education moving.

Perhaps he is. Perhaps he is not. Perhaps when the Secretary of the Committee of Fifty, for instance, on business bent, steps into the private office of this Hale Fellow Well Met, the Visitor may find the Victim as tight as the bark on a tree, as retiring as a clam. Oh, yes, he has no doubt that the Dear Old Alma Mater needs money,—but he has done his share. Has he not consistently subscribed to the class reunion expenses? Has he not contributed for every local alumni dinner for years? Perhaps he can even boast that he has helped pay for the new clubhouse on Prospect avenue. He has done his share.

Now, we would not decry these things. They help. They keep up the enthusiasm. They give the alumnus a good time and stimulate his loyalty. But if the good work stops there, where is the money to come from for the far more important work of education? If not upon the loyal alumni, upon whom is the University to depend for the balance of that fund of $2,500,000 (only a portion of which has been raised) to put into full operation the Preceptorial System? How is that imposing group of dormitories around Brokaw Field to be completed, of which Patton Hall is only the beginning? To whom are we to look for the $2,500,000 endowment for the proposed Graduate College,—for the Swann bequest, appreciated as it is, may be not more than one-tenth of that amount? And whence is to come that much-needed general fund for the development of the University along the lines laid down so impressively in President Wilson's inaugural address?

The share borne by the type of alumnus described above, it will be observed, is after all a selfish investment; it has been given mainly for his own pleasure. In contributing to the club, to the alumni dinner, to the class reunion, we look for and generally get a return for our money,—in a holiday, in entertainment, in the company of good friends and true, in the renewal of halcyon days,—all good for us, no doubt, but not in themselves of any cash value to Alma Mater. And of what lasting avail, unless they stimulate us to a devotion to an ideal, and the willingness to make some sacrifice for the realization of that ideal? A determination to help, according to our ability, in a work that does not contribute directly to our own personal comfort or pleasure,—the disinterested work of developing the University?

To put it on by no means the highest scale, have the seven thousand Princeton alumni gratitude enough to pay the debt they incurred by accepting $350 worth of education for $150 tuition every year of their college course?

The cash results of the canvass of Princeton alumni now being conducted by the Secretary of the Committee of Fifty will be the answer to that question.

The Preceptorial System and the University Library

A PAPER READ BY V. LANSING COLLINS '92, REFERENCE LIBRARIAN OF PRINCETON UNIVERSITY, BEFORE THE TENTH ANNUAL JOINT MEETING OF THE NEW JERSEY LIBRARY ASSOCIATION AND THE PENNSYLVANIA LIBRARY CLUB, AT ATLANTIC CITY, NEW JERSEY, MARCH 11TH, 1906

THE wide publicity given in the press during the past winter to what is called the Princeton Preceptorial System seems to indicate that the experiment being made at that University is one of the most interesting in the history of American education. For detailed explanation of the system I shall refer you to the articles that have appeared in the magazines; * and for present purposes I shall only indicate its aims and method sufficiently to make intelligible what I have to say about the relation of the system to the Library. I cannot do this better than by quoting President Wilson's own words in his Committee of Fifty circular. "The preceptorial system," he says, "is meant to import into the great university the methods and personal contact between teacher and pupil which are characteristic of the small college, and so gain the advantage of both. . . It is meant also to change the methods of the student's own work; to make a reading man of him instead of a mere pupil receiving instruction. The method. . . is to give a man subjects to read up, and to supply him with advice and assistance in his reading—advisors who will be practically accessible at all times, and who will be guides to the best reading and to the best method of reading."

You will at once perceive that the two foundation-stones supporting this system are the quality of the preceptors and the nature of the reading as supplied by the resources of the University Library. Out of the happy-go-lucky undergraduate the preceptor is to make a reading man, and the Library presumably is to supply the reading matter.

Before the beginning of first term last September we therefore laid our simple plans to meet the extra burden which we realized the Library would have to bear. Requests were sent to each member of the faculty, preceptors included, for lists of required and collateral reading for first-term courses, and blank forms were issued with the requests on which the lists were written. Returns were obtained from twenty-three courses and were filed at the delivery desk, the books thus listed, some 800-900 in number, being immediately withdrawn from general circulation and reserved. They are allowed out of the building only for overnight borrowing and for their use in the reading-room during the day, as also for their overnight use charge slips differing in color from our regular white slips have to be signed by the borrower. These colored slips form the basis of some statistics which I shall give you later.

Of the 1279 undergraduates at Princeton this year, 1053 came under preceptors, students taking the civil engineering course not being included in the system. Of these 1053, 710 belonged to the purely academic department (candidates for the B.A. degree), and the remaining 343 to the semi-academic department, if I may so call it (candidates for B.S. or Litt.B. degrees).

It was apparent that the Library would not have sufficient copies of certain required and collateral books to meet the demands of some of the larger classes, and the question of duplicates was thus immediately forced to an issue, resulting in a special appropriation for the purchase of duplicates for preceptorial use. By careful adjustment and by transferring duplicates already in the Library over to the preceptorial account, we contrived to get through first term with a remarkably small accession of fresh duplicates. The largest number purchased was only eight; the average only two. The total number of volumes purchased on this account was 179. These figures will be much larger for second term. The average cost of these 179 volumes was $2.67. The purchase of these duplicates did not actually constitute the sole additional expense. I have taken no account of the additional desk assistants taken on in the shape of three student helpers, two for four hours each a day through the week and one for two hours four days of the week. The situation at the desk has moreover practically monopolized my own time and attention, especially since in the midst of our busy season a neighboring library very inconsiderately relieved us of the services of our most valuable regular desk assistant.

The high average cost of the 179 duplicates purchased is an indication that the class of books used was quite different from that of the ordinary textbook. A large majority of them might I think be classed as literature—books you would not be surprised to find in the library of any cultured man or woman of reading habit. For instance—I quote from the lists entirely at random—in economics such books as Dewey's Financial History of the United States, Smith's Wealth of Nations, Acworth's Railroad Rates; in German, Kuno Francke's German Literature, Carlyle's Frederick the Great, Lessing's works, Lewis' History of Germany; in psychology, the various works of Ladd, James, Sully, and Baldwin; in Roman law, Abbott's Roman Political Institutions, Greenidge's Roman Public Life, and Mommsen; in politics and history, Milman's Latin Chris- tianity, Tout's Empire and Papacy, Bryce's Holy Roman Empire, Gardiner's History of England, Jenks' Law and Politics in the Middle Ages, Fiske's historical works, Elson, Hart, Wilson, and Channing in American history, Reinsch's Colonial Government, Dilke's Problems of Greater Britain; in French, books like Brunetière's Evolution de la Poésie Lyrique, Brandes' Romantic Movement, Pellissier's Mouvement Littéraire, Morley's Voltaire and Rousseau, the works of Balzac, George Sand, Chateaubriand, and DeVigny; in Latin, Dill's Roman Society, Mau's Pompeii, Boissier's Tacitus, besides of course the standard editions and translations of classical authors. In English literature the range was particularly wide, e.g., in Elizabethan English, Haigh's Tragic Drama of the Greeks, Lee's Life of Shakespeare, Boas' Shakespeare and his Predecessors, Ordish's Early London Theatres, Gayley's Representative English Comedies, the Hakluyt Society's voyages of Drake, Hawkins, Frobisher, and Raleigh, and the works of men like Kyd, Marlowe, Peele, and Lyly. In geology some of the books were Avebury's Scenery of England, Geikie's Earth Sculpture, Heilprin's Mont Pélée and the Tragedy of Martinique, Hovey's Celebrated American Caves, Shaler's Aspects of the Earth, and Thompson's Depths of the Sea.

You will observe that some of these books are rather solid mental pabulum, that several are distinctly popular in tone, and that most of them are good reading in themselves; scarcely any could be classed as mere textbooks. And on the whole they have been pretty well read by our undergraduates during first term; private quizzes have been passed and reports have been written on such volumes or selections as preceptors assigned.

The circulation of the 800-900 reserved books amounted to roughly 7,000 during the four months of first term; or, in other words, every book was called for nine times, or each of the 1053 "pre-ceptees" read more than one and one half volumes each month. I must remind you that this circulation is entirely distinct from the general circulation, the parallel record of which I shall refer to presently; it is also entirely distinct from the consultatory use of the 25,000 volumes on our open shelves in the reference or reading room; and finally it is entirely distinct from the use of the 25,000 volumes and 24,000 dissertations in our nine seminar and five departmental libraries. The reserved book circulation of 7,000 in four months was made up in the following percentages: English, 29; history, politics, and economics, 17; French and German, 14.2; jurisprudence, international and Roman law, 9.3; classics, 9.1; philosophy, psychology, and ethics, 7.3; art, 5.6; geology, 4.6; Bible, 3.8. The prominence of English is not to be wondered at, but is rather a cause for satisfaction; and that historical and economic reading should hold second place is also to be expected. History and politics ran even, and quite some distance ahead of economics. I was unable to differentiate exactly between these three departments, because they frequently used the same books, which was also true of the reading in international law and jurisprudence. German ran a fraction ahead of French; but Latin and Greek showed a difference of 8 to 1 in favor of the former, due, no doubt, to the small number of men taking or electing Greek as compared with those taking or electing Latin. The 3.8 for Bible is noteworthy as showing that the serious study of Biblical history and literature still occupies a respectable position in the Princeton curriculum.

In spite of the drain on the leisure of the undergraduate, and, one might say, in spite of the surfeit of compulsory reading, the general circulation during this period has been only 5 per cent. less than that of last year for the same period, while the circulation of overnight books—chiefly books of reference—is over 3 per cent.

larger, the most significant increase being in the historical sections, where the circulation has jumped to three times last year's figures. Fiction shows curious fluctuations. During October it held its own, but during November and December it fell decidedly below its norm. We attributed this to the presumption that the Preceptorial System allowed no time for light reading. But during January, when men were cramming for examinations or resting from them, fiction not only recovered its popularity but actually surpassed its figures of last year by 2 per cent. Here I think you have an excellent example of the recreative use of novel-reading,—or perhaps only an example of retaliatory reaction against the enforced serious reading of the Preceptorial System. Another curious fact about our circulation I shall leave with you to explain as you please: During the football months of October and November, when the undergraduate world is commonly supposed to be absorbed in the problems of the gridiron, we do our biggest business at the Library. This has nothing to do with the Preceptorial System, for it has been true for some years past. But I suppose it might be used as an available argument in favor of football.

Such, in brief, then, from the point of view of the Library's experience, have been the practical workings of the Preceptorial System during its first trial. The horse in undergraduate disguise has been led to water and made to drink. Whether he will be made a drinking horse is another question. A reading man is not made in a term, be the preceptors never so brilliant; and perhaps the system itself is not yet quite in good running order. But the effect on the campus can, I think, be noticed. Already complaints have arisen at some of the clubs that too much shop is being talked at table. The Library is becoming one of the most frequented resorts on the campus, and it is a common thing to hear men declare in language more picturesque than eloquent that they are too busy to do this, that or the other thing. The effect of being compelled to read by a certain date a certain number of pages or volumes and to discuss the reading with specially trained and sympathetic preceptors is bound to tell in the long run, bound to widen the reader's horizon, bound to give him new points of view, bound to kindle some latent spark of interest or even enthusiasm. I suspect that three years hence the present freshmen will be better read and really better educated—certainly better informed—seniors than the present graduating class; and after all, as The Daily Princetonian recently conceded in an editorial, "one goes to college for an education."

There is nothing specially original in the whole thing; it has been done in various ways and places for years. But it is the systematic carrying out to a logical end that gives the Princeton system its value. You have here your long-proposed professors of reading, your living library guides to the best reading, and they keep you so close to definite lines that aimless, useless reading is reduced to a minimum; and you cannot graduate unless you have done your share of good reading.

THE alumni of the Peekskill Military Academy, of which John Calvin Bucher '90 and Charles Alexander Robinson '94 are the principals, held their annual smoker at the Hotel Astor, New York, on March 16th.

Upon taking charge of this celebrated school two years ago, Messrs. Bucher and Robinson began a movement looking to its development on a larger scale. More recently a committee on endowment was organized, to raise $200,000 for new equipment, Mr. Robinson being a member of the sub-committee on finance. At the meeting in New York last week it was announced that in three months $30,000 of the fund had been raised, and that Senator Depew, who is a Peekskill alumnus, Class of '52, had given to the school an athletic field valued at $10,000.

THE opening of the baseball season at Princeton was again delayed this week, University Field being too soft for the game sheduled with Ursinus for Wednesday the 28th. But if the present fair weather continues, the playing season will begin with the third game on the schedule, Trinity at University Field this Saturday.

THE EIGHTH ANNUAL BANQUET of The Daily Princetonian was held with great success at the Inn on the evening of the 28th. On that occasion,—and the Princetonian dinner has come to be an occasion in the college year,—125 guests enjoyed the Daily's hospitality. The singing, led by a quartette from the glee club, came in with the oysters and went out with the lights, and there were good speeches and much good fellowship. F. L. Kline '06, who has been the energetic Business Manager of the Daily during the past year, was toastmaster; L. D. Froelick '06, who, as Editor-in-Chief, has given us one of the best editorial pages in the history of the paper, responded for The Retiring Board; C. T. Larzelere '07, the new Editor-in-Chief, outlined the policy of The Incoming Board and incidentally ran in some good-natured satire on football under the new rules, also on the pleasures of student life under the Preceptorial System; Mr. Mitchell S. Little, Chairman of The Yale Daily News, Mr. Harold C. Washburn of The Harvard Crimson, and Mr. H. P. DuBois of The Cornell Daily Sun brought the greetings of their respective universities, and some good ideas on undergraduate journalism and current college problems; Prof. Stockton Axson of the English department spoke of the prevailing good feeling between the faculty and the students, and exemplified it; Prof. Henry van Dyke '73 responded eloquently to The College Man in Public Life, and President Wilson '79, speaking to the toast Princeton University, brought the enthusiasm to a climax.

THE NEW EDITORIAL BOARD of The Daily Princetonian is as follows: Charles Townley Larzelere '07 of Norristown, Pa., Editor-in-Chief; Edward W. Walker '07 of Brooklyn, Associate Editor; William M. Timmons '07 of Kenton, Ohio, Assignment Editor; Gordon S. Rentschler '07 of Hamilton, Ohio, Business Manager; Henry L. Jones '08 of East Orange, N. J., Assistant Business Manager; Editors: L. R. Carton '07 of Chicago, D. Scott '07 of Chicago, A. B. Walsh '07 of Brooklyn, F. C. Weems '07 of Houston, Texas; R. C. Clothier '08 of Bryn Mawr, Pa.; O. L. Davis '08 of Trinidad, Col.; W. A. March '08 of Bridgeport, Pa.; K. D. Miller '08 of Roselle, N. J.; A. S. Swartz '08 of Norristown, Pa.; M. Matter '09 of Marion, Ind., and S. S. Mitchell '09 of Buffalo.

"THE STOLEN STORY," the four-act play by Jesse Lynch Williams '92, is announced for its first production on April 23rd (Shakespeare's birthday!) under the management of Mr. Henry W. Savage, at the Studebaker Theatre, Chicago, — to run there during the coming summer and then to be produced in New York next autumn. Mr. J. L. Finney, one of the most intelligent actors on the American stage, is to play the character of Billy Woods, the hero.

MEANTIME MR. WILLIAMS has written a "novelization" of the play, thus reversing the usual order of making a play out of a novel. The Day-Dreamer, as the book is called, is published by Charles Scribner's Sons. Since its appearance, two or three weeks ago, Mr. Williams has received numerous requests from playwrights and managers, for its dramatization!

success of The Stolen Story,—a prophecy with which we think those who have read The Day-Dreamer, and appreciated its dramatic possibilities, will agree. For it is from the dramatic standpoint that the book, a play turned into a story, is to be judged. And the story is so chock full of action, the working out of the plot so fascinating, the final success of the hero's plans so tantalizingly deferred, that it is quite impossible to put the book down till it is finished. Such a lively and interest-compelling story is just the thing for an unusually entertaining play.

THE DAY-DREAMER, namely, Billy Woods, the fascinating newspaper genius of Mr. Williams' original Stolen Story, published several years ago—which, by the way, furnishes only one incident of the present tale,—the Day-Dreamer is in love with the daughter of General Cunningham, a former cabinet officer who has accepted the presidency of the Board of Commissioners of New York City, in order to secure legislation carrying out a long cherished project of beautifying his native city with water-front parks. Seeing an opportunity for graft, a group of the General's fellow-commissioners, who are not in politics for their health, plot to change the sense of the Cunningham bill by the removal of a comma. Detecting the fraud, Billy Woods the reporter succeeds, against tremendous odds, in exposing it in time to save the General's good name and incidentally win his daughter,—though in doing so Billy is in disgrace with his newspaper, discredited by his namby-pamby millionaire cousin and rival in love, and by the girl's match-making aunt, snubbed by the General, and his motives are even distrusted by the girl herself. The action—and it's all action—takes place in the Berkshires, in Park Row, at the opera, and in Park Row again,—with very realistic pictures of newspaper life and municipal politics.

OTHER BOOKS RECENTLY RECEIVED by The Weekly include "Talks in a Library with Laurence Hutton," "Recorded by Isabel Moore" and published by G. P. Putnam's Sons; "Personal Hygiene," by Dr. Alfred A. Woodhull '56, Brigadier-General, U. S. Army, retired, published by John Wiley & Sons; "The Legend of St. Juliana," translated by C. W. Kennedy '03, M.A., Scribner Fellow in English Literature in Princeton University, published by the University Library; and "The Tricentennial Reunion of the Class of '75," edited by the Class Secretary, Dr. T. W. Harvey of Orange, N. J. This record, in which the press of the Orange Chronicle has turned out an excellent example of printing and binding, contains a roll of the sixty-eight living members of the class, with their occupations; a poem by Charles R. Williams, editor of The Indianapolis News, which was read at the thirtieth-year reunion of his class, last June, and which we hope to reproduce in an early number,—as soon as we can find space for it; the Class Secretary's report on the changes and achievements of '75 during the last five years, and his sprightly narrative of the tricentennial reunion; also a poem "Thirty Years After," written by Dr. Harvey for the class dinner, a necrological report, and a statement of the Library of English Poetry fund, founded and maintained by this loyal class.

THE VOLUME by General Woodhull '56 is designed primarily for the use of undergraduates, its contents being from his classroom lectures to Princeton students since the author retired from the Medical Department of the United States Army a few years ago. It is a compact treatise on physiology and hygiene, the chapters being on The Skeleton, The Muscular System, The Lungs and Respiration, The Heart and the Circulation, The Nervous System, The Contents of the Abdomen, Digestion and the Care of the Digestive Apparatus, The Development and Care of the Body,

Physical-Culture Exercises, Fatigue, The Elimination of Waste and the Care of the Skin; Catching Cold, Swimming, Bathing; Clothing, Food, Tobacco, Alcohol. Dr. Woodhull's book is dedicated "To the Princeton Class of 1906 and its immediate successors, in cordial recognition of their appreciative reception of the spoken words."

MR. KENNEDY's book on The Legend of St. Juliana, who "suffered martyrdom at the city of Nicomedia in the reign of Maximian, Roman Emperor from 308-314," is a scholarly translation into English from the Latin of the Acta Sanctorum and the Anglo-Saxon of Cynewulf. It is beautifully printed on heavy paper, by the Princeton Press. The Talks in a Library with Laurence Hutton,—the personal reminiscences of that most genial of men, and his final word to his host of friends,—is reserved for future review in these columns.

The New Football Rules

OF THE AMERICAN INTERCOLLEGIATE FOOTBALL RULES COMMITTEE

FOR the following interesting discussion of the new football rules, The Weekly is indebted to Mr. W. T. Reid, Jr., Secretary of the American Intercollegiate Football Rules Committee.

In sending his views, Mr. Reid requests us to say that, on account of pressure of work, his "letter is rather hastily written and, therefore, not as carefully worded as I should like."

4 Riedesel Ave., Cambridge, Mass.
March 21, 1906.

Editor,
The Princeton Alumni Weekly,
Princeton, N. J.

Dear Sir:

I have read with great interest the article on football reform which was published in your issue of March 17th, a copy of which you very kindly sent me.

If, without in any way presuming to express the opinion of any of the other members of the Rules Committee, I may say a few words on the subject, I should like very much to answer the main question therein asked, namely: Why is it that the new rules will prevent mass play when by statistics gathered it is clearly shown that in recent seasons many teams have averaged five yards to a rush in their bigger games?

In the first place, in the usual average of distance gained in plays, forty-yard runs and other large gains are commonly figured in, although in one instance in the statistics given in your article such was not the case. One forty-yard run in a game would, of course, do a great deal to bring up the average. When, however, we look at the matter from another standpoint, the average cannot be so high, and it is from this standpoint, it seems to me, that we must do our practical figuring. If, in a series of six or seven rushes, a given team is able to carry the ball an average of five or six yards on a rush, is it not fair to assume that that team wholly outclasses its competitor? Is it not true, also, that no possible method of playing the game can ever be expected to prevent a decidedly superior team from winning such victories?

In the second place, if a team under the new rules attempts to make ten yards in three downs, it must do so in the face of a number of handicaps which are almost certain to be incurred during the progress of the ball over any considerable distance. It is true that with ten yards to gain in three downs the average gain per rush would be  $3\frac{1}{3}$  yards as against  $1\frac{2}{3}$  yards at the present time. If, however, we consider the possibilities of fouls or the loss of distance that might be sustained in a given down, through a fumble or the successful efforts of the opponents to check the play, the average distance per down immediately increases in an overwhelming measure. For example; if, after having made a first down, a team on the first rush of the next down fumbles but retains the ball at the same spot, that team must in each of its two successive tries average five yards. In other words, such a team would have to make as much in a single rush as teams of the past year or so have been attempting to make in three rushes. It must be admitted in this connection that our very best teams when playing against their equals have seldom been able to carry the ball more than fifty yards at the outside without incurring a penalty of some kind or without a fumble or check which has resulted in forcing a kick or some trick play by which it is hoped that the lost distance may be recovered.

On the other hand, granting your claim, that a team will be able to make ten yards in three downs, it must be admitted that, since there will be less resistance in the rush line, owing to the weakness of the defense, due to the enforced scattering of the defensive backs (which must occur, if a defense is to be made against the "on-side" kick,) the offense will not be so readily checked as it has been, and will, therefore, not invite the smashing collisions which have resulted in injuries and in keeping the game so much one of mass plays. Undoubtedly, as far as injuries go, we shall have about the same proportion, for it has been my experience that open plays are as much productive of injuries as the close plays.

Granting also your argument that the offense will be able to advance the necessary distance, it would seem that we shall have more scoring, which is desirable and which will relieve us of the conditions where it is possible to win a game through a single individual error of some kind. More scoring means greater activity and, consequently, greater interest.

Will teams adopt mass plays in connection with the new rules? Mass plays will probably be adopted generally, in the attempt at making a yard or so on the third down in order to retain possession of the ball. Whether teams will adopt such plays as the back-bone of their offense is a question. To me, it seems as though they will not,—first, because in the years between 1900, when Yale first produced the tackle-back, and 1903, during which time the offense was practically unlimited as to the number of men brought back, it was found impossible to devise any plays which, against teams of equal strength, could be counted upon to yield much more than two or three yards at most on the average. The reason that such plays were adopted was because football since its inception has always developed toward the conservative. Long passes have always been allowable and yet have not often been persistently tried, since such passes have come to be regarded in much the same light as speculation in business where the profit is great, if the venture is successful, and where the loss is correspondingly great in case of failure; whereas short passes have usually been adopted, since they, like conservative investments, yield small but sure gains. In other words, the chance of success in the variable and more open game, as opposed to the rigid, close formation game, has been too uncertain to be worth taking.

With the introduction of the "forward pass," the "on-side" kick and the "high tackling," it seems to me that conservative opportunity will be offered for successful plays of a more open nature, and that any coach who finds that he can successfully make big gains will base his offense on this principle. The weakening of the defense ought to help to this end.

It must also be remembered that the necessity of making ten yards in three downs will also make the possession of the ball less important than it has been during the past three or four years, since if a team loses the ball it seems likely that it may count on getting it back easier than has been the case recently. The value of possession will not be so great and therefore chances will be taken more frequently.

Where a side may kick the ball to the right or left and recover it in case it bounces, there is going to be a great temptation to attempt to advance the ball in that way, and so on with the other possibilities of offense, which, of course, at the present time are only hypothetically developed.

John Outland's Western team played the final game of the season last fall with a rival which it had already beaten twice by decisive scores. The series having been decided, both teams agreed to play the third game with the ten-yard rule. The result of the game as described by Mr. Outland in a letter to me was that his team was enabled during the game to make but seven first downs while the opposing team made four. The game was a tie with no score and neither team got near enough to the other's goal to even try at a place kick or a drop kick. Of course this game cannot furnish us with positive evidence of what will happen, since until the various teams of the country shall have worked consistently throughout the season with the idea of making ten yards, it is impossible to judge just what can be done; but it is certainly true that if the defense had not been weakened, the present offense could not possibly have hoped to advance the ball ten yards. The main trouble is whether the defense has not been weakened too much. This remains to be seen.

From your article, I judge also that The Alumni Weekly favors the "seven men on the line" plan. I do not agree here, and for these reasons: In the first place, a kicker should be allowed to come back no matter where he plays on the team, because, as football men are agreed, a kicker is "born," not made. With the present rule allowing an "on-side" kick after the ball has bounced, accurate kicking will of course be at a premium, and it would be manifestly unfair for a team which had a successful kicker on it somewhere not to be allowed to use him simply because he was on the rush line. That was, of course, why the Committee voted to allow one of the five center men to come back five yards or more. At the same time this arrangement will prevent heavy men from being brought back for mass plays, since a heavy man, especially if slow, starting from such a distance behind the line, cannot get to the line quickly enough to be effective, and again, because that heavy man cannot be profitably used as a pusher in a mass play directed at the line as he is at present used, because it is a well known principle that it is not safe to have a heavy man push a man much lighter than himself into a rush line, as is the case where line men and half-backs are concerned. It has been demonstrated time and time again that where a tackle undertakes to ram a half-back through the line the half-back is more than likely to get badly hurt, while, in the reverse case, the tackle generally escapes uninjured and lasts longer. To my mind, then, the line man who is at present allowed behind the line cannot be as effectively used in the play as he has been heretofore. He has been deprived of nearness to the line where his slowness was not such a handicap, and he has been placed in a position, relative to the other players, where it is hardly likely to be good policy to use him as a pusher and where, if he is in company with fast backs, he can hardly expect to lead the interference.

With regard to the man who is allowed to stand "outside the outside man on the rush line," it may be fairly said, I think, that in very few cases have teams been able to utilize him for much of anything except the more open plays. West Point perhaps came nearer using him in mass plays than anybody else.

Another consideration that must be kept in mind is the fact that with the "forward pass" and the "on-side" kick greater physical activity is likely to be one of the requisites for making the team, in which case there will not be such a premium on beef, resulting thereby in a reduction in the total number of pounds going to make up a team.

Furthermore, with regard to the "seven men on the line proposition," it is perfectly possible with seven men on the line to play the style of tandem which Harvard has played of recent years. The only difference in the tandem, in case seven men were played on the line and forced to stay there, would be that instead of having the order of the tandem tackle, full-back and half-back, it would be full-back, half-back and half-back, as per the accompanying diagram:

CASE I. LINE MAN BACK CASE II. NO LINE MAN BACK

Case I, total weight in tandem, 545 lbs.

Case II, total weight in tandem, 525 lbs.

Difference,

20 lbs.

Analyzing the comparative power of these two tandems, we see that, in case the line man is brought back, a portion of the rush line ahead of the play is weakened, and the power of the play behind the line strengthened, whereas in the case where the line man is kept on the line the rush line is strengthened, while the power behind it is slightly lessened. I say slightly lessened in this sense: In the first tandem that I mentioned the line man at the head, hypothetically speaking, would weigh perhaps 190 pounds, the full-back about 185 pounds, and the half-back in the neighborhood of 170 pounds. Taking the second tandem, where we place the full-back in the line-man's place, we find a difference of five pounds only in the two men, with, however, a little more speed on the part of the full-back to offset this difference. In the second man we have the difference between the weight of the full-back, 185 pounds, in one case, and the half-back, 170 pounds, in the other case, making a difference of 15 pounds. In the case of the third and last man the weight would be approximately the same, so in case of the tandem, were seven men held on the line, the difference in aggregate weight would be about 20 pounds, while the speed would probably be increased. Of course the wear and tear on the backs must be considered. It is undoubtedly true that with the line men on the line, the wear would probably be greater on the backs, although it is possible that the increased strength in the line might make the work considerably easier. Such a contingency, however, might be provided for by having a sufficient number of substitute backs.

If the tandem is to be ruled out absolutely, it could be done by forcing the backs on offense to stand five or more yards behind the rush line and on a line parallel to the rush line. Such an arrangement would be wholly undesirable, however, since it would deprive the offense of all possibility of ingenuity in arranging men, and would force pretty much of a similarity in the offense throughout the country. It seems to me that the possibility of individual development of plays on the part of different coaches and players is one of the things that makes the game such a fascinating one, and I think it would be likely to seriously cripple the possibilities of the game if any such rule were passed.

It has been the general principle of the Rules Committee in dealing with the question of the changes in the rules this year to try and see how the offense might be strengthened and the defense weakened without saying to either the offense or defense, "You must stand here, you there, and you there" in set positions. In other words, the problem has been this: How to strengthen the offense and weaken the defense at the same time that neither was limited except in the most general and necessary ways.

I find that what I have had to say has spread out over a great deal of paper, and I sincerely apologize for taking so much of your valuable time. On the other hand, having sent me a copy of your issue, I felt that in defining my position in the matter I ought to try and give it to you as fully as possible.

Thanking you very much for your courtesy, I am,

Very sincerely yours,

W. T. REID, JR.

MR. REID'S DISCUSSION OF THE NEW FOOTBALL RULES

FOR the purpose of eliciting an expression of opinion from the members of the American Inter-collegiate Football Rules Committee, on the average gain in mass play,—whether, judging by the leading games of the past few years, the new ten-yard rule is a sufficient guarantee of the elimination of the lineman-back subversion of the game,—copies of The Weekly of March 17th, containing a discussion of that subject, were mailed to all of the members of the committee. It gives us much pleasure to print on another page the first response received, a courteous communication from Mr. W. T. Reid, Jr., of Harvard, the committee's Secretary.

It is gratifying to note that Mr. Reid apparently does not agree with some of his colleagues on the committee who hold that the ten-yard rule will dispose of mass play altogether. He concedes that the formations against which there has been such an outcry, will still be developed next year, though whether this form of attack will be relied upon as the back-bone of the offense, he questions. At present that is a matter of opinion. But if coaches find mass plays profitable under the new rules, they will of course use them. It is certainly desirable, as Mr. Reid says, that the best kicker on a team should be available for his specialty. The fact that, if taken from the line, he is required to stand at least five yards back, puts him beyond consideration as a participant in mass formations. It is not upon this lineman, however, but upon the end rush the committee proposes to allow back, that, in our opinion, coaches will depend for continuing mass play. And to the end, as an available man for such play, Mr. Reid gives very little consideration,—since, according to his letter, that player is to be required to stand "outside the outside man on the rush line." But so far as the published accounts of the new legislation show, there has been no restriction of the position which the end man allowed back shall occupy. The new rule on the number of men required in the line is as follows: "Six men shall always be on the line of scrimmage; the five center men shall always be on the line, except that one of the center men may drop back at least five yards or more, another man to take his place in the rush line."

If, by additional legislation, the end allowed back is to be required to stand outside the outside man on the rush line, such a restriction will unquestionably decrease his usefulness in mass play, though no doubt the ingenuity of coaches could evolve a form of such play in which he would be a factor. As we have pointed out before, the lineman-back formation has proven most effective when the impact is directed at an acute angle to the line of resistance, the group of players carrying the ball glancing off the opposing line outside of tackle. In such a style of attack, it is conceivable that the end back might be used effectively, notwithstanding he is required to stand outside the end of his own line when the ball is snapped. It would seem desirable, therefore, if it is the intention of the committee to eliminate mass play altogether, to require all of the linemen to be in their positions in the line when the ball is put in play,—with the exception, of course, of allowing one lineman to go back for a kick.

It is obvious that if a forty-yard run were included in a given series of gains, the average gain per rush would be materially increased. But the records quoted in our former editorial do not show that any such runs were included in the computation. Practically all of the gains described were made by lineman-back attacks in one form or another.

Mr. Reid asks "If, in a series of six or seven rushes, a given team is able to carry the ball an average of five or six yards on a rush, is it not fair to assume that that team wholly outclasses its competitor?" Apparently not. For three of the six games which formed the basis of our discussion were actually won by the "outclassed" team. In two of those games, the Yale-Harvard and the Harvard-Pennsylvania matches of 1905, Harvard, by the use of the lineman-back formation, was able for considerable periods to gain more than an average of  $3\frac{1}{2}$  yards. However, Yale and Pennsylvania both having defeated Harvard last fall, we think that the Harvard head coach would hardly affirm that either Yale or Pennsylvania was "wholly outclassed."

The Secretary of the committee argues that such handicaps as fumbles, penalties, etc., would operate to prevent the consistent gaining of ten yards in three downs. But such handicaps have operated in the past, and still the lineman-back play has been effective enough to gain ten yards in three downs.

We agree most heartily with Mr. Reid that it is not desirable to deprive the offense of the exercise of ingenuity in the arrangement of the players. Only such restrictions should be imposed as are for the best interests of the game. But the most important of these restrictions, it seems to us, is that the seven forwards shall be in their positions when the ball is put in play. By his exposition of the tandem as developed at Harvard, the Secretary of the committee demonstrates that a sufficiently effective attack on the line can be developed without the assistance of one of the forwards in the backfield.

It is a genuine pleasure to be able to agree with much of Mr. Reid's candid discussion. Undoubtedly football is to be a more open game under the new rules. But the committee can preform an even more important service, by leaving no possibility of the development of those mass plays to which most of the just criticism against the great college game is due.

"Czar" Woldenburg, whose absence from Russia has been recently requested, gave a very interesting talk on his experiences during the troubles in that country. The class had to regret the absence of Lieutenant-Colonel Fordyce and William Mayo Atkinson, exponents of the two great political parties in the State of New Jersey, both of whom were detained on account of inclement weather. VOL. VI

THROUGH the courtesy of Mr. H. C. Bunn, the Curator of Grounds and Buildings, we are enabled to present in this issue a double-page drawing of Blair Hall, showing the addition to that handsome dormitory which is to be built through the generosity of DeWitt C. Blair '36,—supplementing the Sesquicentennial gift of his father, the late John I. Blair.

THE ADDITION TO BLAIR HALL will extend from the western end of the present building to the Halsted Observatory, about 175 feet on University Place. The architecture of the extension will, of course, be similar to that of the completed hall,—and with this addition and Patton Hall, now nearing completion, at the other end of the line, there will be almost half a mile of the imposing collegiate Gothic along the western side of the campus, the original portion of which, by the way, was Blair Hall itself. As shown in the picture, the extension on University Place is to be relieved by a tower, with an arch giving access to the campus, at the present entrance near the Observatory, and on a line with the western tower and arch of the University Library. The plans provide for three entries on the campus side of the extension, adding to the capacity of Blair Hall thirteen suites, each with a study and two bedrooms, and providing rooming accommodations for say thirty students,—for three students frequently room together in the large Blair Hall suites. With this addition and Patton Hall completed, about 150 students now compelled to find accommodations in the town will be enabled to room on the campus.

ALEXANDER VAN RENSSELAER '71 of Philadelphia has been unanimously renominated to succeed himself as Alumni

Trustee, for the term from June, 1906, to June, 1911. The nominations closed on April 1st, and Mr. Van Rensselaer was the only candidate to receive the twenty endorsements required by the plan of alumni representation to place a name on the official ballot. All alumni who have qualified to vote will receive the ballot during the next two weeks.

THE TRIANGLE CLUB gave its first performance of Tobasco-Land, the new musical comedy, in the Casino, on April 4th,—a complimentary dress rehearsal before members of the faculty and other guests. On the 5th, the undergraduate performance was given, and this Saturday, at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York, the out-of-town schedule begins, with a matinee and evening performance. Next week the club will start on its longest trip yet undertaken, appearing at English's Opera House, Indianapolis, on April 14th, at The Odeon, St. Louis, on the 16th, and at Macauley's Theatre, Louisville, on the 17th. Additional dates, after the Easter trip, are Albaugh's Theatre, Baltimore, May 4th; The Belasco Theatre, Washington, on May 5th; Orange, N. J., Music Hall, May 12th; Broad Street Theatre, Philadelphia, May 19th; The Casino, Princeton, May 20th, and the Commencement performance in the Casino, June 9th. Altogether there are about seventy-five students in the cast, chorus and orchestra.

THE AMERICAN INTERCOLLEGIATE FOOTBALL RULES COMMITTEE held additional meetings in New York, March 30th and 31st, which were given up largely to the proper phrasing of the amendments already adopted. New legislation provided that a forward pass over the goal-line shall not count as a touchdown, but shall be merely a touchback; that a forward pass by the side not putting the ball in play shall not be allowed; and that, as a modification of the prohibition on tackling below the knees, it shall not be a foul tackle if the tackler's arms or hands slip below the knees after the tackle has been made. A central board of officials was appointed, of which J. B. Fine '82 is a member. The committee's next meeting is set for April 14th. In the final codification of the rules, which the committee hopes to reach at the next session, we understand that one of the five men allowed back of the line, when the ball is put in play, is to be required to stand outside the outside man on the line, as indicated by Secretary Reid in these columns last week.

PREPARATIONS FOR THE PRINCETON FOOTBALL SEASON of 1906 have already been started, the candidates for the eleven having been called out this week for spring practice, with W. W. Roper '02 in charge of the coaching. The preliminary work is of unusual importance this year, in view of the many changes in the playing rules. On four afternoons of the week, the candidates are being drilled in accurate passing, kicking and catching, so essential under the new rules. There will be no hard scrimmage work, but attention will be directed to testing the formations which the new legislation aims to encourage. Future freshmen having been debarred from competition, all the men eligible for next year's eleven are now in college,—one good feature of which is that the work done in the spring will not have to be repeated in the fall, as heretofore, in order to try out the arrivals from the prep. schools.

TWO SILVER CUPS have been offered by an alumnus, to encourage drop-kicking and punting. The contests for these trophies are to be held during the next four or five weeks, one of them to go to the best drop-kicker, the other to the best punter of the candidates eligible for the 1906 team.

THE APPOINTMENT of a trainer will not be made till later in the spring. Dr. J. M. Carnochan '96 is in charge of the physical condition of the baseball team.

A COMPREHENSIVE PLAN of Christian work for Chinese young men has been undertaken by Princeton undergraduates and a committee of alumni organized as "The Princeton Work in Peking." The work is to be under the direct supervision of Robert R. Gailey, A.M. '97, center rush on the championship football team of '96, who has been during the past eight years the representative of the Princeton undergraduates as Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. at Tientsin, China. Mr. Gailey is now in this country organizing the work to be undertaken in Peking, and will return to China in the fall, with two additional Princeton men as associates in the enterprise. A gift of $30,000 has been received for the purpose of erecting a building in Peking, which will be the center of the Princeton work. The committee in charge is raising a fund for the project, the Princeton undergraduates having already pledged $1,500.

THE NATURE OF THE WORK, as outlined in a circular just issued, is as follows: "The forms of activity undertaken will be those naturally belonging to work in behalf of educated men. Educational work has proven in Tientsin the best means of entree to the favor of the educated classes, and undoubtedly in Peking the same will hold true. A school corresponding to our 'academy grade,' in which English, mathematics, history, geography, and science, as well as the Chinese classics, will be taught, will probably be one of the chief avenues of influence. In addition to that, courses of popular lectures will be given, touching upon the subjects which modern education is opening up to the Chinese mind. Athletics and physical culture will receive prominent attention. The value of this was clearly demonstrated in Tientsin, not only because the young men were improved thereby and their interest increased, but also the interest of many prominent Chinese and European officials and merchants was thus awakened. The Chinese take naturally to sports such as football, and it is the plan to have an athletic field and gymnasium, and all that those things imply. The social side of the work will be stimulated by frequent social gatherings as well as by intercourse with the Chinese in the homes and rooms of the Secretaries. The making of social calls upon the Chinese in their homes will be, in Peking as in Tientsin, one of the chief means of widening the influence of the work. The religious and moral development of the students reached in these various ways is, of course, the real aim throughout. . . . Bible classes as well as special and regular religious services will be used to bring about this end, and it is confidently expected that the Princeton Work, because of its non-denominational character, will become the rallying point for all the many religious and philanthropic enterprises already centered at Peking."

THE GRADUATE ADVISORY COMMITTEE of the Philadelphian Society, which is coöperating with the undergraduates in The Princeton Work in Peking, is composed of Cleveland H. Dodge '79, Chairman; Col. John J. McCook, Prof. Henry van Dyke '73, Luther D. Wishard '77, Prof. W. A. Wyckoff '88, C. W. McAlpin '88, Robert E. Speer '89, T. H. P. Sailer '89, and Prof. L. H. Miller '97, Messrs. Speer, Sailer and Miller (Chairman) forming the Executive Committee, with Dr. James S. Dennis '63, Thomas H. Atherton '74, Bishop Franklin S. Spalding '87, and Robert Garrett '97 as additional advisory members. Mr. Garrett is the Treasurer of the committee.

The Opening of the Baseball Season

AFTER bad weather had prevented all the March games, Princeton finally opened the baseball season on Wednesday, April 4th, defeating Dickinson 5-0 on University Field. For a nine that had had only two or three days of outdoor practice in the past two weeks, Princeton played an unusually clean fielding game, and the batting was fairly strong. The hits were for the most part good, clean drives, and they came when they were needed. Byram pitched for the first five innings and struck out nine men, allowing only one hit. Doyle was in the box for the rest of the game, and he also did good work. The pitching was so good that not a Dickinson man reached third during the game.

There was no scoring until the fifth inning, when Cooney reached first on a missed fly to right field, went to second on Byram's sacrifice, and, after Reid had flied out, came home on Newcomb's hit to center field. Newcomb went to second on the home throw, and Vaughn brought him in with a fine two-base hit.

Princeton scored two more runs in the seventh. Reid started it off with a clean two-bagger, Newcomb flied out, but Vaughn again made good with a single, advancing Reid to third. Vaughn stole second, and then Warwick's single to right scored them both. In the eighth, Harlan hit safely, went to second on a passed ball, and scored on Doyle's single.

Left on bases—Princeton 7, Dickinson 2. Two-base hits—Vaughn, Reid. Struck out—By Byram 9, by Doyle 2, by Hall 1. Bases on balls—Off Hall 2. Hit by pitched ball—Reid. Stolen bases—Princeton 2. Wild pitch—Hall. Double play—Smith to Davis. Umpire—Mr. Merity. Time—1.30.

As there has been very little outdoor practice, and only one game has been played, it is too early to get a very good line on the prospects of the nine, but in the Dickinson game there was some pretty good baseball. Four freshmen were given a trial in this game; Heyniger from Lawrenceville at first base, Vaughn from Exeter at second, Sides from St. Paul's at third, and Warwick from the Princeton Preparatory School in right field. Vaughn at second and Sides at third seem to be first-class, Vaughn especially distinguishing himself in this game by getting three safe hits, one a two-bagger, and fielding his position in good form. The freshman pitcher, Heyniger, played a fair game at first base and got one hit. He was not tried in the box. With these freshmen, and Harlan '08 in left field and Newcomb '07 in center, Captain Wells' team of last year could hardly be recognized. Captain Reid at shortstop, Cooney, catcher, and Byram and Doyle, pitchers, were the only members of last year's nine who played in the opening game. Reid did some fine work at shortstop. Byram pitched in his old-time form,—but striking out nine men in five innings and allowing only one hit is almost too good for the first of April. The batting so far has not been unusual, but is fairly strong, and gives promise of improving. And a heavy-hitting nine is, above all else, what is needed.

This Saturday, Fordham at Princeton; next Wednesday, the Boston National League at Princeton. Then the nine leaves for its Easter southern trip, playing the Naval Academy at Annapolis on the 11th, Virginia at Charlottesville on the 12th, the Washington American League at Washington on the 13th, Georgetown at Washington on the 14th and 16th, returning to Princeton for the game with Lafayette on the 18th.

THE presence of President Wilson '79 in Hartford, Conn., on March 30th, was signalized by a luncheon in his honor, which constituted the first Princeton alumni gathering ever held in that city. The enthusiasm, out of all proportion to the numbers, gave sufficient assurance that it will not be the last,—forming in itself, as Prof. Jacobus '77 remarked, "an island oasis in the midst of the surrounding ocean of blue."

The Hon. William F. Henney '74, Mayor of Hartford, presided as toastmaster, and called on President Wilson, Prof. W. R. Martin '72 of Trinity College, and Dean M. W. Jacobus '77 of the Hartford Theological Seminary, President Wilson's host, to respond to informal toasts. At the conclusion of the luncheon, on motion of J. J. Moment '96, it was voted to form a permanent organization of the Princeton alumni of the Connecticut Valley, and the following committee was appointed to have the matter in charge: Prof. W. R. Martin '72, of Hartford, Conn.; R. K. Clark '82, of Springfield, Mass., and Prof. A. C. Armstrong '81, of Middletown, Conn.

DAVID LYON '36

The Rev. David Lyon '36 died at his home in Sloansville, N. Y., on March 2nd. He was nearly ninety-four years of age, and was probably Princeton's oldest graduate in point of years, since the death, on March 5th, 1904, of the Rev. Richard Montgomery Badeau '39, who was Mr. Lyon's senior by one year. Dr. James Curtis Hepburn '32, who is in his ninety-second year, is now the oldest living graduate in years as well as in seniority of graduation. Mr. Lyon was born at Baskinridge, N. J., April 27th, 1812. After graduation from college, he took a course at the Princeton Theological Seminary. In 1840 he acted as supply for the Presbyterian Church of Knox, N. Y. He was ordained by the Presbytery of Albany on Feb. 17th, 1841, and was pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Northampton, N. Y., for the next twenty years. From 1860 to 1876 he was in charge of the Presbyterian Church at Marianville, N. Y., and subsequently he preached in the churches of Northville, Sloansville, Esperance and West Milton, all in the Presbytery of Albany. Since 1893, when he retired from active work in the ministry, he had made his home at Sloansville, N. Y. His loyal interest in Princeton continued throughout his long life, and two years ago he enrolled to vote for Alumni Trustee. Last year he contributed to the Nassau Lit. an interesting description of Princeton in his undergraduate days.

JAMES C. BEACH '45

James C. Beach '45 died of pneumonia at his home in Bloomfield, N. J., on March 21st, after an illness of ten days. He was seventy-nine years of age, having been born in 1827 at Cranetown, now Montclair, N. J. His father was Major Ephriam Beach, engineer for the Morris Canal and the Morris & Essex Railroad. After graduation from Princeton, at the age of 18, Mr. Beach became a clerk in the American Exchange Bank, and in the Marine Bank, New York City. Later he engaged in the manufacture of cardboard at Montclair, N. J., and of paper at Walkill, N. Y. He purchased the patents of the Allen Paper Car Wheel Company, and became a large stockholder in the Lappin Brake Shoe Company. Until March 1st, last, he was Treasurer of the Railway Steel Spring Company of Manhattan. Mr. Beach was also one of the organizers and a director of the Bloomfield National Bank, and was Vice-President of the Bloomfield Coal and Supply Company. He was one of the founders of the Westminster Presbyterian Church of Bloomfield, and for years had been largely interested in charitable work. He is survived by a daughter.

NO. 27

ESTER recess began at Princeton on Wednesday, the 11th, and will close next Tuesday, the 17th.

The baseball team is on the annual Southern trip; the Triangle Club leaves this Friday to present Tabasco-Land in Indianapolis on the evening of the 14th, in St. Louis on the 16th, and in Louisville on the 17th. Two special Pullmans are required to carry the sixty members of the cast, chorus and orchestra.

THE ANNUAL YALE-PRINCETON DEBATE is to be held on May 18th, in Alexander Hall, the question being, "Resolved, That the bachelor's degree should be required for admission to any law school controlled by a university,"—it being understood that "required" means that this should be the regular rule, without prejudice, however, to the right of a law faculty to admit, in exceptional cases, students who do not possess a bachelor's degree; and that "law school controlled by a university" means a school where policy and methods are determined by the trustees of the university. Princeton having proposed the question, Yale has the choice of sides. The trials for the Princeton team began this week.

THE PRINCETON FRESHMEN won the second annual debate with the Yale freshmen, held at Princeton on April 6th. The Princeton team, F. C. Laubach, E. C. Olds, and M. H. Fry, supported the negative of the question, "Resolved, That the principle of intervention enunciated in the pending treaty with Santo Domingo, should be rejected by the United States." The Yale team supporting the affirmative was J. S. McConaughy, M. B. Vilas, and C. T. Clark. A Yale man, also, presided, Dr. Robert K. Root, who has recently come to Princeton as Preceptor in English. The judges were the Hon. F. M. Voorhees, former Governor of New Jersey, and Messrs.

T. W. Balch of Philadelphia and W. B. Robinson of New York. The Yale freshmen having won the first debate, held at New Haven last year, honors are now even.

THE NEW BOARD OF EDITORS of The Nassau Lit., from the Class of '07, is announced as follows: Thomas Jackson Durell, of Lawrenceville, N. J., Managing Editor; Thomas Clinton Pears, Jr., of Pittsburgh; John Nevin Sayre, of South Bethlehem, Pa.; Ralph Woodland Owen, of Eau Claire, Wis.; James Arthur Muller, of Philadelphia; John Wainwright Evans, of Miles City, Mont., and George Alexander Walker, Jr., of Philadelphia.

THE FOOTBALL RULES COMMITTEE meets in New York this Saturday, for final action on the amended rules. Meantime, Mr. Reid of Harvard, Secretary of the Committee, sends The Weekly the following additional defense of the new legislation: Editor,
The Princeton Alumni Weekly,
Princeton N. J.

Dear Sir: I wish to thank you for the very courteous way in which you have treated my lengthy discussion of the new football rules. I have carefully read your editorial on my contribution, and since it is usual for the defendant to have the final word, I am going to make a short comment on one or two of the points which you have brought out.

In the first place, you say that it seems probable that coaches will find a way to utilize the end rush for continuing mass plays, although you admit that if the end is required to stand "outside the outside man on the rush line," this will be almost impossible<sup>1</sup>. You have, then, really granted my claim in this matter, since under the new rules, the end will be required to take this outside position. The misunderstanding here seems to be due to the fact that in publishing the changes in the rules, those parts of the rules that were left unchanged were not given out.

In the second place, you argue that the "lineman-back formation has proven most effective when the impact is directed at an acute angle to the line of resistance." Admitting this to be so, is it not probable that if the end is to be given the ball he will generally be sent outside of tackle—and therefore at a point where the opportunity for mass play will be greatly diminished? It would seem so—for certainly no coach will attempt consistently to use a man for center bucking, who at the outset is stationed well away from the point of attack, when he has nearer at hand, in the persons of his regular backs, men whose especial function it is to advance the ball and who, being nearer the point of attack, are able to strike much more quickly and effectively. Furthermore, in the season just passed, in which the player brought back was allowed this position, we find that he was rarely given the ball, for the reason, of course, that it was found to be poor policy.

Again, in this same connection, it may be said that since the rules for next year are to be worded in such a way as to make it impossible for a player who is supposed to be "on the line of scrimmage" to play really behind it, the end drawn back will have to stand even further away from the ball than before, since he will not be able to take advantage of the distance heretofore saved by having the rush-line player ahead of him stand with his body at right angles to the rush line.

Incidentally, this same rule, as applied to the men on the rush line, will weaken considerably the generation of power behind the line, since men on the rush line will be put to a greater disadvantage in "getting away" quickly enough to be of material assistance.

Another reason why I do not believe that the ends will be used much is because with the "on-side" kick and the "forward pass," it seems probable that the ends will have even more running and open-field work than they have customarily had, with the result that the coaches will hardly feel willing to work them still harder. Greater activity will be at a premium on the ends, and as this activity is rare in combination with other necessary qualities, it seems fair to assume that a good pair of ends will be saved as much as possible.

I cannot then see how it can be argued that by allowing the end back we are in any way likely to increase mass plays—at any rate, vitally. It would seem as though the function of the end will be to make an occasional play to divert the other side, but more especially to look out for fumbles and prevent flank attacks on the real play.

In the third place, I am afraid that I did not make myself quite plain with regard to my comment on your assertion that during the past year it had been possible to make 10 yards in three downs. Perhaps I may make that position a little clearer now: I do not believe that there has ever been a time in the history of football when it would not be possible to find instances where teams have made 10 yards in three downs. Such instances, I have no doubt, frequently occurred. The point that I wish to make clear is that teams have not been able to make 10 yards in three downs enough times consecutively to warrant one in saying that such performances have been at all regular—and it is this regularity that counts.

In the last Harvard-Yale game, according to the Yale Alumni Weekly, Harvard averaged 2 5-6 yards to a rush, and Yale 2 2-3 yards, the latter average including Roome's 44-yard run. This looks as though your contention would hold water. Looking, however, at the chart of the game, it will be seen that between the exceptionally large gains, there were invariably periods where the offensive team had all it could possibly do, and in many cases more than it could do, to make its 5 yards in three downs. And what was true of the Harvard-Yale game this fall may be said I think to be true as a general thing of most football games of recent years. It is upon this contingency, taken in connection with the increased distance that a fumble or the checking of a play will force a team to make on such an occasion, that I am especially counting.

In the fourth place, in referring to the Harvard-Yale and Harvard-Pennsylvania matches of 1905, you state that Harvard, though able for considerable periods to gain more than 3 1-3 yards per down, was beaten. Does this not in itself show how lacking in consecutiveness these gains must have been and were? It seems to me that the defense will have to be weakened very decidedly next fall and perhaps more than the present rules would seem to indicate will be the case, before we may feel sure that a given team will be able to make 10-yard gains consecutively enough to score from more than easy striking distance.

I realize in thus attempting to predict what may happen next fall, that I may be hitting very wide of the mark—indeed, in attempting to foresee what is likely to transpire as a result of changes in the rules which launch the game into entirely new waters, it will be strange if I do not make some bad errors. And yet I feel that such predictions are wise and justifiable if they lead to discussion which in turn may possibly have a beneficial effect in securing the kind of game that we all desire.

Thanking you again for your kindly toleration of my ideas, I am,

Yours very sincerely,

W. T. REID, JR.

The Real Situation in China

A PROPOS of "The Princeton Work in Peking" outlined here last week, Robert R. Gailey, A.M. '97, who is to be in charge of the work, has prepared for The Weekly the following lucid explanation of the real situation in China. Mr. Gailey writes with the authority of one who has spent nearly a decade in close, personal contact with all classes of Chinese:

THE REAL SITUATION IN CHINA is a question upon which a good deal of light needs to be thrown. In the first place foreigners have always misunderstood China. In spite of the mass of stuff that is written about China in these days we still must confess large ignorance of the real condition of affairs. And when we feel that we do begin to comprehend something of the life, spirit and character of the sons of Han we still persist in thinking they are "different" and require some peculiar kind of diplomacy, a kind of treatment suitable to the Chinese life and ideals or standards of civilization.

But in the face of this innate feeling that we are superior to or different from the Chinese, we are gradually beginning to realize that the Chinese people are a people of power, originality and stability. We are beginning to recognize them as having brains and that they can use them. It took, however, the American boycott to make us realize it. Just as it was necessary for Japan to learn to fight successfully,

"to learn how to kill people," as the Japanese scornfully say, before they were accorded a place among the civilized nations of the world, it may take some bloody war in which China will demonstrate her military skill and prowess before we recognize China as a first-class power.

China is learning the lesson slowly but she is learning it surely. She is not asleep as some suppose. Her sixty years of contact with foreign nations and the treatment she has gotten from them have driven her to adopt the same policy and tactics in dealing with foreigners as was employed against her. We should not be surprised then if our own "tricks" are played on ourselves.

The fact is China is a nation today imbued with a national consciousness, a spirit of patriotism and independence as was never known before. This explains the so-called "anti-foreign" movement in China of which we have such a terror nowadays. As many Americans see it, "anti-foreign" feeling and "Boxerism" are one and the same thing. Anti-foreign movement in China today does not mean the Chinese are preparing to cut off the heads of foreigners in China. It does mean that China wants to be free from foreign control; she wants to manage her own affairs and be self-respecting. Can any true American find fault with such a spirit? China is simply asking for the "square deal." For these many years China has been the field of exploitation for foreign nations, and much has been made of the so-called "most favored nation" clause, by which it was understood that no concession or privilege would be granted by China to any nation that would not be granted equally to all. China in turn now rightly demands that she be given the same ordinary treatment usually accorded by civilized peoples to each other in all their international affairs.

It is significant that the reigning dynasty is now taking a very advanced position with regard to reform. Many very radical reform measures are being introduced, such as the abolishing of the old competitive system of Government examinations, which has been responsible in the past for the greatest and most powerful literary aristocracy in the world, and, to take its place, the introduction of western methods of education on a colossal scale; the doing away with ancient methods in warfare and the preparing on a large scale of a modern army; the control and development of the country's natural resources, mines, railways, etc.; modern recognized methods of administration of justice; re-adjustment of official appointment and remuneration; municipal reform, etc. In order effectively to introduce these important reform measures, the Government has been wise enough to call out her ablest and most progressive officials. Such men as Viceroy Yuan Shih Kai of North China, Chang Chih Tung, Chou Fu and Tuan Fang of the Yangtze Valley region and South China, make the future of China very hopeful, so long as they are given a chance to do something.

Now it is evident that this new spirit and these new forces suddenly let loose in the old conservative empire will bring a great strain upon, and even imperil the progress of, the New China. There will doubtless be during the period of transformation local disturbances, lawless outbreaks, occurrences incident to radical national changes. But there is no ground for the reports circulated in this country that we are on the eve of a Boxer uprising in China compared to which the events of 1900 will appear as mere bagatelle. Authentic reports from China, both from public and private sources, express no concern for a general movement against foreigners. The Chinese officials are most anxious to avoid anything that would even appear to be of the character of a Boxer movement. The Chinese know that such an attempt as that of 1900, if repeated now, would not only be foolish but would be suicidal. Whilst, therefore, we may expect interesting changes to take place in China during the next five or eight years, it is my growing conviction that, far from China plotting to kill foreigners within her domain, she will welcome them to her shores, if the Chinese are shown anything like "fair play" in international affairs.

America's place in the Far East is on the whole a very desirable one. No nation in China has such prestige as America. Our Government has had no designs upon China's territory, and we have always stood for the "open-door" policy. Besides, the American people through the Christian churches have done a great deal for China which is being appreciated more and more. With these new conditions now obtaining, of course our opportunity to help China in her hour of need is greatly enhanced. It is, then, a source of considerable gratification to many Princeton men that the opportunity has come to Princeton University to have a definite share in China's renaissance, under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association in Peking, as has been outlined in a previous issue.

It will be no small contribution to the New China for Princeton to extend to Chinese young men those very influences which in her splendid past Princeton has given to young men of our own country. Let no one be thinking it is not an opportune time to do this work. The fact is "now is the very time to do it." Whilst the new leaders in China are being swayed terrifically by the onrush of these new ideas and forces from the West, what an unspeakable need there is for the sobering influences of just such work as Princeton is undertaking at the Capital of China, where the leaders of the New China are sure to be. In this work Princeton has the unique opportunity of helping China take her right place among the nations of the world.

B a s e b a l l

THE Princeton baseball squad, consisting of Captain Reid '06, Doyle '05, Byram '06, Bard '06, Cooney '07, Newcomb '07, McLean '07, Harlan '08, Hamill '08, Sides '09, Vaughn '09, Heyniger '09, Dillon '09, and Warwick '09; Coach W. B. Cosgrave '04, Manager Johnston '06, Assistant Manager Wells '07, and Official Scorer H. F. Bliss '06, started on their Easter trip on April 10th, after the game with the Boston Nationals. On Wednesday Princeton beat the Naval Academy at Annapolis, 3-1, and on Thursday won from the University of Virginia, 2-1, at Charlottesville. Detailed accounts of these games will be given next week.

This Friday the nine plays the Washington America League team at Washington, and on Saturday and Monday, Georgetown at Washington. The next home game is with Lafayette on Wednes-

PRINCETON 7, FORDHAM 1

Princeton played good baseball in the second game of the season, and defeated Fordham 7-1 at University Field, April 7th. Neither side made an error; Princeton won by timely hitting and better pitching. Fordham got four hits, but they were scattered, only one of them counting for a score. Freshman Heyniger, who played first base in the Dickinson game, was given a trial in the box. In six innings he struck out five batters and allowed only two safe hits. Then Byram went in. He started off in the seventh by striking out three batters in quick succession. Bard was back at first base, and McLean, last year's third baseman, played right field. Vaughn and Sides seem to have made good at second and third. Harlan and Newcomb, left and center, were replaced, after the sixth inning, by Dillon, the quarterback, and Warwick. This was Dillon's first trial in a game, and his only time at bat resulted in a clean hit that brought in a run.

There was no scoring until the third inning, though in the second Sides hit safely, and Harlan's clean two-bagger looked good for a run. But Sides was caught between third and home. In the third inning Heyniger was given a base on balls, Reid was hit by a pitched ball, Newcomb's sacrifice advanced them both, and McLean was given four bad balls. Then Vaughn, with a timely three-bagger, brought them all home, and Sides' grounder to second scored Vaughn. In the sixth Sides was hit by a pitched ball, stole second, and scored on Cooney's hit. In the seventh Reid drew a base on balls, stole second, and came home on Dillon's safe hit to left. Dillon went to second on the home throw, and scored on Sides' single.

Fordham's only run came in the sixth inning, when Egan hit safely, stole second, was advanced to third by Rudolph's grounder, and scored on Hartman's long fly to Harlan.

BOSTON 3, PRINCETON 0

Princeton was defeated 3-0 by the Boston National League team, on University Field, April 10th. Although the ground was wet and slippery the fielding was excellent. The Princeton infield worked well together, and Sides at third made a hair-raising stop of an apparently sure drive. But Princeton could not find the professional pitchers, Doyle getting the only safe hit. In the first inning Reid reached third, with one out, but he overran the base and was caught. Sharp fielding kept Boston from scoring till the sixth inning. Then Tenney was given a base on balls, went to third on Dolan's single, and scored on Brain's two-base hit, but Newcomb's good throw home caught Dolan at the plate. Bates hit safely, scoring Brain, but Newcomb and Reid worked a double play on Bridwell's fly, retiring Boston with two runs on three hits. In the seventh Boston made it 3-0. Strobel hit safely, and Needham singled to Newcomb, who made a fine throw to third, catching Strobel. Lindaman hit safely, and Good's base on balls filled the bases. Vaughn's low throw to the plate, of Tenney's grounder, allowed Needham to score, but Sides cut off Lindaman at home, and Brain went out on a high foul. Three hits: one run.

A luncheon was given to the Class of '63 by the Rev. Daniel R. Foster at his residence, Greenwood avenue, Trenton, on March 24th. There were decorations, confections and various enticing comestibles in the college colors, and souvenir favors were presented to each guest,—a little platter in orange and black with pictures of Nassau Hall or Blair Hall. Dr. William Elmer '61 of Trenton was an honorary guest, and the following members of the class enjoyed the occasion and spent several hours in happy renewal of old times: Rev. Henry R. Hall, Columbus, N. J.; Dr. S. Beach Jones and James S. MacCoy, of New York; James W. Patterson, of Baltimore; Gen. Frank Reeder, Easton, Pa.; Prof. J. Woodbridge Patton, of the University of Pennsylvania, Class Secretary; Dr. S. S. Stryker, of Philadelphia, the Class President; James B. Vredenburg, Jersey City, and the Rev. Dr. H. U. Swinnerton, Cherry Valley, N. Y. Several class canes were brought, among them the elaborate one formerly belonging to Mordecai, now owned by Dayton,—from both of whom, and several others, letters were read, regretting their inability to be present. The Class of '63 has had in all 111 members. In freshman year there were fifty-four, in sophomore year eighty-six, in junior year sixty-seven, and in senior year sixty-one. Thirty-three left college to fight in the Civil War. Sixty-three took degrees, some of them after the war. There are now forty-nine members of the class living.

Judge Charles E. Hendrickson, of Mount Holly, N. J., has recovered from his recent illness, and is again performing his duties on the bench.

The Hon. William F. Henney was reelected Mayor of Hartford, Conn., on the Republican ticket, on April 3rd. The election was held under the new "Corrupt Practices Act," and a correspondent writes, "I imagine the election was as clean a one as Hartford has ever had. . . It was all the more significant of the popular approval of Mayor Henney's administration." The Hartford Courant gives this editorial comment on the result of the vote:

There is ground for a mighty lot of solid satisfaction in the outcome of yesterday's election. It renews faith in popular government and once more demonstrates that, when the situation is made clear, you can trust the people. Mayor Henney has made as good a mayor as ever Hartford has had. The city's affairs have been admirably managed during his administration and finally he came, indeed was almost forced, to let himself be a candidate for re-election. There was no reason for turning him out, and the people by a majority of over 2,000 have kept him in.

Dr. James Priestly Shaw has been appointed by Mayor Guthrie of Pittsburgh, Director of Public Charities in the new reform administration of that city. For several years Dr. Shaw has taken a prominent part in the movement for good government in Pittsburgh, and during the last campaign he was Chairman of the Civic Party. One of Dr. Shaw's plans is to establish a camp for the treatment of consumptives by the open-air method, under the direction of the Department of Charities. As an undergraduate Dr. Shaw was captain of the baseball nine, and manager of the famous Lamar championship football team of '85. He is a graduate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, and for several years has been a successful physician in Pittsburgh. He has always been active in Princeton work; for two years he was President of the Princeton Club of Western Pennsylvania.

JOHN B. MCFERRAN, JR., '85

John B. McFerran, Jr., '85 died on March 20th, in Miami, Florida. He had been in Florida since the first of the year, and with his father, wife, and two sons was on a fishing trip below Miami when he was attacked with appendicitis. So soon as possible he was taken to Miami, a surgeon from Louisville being summoned by telegraph to meet him there. The operation disclosed that the unavoidable delay had been too great; and, liver complications developing, he died. The funeral was held at Louisville on March 22nd.

Mr. McFerran has always been noted among his classmates for his bright, sunny, and lovable character, and no one at the reunion of the Class of '85 last June contributed more than he to the success of the occasion, several men signifying their intention of being present, giving as their reason that they had learned that Johnny McFerran was coming East to the reunion.

The Class of '85 wishes to record the deep feeling of regret and sorrow which the class experiences in the death of John B. McFerran, Jr.; and to express to the members of his family our sorrow and sympathy.

SATURDAY, APRIL 21, 1906

NO. 28

THE last quarter of the college year began this week, with the return of the students from their Easter recess. The seniors are trying on their caps and gowns, and preparing for their open-air concerts on the steps; class-day sub-committees are holding numerous meetings; University Field is crowded with baseball and track candidates every afternoon; young athletes from many prep. schools will throng the field this Saturday at the annual interscholastic track meet; the golf greens have been opened and the procession of undergraduate cracks and faculty duffers has begun; Patton Hall is nearing completion and McCosh Hall is under way; the Lake is still unfinished; the Preceptorial System is a great success; the club elections come next week; young members of the faculty are booking for the summer invasion of Europe; the new Lit. and Princetonian boards have taken charge; the spring term is in full swing.

YALE HAS CHOSEN THE NEGATIVE of the question submitted by Princeton for the annual Yale-Princeton debate, namely, "Resolved, that the bachelor's degree should be required for admission to any law school controlled by a university." The debate is scheduled for Alexander Hall on May 18th. Final trials for the Princeton team are to be held this Saturday.

THE WESTERN ASSOCIATION OF PRINCETON CLUBS is to hold its annual meeting at Cleveland, Ohio, on May 19th, at which Dean Andrew F. West '74 will represent the University. On May 4th Dean West is to speak in St. Louis on The Preceptorial System in the Classics, at the annual meeting of the Classical Association of the West and South. During his recent trip to the Pacific coast, Professor West was one of the speakers at the annual dinner of the Yale Alumni Association in San Francisco; at a dinner of the University Club of San Francisco he spoke on Maintaining Academic Standards; he addressed the students of Leland Stanford University on Democracy in Student Life, and on the same evening made a speech at the Bohemian Club of San Francisco; and he read a paper on The Changing Conception of the Faculty in American Universities, at the annual meeting of the Association of American Universities, in San Francisco. On the return journey Dean West stopped at Silver City, New Mexico, for a short visit with Wayne Wilson '98.

PRECEPTORIAL METHODS are exemplified in the German Club, recently organized by teachers and students of that department, an instance of the intermingling of faculty and undergraduates, for the promotion of vital scholarship. Next month the club is to present a play in its own language, and recently, under its auspices, Dr. Ludwig Fulda of Berlin, the eminent playwright, lectured in Princeton on "Schiller and the New Generation." While the audience did not strain the capacity of Murray Hall, we are assured by a member of the German department that "it was an audience which did not need prompting when to applaud." The same authority informs us that "for profound mastery of the theme, for finished analysis and reconstruction of a great man, and for beauty of literary form and oratorical delivery, Dr. Fulda's lecture was distinctly one of the best that has been given in Princeton for many years." Before the lecture members of the department entertained Dr. Fulda at dinner, and after it he was the guest of the German Club at an informal Kneipe.

MRS. BALLINGTON BOOTH, head of the Volunteer Prison League of America, was the speaker at the mid-week meeting of the Philadelphian Society on April 19th.

THE FOOTBALL RULES COMMITTEE held another meeting in New York on April 14th,—the final session, according to announcement, for this year's revision of the code. It was largely devoted to the proper phrasing of the new amendments, the only vital legislation being the revocation of the rule tentatively adopted at a former meeting, weakening the defense by the withdrawal of one man from the line. The effect of this is to leave the defense the same as it has been heretofore.

THE NET RESULTS of the committee's numerous meetings are: 1. The ten-yard rule,—doubling the former distance to be gained in three downs, in order to retain possession of the ball. 2. The on-side kick,—after a kick, all players to be on side as soon as the ball touches the ground. 3. The high tackle,—no tackling below the knees, except by the center, guards and tackles on defense. 4. The forward pass. 5. The center, guards, tackles, and one end of the attacking team must be on the line of scrimmage when the ball is put in play; any one lineman, however, allowed to go back at least five yards, presumably for a kick. 6. Severe penalties for violations of the rules, unnecessary roughness, unsportsmanlike conduct, etc.

JUST HOW MUCH THE GAME ITSELF will be changed by these alterations in the rules will remain, of course, a matter of speculation until they are put to the test on the playing fields next season. It seems plain, however, that the new legislation will bring about no radical departures in American football. The on-side kick rule will undoubtedly encourage punting, and is a distinct advance toward opening up the game; and now that the committee has decided not to weaken the defense, the ten-yard rule will have a similar effect. The high tackle and forward pass will, we believe, prove of little consequence, for the value of both of them has been very much impaired by restrictions. Only one forward pass is allowed on a play; it must be made by a player who was behind the scrimmage line when the ball was put in play; with the exception of the ends, it cannot be received by a man who was on the line of scrimmage when the ball was put in play; it cannot be lobbed over the line of scrimmage; if passed over the goal line it's merely a touchback; it is not allowed by the side not putting the ball in play; and if the ball touches the ground before being touched by a player, it goes to the opponents. With so many restrictions and the chance of losing the ball anyhow, that one forward pass to the play will scarcely revolutionize the game. And the high tackle rule is practically nullified by this subsequent modification: "It shall not be a foul tackle if the tackler's arms or hands slip below the knees after the tackle has been made,"—an old trick which the present generation of players will not be slow to learn.

THE BEST THAT CAN BE SAID of the new football legislation is that it is a step in the right direction,—the direction of opening up the game. To that end, more radical changes will unquestionably be demanded next year. By persisting in allowing five men back of the line, the committee has failed to eliminate the possibility of mass play; but at any rate those abominations guard-back and tackle-back have been prohibited, a consummation for which let us all be devoutly thankful.

FROM THE COMPOSER OF "OLD NASSAU"

The Editor of the Alumni Weekly.

Dear Sir: May I beg a small space in your paper to express my sincere and hearty thanks to the alumni of Princeton for their kindness and remembrance of me. Were it possible for me to visit each and all of them to thank them for the honor they have bestowed on me, I would gladly do so; but since the number of my unknown friends seems to me so large that I cannot reach them, if you will allow for this in your paper, I think they will all know how I feel about it.

Very truly yours,

KARL A. LANGLOTZ.

The Nine's Southern Trip

SIX victories and three defeats is the record of the Princeton nine to date. The only college game lost was the second with Georgetown, the other defeats being by the professional nines of Boston and Washington. On the Southern trip the nine was fairly successful, defeating Annapolis and Virginia, breaking even with Georgetown, and holding the Washington American League team down to two runs.

With Byram, Doyle and Heyniger, Princeton has a strong pitching staff, and the fielding has been good. However, this nine has not yet shown much batting ability. Of the new players, Vaughn seems to be the best hitter; Captain Reid, Sides and Harlan are doing fairly well, but on the whole the batting is indifferent. Cornell at Ithaca this Saturday.

PRINCETON 3, ANNAPOLIS 1

In the first game of the Southern trip Princeton beat the Naval Academy 3-1 at Annapolis on April 11th. Princeton played an errorless fielding game, and got ten safe hits, Newcomb making four and Sides two. Byram scored eleven strikeouts, was hit safely three times, and gave one base on balls.

PRINCETON 2, VIRGINIA 1

Princeton won a ninth-inning victory from the University of Virginia, at Charlottesville, on April 12th. Virginia scored first, in the seventh inning, and Princeton got one run in the eighth when Warwick scored on Heyniger's scratch hit. In the ninth inning with one out and Harlan on base, Vaughn knocked out a smashing three-bagger, bringing in Harlan and winning the game. Both nines played well in the field, but there wasn't much batting. Freshman Heyniger held Virginia down to two hits.

WASHINGTON 2, PRINCETON 0

Princeton was defeated by the Washington American League nine, 2-0, at Washington on April 13th. Doyle held the professionals down to three scattered hits, but he gave six bases on balls, and three Washington players reached first on errors. Princeton got five safe hits, but they were scattered and did not count for runs.

PRINCETON 4, GEORGETOWN 1

Princeton won the first Georgetown game, 4-1, at Washington, on April 14th.

Byram was in fine form, striking out eleven men and allowing only three hits. Princeton won by bunched hits and good base-running in the seventh inning, when singles by Vaughn and Bard and Cooney's double brought in three runs.

GEORGETOWN 3, PRINCETON 2

After winning the first Georgetown game, Princeton lost the second, 2-3, at Washington on April 16th. It took eleven innings to decide it, but in the eleventh, with two out, Simon of Georgetown knocked out a home run into the gulley back of right field, winning the game. It was 0-0 until the fifth, and then it was 2-2 until the eleventh. Princeton got two runs in the fifth on Warwick's single, a base on balls, and Captain Reid's two-bagger; and Georgetown tied the score on a base on balls, Smith's single, Heyniger's wild pitch and Mudd's single. Heyniger pitched for five innings, and Byram finished the game. The latter struck out ten batters.

PRINCETON 9, LAFAYETTE 1

After returning from the Southern trip, Princeton defeated Lafayette 9-1 on University Field, April 18th. The team showed the effects of the hard Southern schedule, and played a ragged, listless game. But Lafayette was even more erratic than Princeton. Newberry, their crack pitcher, had an off day and his team gave him poor support. Neither nine did very much batting and most of the runs were due to errors. The game dragged out for over two hours, and apart from a few brilliant individual plays, it was uninteresting. Heyniger started the pitching for Princeton, but he was not up to his usual form. In the third inning he was hit on the arm by a pitched ball, and Doyle then went in. After that, Lafayette got only one hit, and of the twenty-one batters who came up only four reached first.

Lafayette scored one run in the second inning when Peters reached first on Sides' error, stole second, went to third when Reid failed to stop Updegrove's grounder, and came in on Cooney's muff of Harlan's throw home.

Princeton scored in the first inning, Reid receiving a base on balls, going to second on McLean's sacrifice, and reaching home on Vaughn's single. In the second Heyniger got his base on Updegrove's error, went to second on Reid's base on balls, and scored on Harlan's hit. Princeton got three more runs in the third, when Sides, Warwick and Heyniger all came in on Reid's long fly to left, which Folkinson muffed after a difficult try. In the fifth Doyle, Reid and McLean scored on Harlan's single and Hawk's error; and in the sixth Reid brought Bard home from second with a clean hit.

O B I T U A R Y

JOHN D. GURNEE '53

The Hon. John D. Gurnee '53 died at his home, 115 East Gilman St., Madison, Wis., on March 15th, in his seventy-fourth year. He was born in Rockland county, New York, Dec. 25th, 1831. After graduation from Princeton he studied law with Judge Hasbrouck, of Newburgh, N. Y., and upon admission to the bar, in 1857, he moved to Madison, where he began the practice of his profession in partnership with Mr. W. H. Hasbrouck, under the firm name of Hasbrouck & Gurnee. A few years later the partnership was dissolved, and Mr. Gurnee continued the business, making a specialty of real estate investments for Eastern capitalists, in preference to a general law practice. In 1872 he represented his district in the Wisconsin Legislature, as a Democrat, and was actively interested in politics until 1896, when he withdrew from the Democratic party. For more than a generation Mr. Gurnee was very prominent in the social, professional, and political life of Madison. He was warm-hearted, liberal, and hospitable, and his genial disposition made him a favorite among a large circle of friends. In 1863 he married Miss Madeline M. C. Reynolds, of Madison, who, with three sons, survives him.

WILLIAM SCOTT '68

William Scott '68 died at his home, 817 Bidwell street, Pittsburgh, on Feb. 27th, after an illness of several months. He was a noted lawyer, and had served as President of the Allegheny County Bar Association and of the Pennsylvania State Bar Association. For many years he was attorney for the Pennsylvania Railroad. He was one of Pittsburgh's representatives at the Universal Congress of Lawyers and Jurists, at the World's Fair, St. Louis, in 1904. Mr. Scott married Miss Anna King on October 25th, 1880. He is survived by his widow and three sons, one of these being James King Scott '02.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Princeton Club of Western Pennsylvania, held April 2nd, 1906, the following minute was unanimously adopted:

The Princeton men of Western Pennsylvania have learned with great sorrow and regret of the death of William Scott of the Class of 1868. Mr. Scott was born May 8th, 1850, at Huntington, Pa., and some time after graduation from Princeton he registered as a law student with his father, the late Hon. John Scott, United States Senator from Pennsylvania, 1864-1875. After his admission to the bar he became associated in the practice of law with John Hampton and John Dalzell, under the firm name of Hampton, Dalzell and Scott, reorganized in 1887, after the death of Mr. Hampton, as Dalzell, Scott and Gordon, and this connection was continued until his death.

Mr. Scott's great and justly deserved reputation as a lawyer was, if possible, surpassed by the regard in which he was held for his rare and admirable qualities of personal character. He exemplified the highest standard of personal and professional honor, courtesy and integrity. The charm of his personality and the nobility of thought and action which inspired and controlled his life in every relation won for him the love and respect of all who knew him. In the midst of a busy professional career he manifested an efficient and unselfish interest in all public questions and in every just cause.

In the death of Mr. Scott the Princeton Club of Western Pennsylvania has suffered the loss of one of its most prominent and respected members, one of its best and most reliable friends. He was most active and influential in its organization, and it always commanded his cheerful and earnest support. The success and standing and influence of the club are largely due to his interest in it, his labors for it, and to his high standing and commanding influence. In serving the club he honored it, and it, in turn, was pleased to honor him. He was for years its President, and throughout his life was a loyal and devoted son of Old Nassau. No man in Western Pennsylvania has rendered more or better service to his Alma Mater than did he. Princeton University stands higher in the estimation of the people of Western Pennsylvania, because of his culture, his character and his noble and useful life. He was a model of the best product of that ancient and honorable institution of Christian instruction.

The sorrow occasioned by his death is sharpened by a sense of the great loss which has come to us, not only as his friends, but also as members of this club and of Princeton University. At the same time the memory of his pure and useful life remains as a benediction in the minds of all who knew him.

WILLIAM HOWARD EBY '69

William Howard Eby '69 died at the Shupe Hospital, Harrisburg, Pa., on March 15th, after a lingering illness. He entered Princeton from Harrisburg Academy, and as an undergraduate he played on the baseball team during his four years in college, being a member of the first Princeton nine that played with Yale. After graduation he returned to Harrisburg, where at various times he was engaged in the coal and real estate business, and for many years he was with the grocery firm of J. R. Eby & Sons.

ARTHUR TURNURE '76

Arthur Turnure '76 died of pneumonia at his home, 109 East 71st St., New York, on April 13th. He was born in New York forty-nine years ago, and was a son of the late David M. Turnure. For nearly thirty years Mr. Turnure had been in the publishing business in New York, and at the time of his death he was the proprietor and editor of Vogue, a weekly magazine founded in 1892 by Mr. Turnure and the late Mr. Harry McVickar. Soon after graduation from Princeton Mr. Turnure founded and published the Art Exchange. Later he published the Art Age, but soon sold his interests and became manager of the art department of Harper & Brothers. About eight months ago he organized and became the head of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Reform Association, for the purpose of securing reform in the management of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. He was a member of the Princeton, Calumet, Grolier, and Meadow Brook Hunt Clubs and of the Architectural League of New York. He is survived by his widow and one son.

As an undergraduate, Mr. Turnure was the founder, and chairman of the first board of editors, of the Bric-a-Brac, and it was due to his efforts that the first number of that publication was such a success. He belonged to the South East Club (which had its headquarters in the south entry of East College) whose members have been devoted to advancing the interests of Princeton.

WILLIAM BARNET WOLFE '78

The members of his class will deeply regret to learn of the death of their classmate William Barnet Wolfe '78. While he had to leave comparatively early in the course, on account of failing eyesight and poor health, he had shown very clearly that he was a person of sterling worth, and this has been evident in all the years since. Notwithstanding the constant struggle against the drawback of a poor constitution, he was always cheerful, and accomplished an amount of work that gave him a position as one of the leaders in Pittsburgh, his native city.

He had many business interests. He practically established and was the President of the Wolfe Brush Company, and in this, his principle work, he had large influence in business and labor circles. He was also President of the Lang Broom Company; Vice-President of the Western Insurance Company; and a Director in the Baird Machine Company, in the First National Bank of Birmingham (Pittsburgh), in the Anchor Savings Bank, in the Germania Savings Bank, and in the Tenth Street Bridge Company.

In politics he was an active Republican, and, as a member of the City Councils of Pittsburgh for one term, when he was elected on a reform ticket, he did good service fighting against schemes for looting the city, and showing a manly courage in legislation.

His most prominent work in philanthropy was in connection with the Passavant Hospital of Pittsburgh, of which he was a director and for which he did much work, especially during the last two years of his life, when he labored hard to raise money with which to pay off the indebtedness of that institution.

He was an enthusiastic Princetonian, was at one time a member of the Executive Committee of the Princeton Club of Western Pennsylvania, and was always interested in the men and the affairs of the University.

He was born in Pittsburgh in 1856 and always lived there. In 1889, also at Pittsburgh, he married Miss Emma Margaret Bingler; and she and a son and two daughters survive him. He died of pneumonia at his home in Pittsburgh on April 4th, 1906, after an illness of a few days.

THOMAS HASTINGS ROBINSON

The Rev. Thomas Hastings Robinson, D. D., a trustee of Princeton from 1875 to 1888, and the father of Prof. William A. Robinson '81 of Lawrenceville, Edward O. Robinson '86 of Los Angeles, Cal., and Thomas H. Robinson, Jr., '91 of Redlands, Cal., died at Redlands, Cal., on April 8th. Though not a graduate of Princeton himself, he was one of her most loyal and enthusiastic friends. He was born in Erie County, Pa., in 1828, and was a graduate of Oberlin College and the Western Theological Seminary of Allegheny, Pa. From 1854 until 1885 he served the Market Square Presbyterian Church of Harrisburg, first as colleague pastor, and from 1867 as pastor. In 1885 he accepted the chair of Sacred Rhetoric, Pastoral Theology and Church Government, in the Western Theological Seminary, retiring in 1901. Besides being a trustee of Princeton, he was a trustee and President pro tem. of Wilson College for Women, a trustee of Washington and Jefferson College and of the Pennsylvania College for Women, and a director of the Western Theological Seminary. During the Civil War he was a member of the United States Christian Commission. He was several times a delegate to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church; in 1875 and 1889 he was a delegate to the Alliance of Reformed Churches throughout the world, at its meetings in London. He is survived by three sons and two daughters. Dr. Robinson was an uncle of Philip E. Robinson '98, instructor in physics in Princeton.

Being the full Narrative of "The Stolen Story"

JESSE LYNCH WILLIAMS

Author of "Princeton Stories," "The Adventures of a Freshman," etc.

A dramatic and lively account of the romance in the life of a modern genius who was a newspaper man of action. The rare and active personality of the hero revealed in the progress of his love story and of a remarkable political intrigue makes intensely interesting the climax of the book, which is one of the great scenes of contemporary fiction.

COMMITTEES of the four Princeton classes were organized the first of this week, to collect subscriptions from the undergraduates, in coöperation with the Citizens' Association of Princeton, for the relief of the homeless and destitute of San Francisco. On Thursday night the Triangle Club gave an extra performance of Tabasco-Land, the proceeds going to the relief fund.

EVERY PRINCETON ALUMNUS is requested to write to his representative in Congress, urging that a day be fixed for bringing up and passing the bill appropriating $30,000 to assist the State of New Jersey and the citizens of Princeton in building the long proposed monument in commemoration of the Battle of Princeton. This bill has passed the Senate and is now on the House calendar, having been favorably reported by the Library Committee, to which it was referred. Congressman Ira

W. Wood '77 of Trenton, who is endeavoring to secure favorable action on the bill at the present session, needs the coöperation of his fellow alumni, in order that the appropriation may not again fail. The present opportunity for such favorable action should not be neglected by Princeton men. Call the matter to the attention of your Congressman, requesting that he see Speaker Cannon, Mr. Dalzell and Mr. Payne of the Committee on Rules, and request that they name a day for bringing up the Princeton Battle Monument bill.

THE PRESS CLUB, whose members perform an important service for Princeton, as correspondents for the city newspapers, gave its annual dinner at the Inn on Wednesday night. R. H. Jones '06, the retiring President of the club, presided as toastmaster, and the speakers were Prof. John G. Hibben '82, Dean Andrew F. West '74, C. T. Larzelere '07, Editor-in-Chief of the Daily Princetonian; Prof. Stockton Axson, and President Wilson '79. The officers of the club were elected for next year, namely Bird LeG. Rees '07, President; Courtland N. Smith '08, Vice-President; Thomas B. Reed '08, Secretary and Treasurer. It was a very successful dinner, and an entertaining and instructive occasion.

PRÉSIDENT WILSON '79 has accepted the invitation of Harvard University to deliver the annual Phi Beta Kappa Oration at Harvard on June 28th. On the occasion of the inauguration of President Demarest of Rutgers, June 30th, Dr. Wilson is to offer the congratulations of Princeton; he will deliver the Baccalaureate Address in Princeton on June 10th, and he and Dean West '74 will represent the University at the annual meeting of the Western Association of Princeton Clubs, in Cleveland on May 19th.

PROF. WILLIAM BERRYMAN SCOTT '77, the geologist, has received the notable honor of an election to the National Academy of Sciences, of Washington, whose membership is limited to one hundred. At the bicentennial celebration of the birth of Benjamin Franklin, in Philadelphia last week, Prof. Scott, who is a lineal descendant of Franklin, presided at one of the sessions of the American Philosophical Society, of which he is a Vice-President, and read a paper on the collection of tertiary mammals recently submitted to him for investigation by the Geological Survey of Natal, South Africa. During the Franklin celebration Prof. Scott received from the University of Pennsylvania the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws.

THE ANNUITIES FOR RETIRED COLLEGE PROFESSORS provided by the fund of $10,000,000 established last year by Mr. Andrew Carnegie, are to become available by the end of the present academic year, according to an announcement of the trustees of the fund. As a working basis for assigning the pensions, the trustees have taken from the statutes of the State of New York these definitions of a college and a technical school, namely, that an institution to be ranked as a college must have at least six professors, giving their entire time to college and university work; a course of four full years in the liberal arts and sciences, and should require for admission not less than the usual four years of academic or high school preparation or its equivalent, in addition to pre-academic or grammar school studies; that a technical school, to be eligible to the Carnegie pension fund, must have entrance requirements equivalent to those of a college in point of school preparation, and must offer courses in pure and applied science.

TEACHERS IN SECTARIAN INSTITUTIONS having been excluded from the annuities, the trustees have voted that any school whose charter, constitution or by-laws require teachers, students or trustees to be of a certain religious body or where strictly denominational tenets or doctrines are taught, shall be deemed sectarian; if, however, the charter of a college fails to specify that it is not sectarian, it will be sufficient to enjoy the provisions of the fund if the trustees or directors certify by resolution that no denominational test is imposed in the choice of trustees or officers or teachers, nor are denominational tenets or doctrines taught to the students.

THE RETIRING AGE has been fixed at sixty-five, though after twenty-five years of service a professor will be entitled to a pension, regardless of his age. The amount of the annuity varies according to length of service and the salary before retirement. Any person sixty-five years old and with not less than fifteen years of service as professor, who is at the time of his retirement a professor in an eligible institution, is entitled to a pension as follows: For active pay of $1,600 or less a retiring allowance of $800, provided that no retiring allowance shall exceed 80 per cent. of the active pay. For active pay of more than $1,600, the retiring allowance shall be $1,000, increased by $50 for each $100 in excess of $1,600. But no retiring allowance shall exceed $3,000.

AFTER TWENTY-FIVE YEARS of service, regardless of age, the retiring allowance was fixed at 50 per cent. of the retiring salary, if it is at least $1,600, but under no conditions can it be more than 80 per cent. If the retiring salary is more than $1,600 and the same conditions hold, then the allowance shall equal $800, increased by $40 for each $100 of active pay in excess of $1,600.

IN ADDITION, provision is also made for professors incapable of discharging their duties by reason of permanent disability, such cases being left to the discretion of the trustees. An executive committee, of which President Wilson '79 is a member, has been constituted to consider and pass upon applications for annuities from the fund.

THE THIRD SPENCER TRASK LECTURE of the year was delivered this week by Prof. Hugo De Vries, the distinguished Dutch botanist, his subject being "Association of Characters in Plant Breeding." And Henry B. Thompson '77 addressed the Municipal Government Club, on politics in Delaware.

The Spirit of Jefferson

SOCIALISM, corporations, capital and labor, and other present-day problems, were discussed by President Wilson in his recent Jefferson Day address before the Democratic Club of New York. Dr. Wilson said, in substance:

Those who have never felt or sympathized with the spirit of Jefferson wonder why his memory is still celebrated, his name still appealed to by those who seek guidance or inspiration in political action. They will wonder in vain so long as they suppose that we seek to be governed by Jefferson's opinions or search among his policies for measures to suit our own times. Some of Jefferson's opinions were thought out in action and constituted a definite programme of practical policy; others were part of a philosophy of politics which had come to him from his reading and from the spirit of his time. Neither the one sort nor the other held him fast when it seemed to him that some favourite object could be served better by a departure from them than by an adherence to them.

This has given him the air, and in some quarters the reputation, of a charlatan, a man without principle, a mere politician who preferred what was expedient to what was right. A deeper view of his character displays him more justly. His opinions were meant to express two main ideals: the right of the individual to opportunity and the right of the people as a whole to a free development. His philosophical way of forming opinions belonged to a side of his nature not exercised in action. His thought was often purely academic, and showed him a proper contemporary of the French philosophers with whom he had so intimately consorted. The air of the philosophical, theorizing eighteenth century blows mildly through all that he wrote. But all this was the mere literary dress of a few simple convictions which really ruled his life and which always burned strongly within him, now in the gentle lambent flame of theory, again in the eager flame of action. Whatever turn he gave what he said, he believed always in the right of the individual to a free opportunity and in the right of the people to the unmonopolized benefits of the nation's development. If theory as he had spun it stood in the way of these, theory gave way to the best practicable means. The legislation which he urged, the policies which he adopted might not always square with his abstract statements of political doctrine, but they did always square with what he conceived to be the interest of the individual and of the people.

We are too apt to think of Jefferson as a literary politician endowed with an uncanny gift of contriving popular issues, organizing parties, and directing campaigns; we do not often enough see him as what he really was, a typical American of his region and generation. He was born upon a frontier: for Albemarle county, Virginia, was as truly a frontier in the days of his youth as was the Waxhaw Settlement in North Carolina in the still primitive days of the eighteenth century when Andrew Jackson was born. He was familiar throughout his life with the simpler, plainer sides of American life, for he was constantly in contact with them, constantly immersed, even in the midst of his books, in the interests which he shared with his plainer neighbors,—as, indeed, all Virginian gentlemen were. He saw the processes of the young nation's life there in the western counties as Washington also had seen them, as processes that widened to a great and spreading growth, full of a vigour and a promise which it were folly to check or impede. Living among planters and frontiersmen who knew and controlled their own lives with an easy mastery, he believed in the capacity of the free people of the whole country to see their own interests and pursue them as his own neighbours about him did. He was an idealist and a dreamer, as popular leaders amongst us have always been, and as all Americans are who have not lost the spirit of those first days of confidence and hope. He was fond of protestations of right and broad generalizations, those utterances at once of hope and of purpose which have made the Declaration of Independence immortal and Americans the leaders of all who believe in liberty.

When it came to a profession of practical political doctrine, Jefferson declared his belief in as little government as possible, his belief, that is, that the natural processes of the people's life, which seemed to him so spontaneous and self-sufficient, should be as little restrained as possible; and he believed that such little government as there was could be better contrived and conducted under the eyes of the people themselves in the states and counties of a time which was without railways and telegraph lines, than at a national capital.

But these practical means by which he thought to realize his ideals do not now concern us. They were but means to an end. It is the end we are interested in: the realization of the rights of individuals and an impartial development of the people's life. Jefferson's objects have not fallen obsolete and out of date. They are our own objects, if we be faithful to any ideals whatever; and the question we ask ourselves is not, How would Jefferson have pursued them in his day? but How shall we pursue them in ours? It is the spirit, not the tenets of the man by which he rules us from his urn. The present maladies of our politics will not be cured by tenets, they can be cured only by a new spirit of candour, of honour, and of devotion to the general interest. It is not even new laws that we need, but a new spirit in the enforcement of existing laws, an enlightened and purified intention. The wrong of our day is to be rectified, not so much by wisdom as by an effectual purpose to be pure and unselfishly serviceable. The infection of such a spirit will more surely clear our thinking and reform our affairs than the action of legislatures and the decisions of courts.

We, also, should act as those who are familiar, and lovingly familiar, with the simpler, plainer sides of American life; the sides upon which virtue shows robust and unsophisticated, ready to take the shocks of circumstance. We, too, should see the plan of the nation's life as a widening process, full of vigour and promise only if free and natural, full of danger if narrowed by the prement of any particular set of interests. We, too, should believe in the capacity of a free people to see their own interest and follow it when told the truth and given leave to choose disinterested counsellors. We, too, should be idealists, never growing weary of earnest protestations of right and comprehensive views of human liberty.

It is in the spirit of Jefferson, for example, to prefer the interests of the many to those of the few in such matters as the tariff; to introduce into all sorts of business, private and public, the plain morals we profess among our neighbours and in all the simple, direct and wholesome relations of our lives; to open all things that affect the general welfare to scrutiny and to the purification of the light; to apply to the railways, alike to those which thread our streets and to those which cross states and the continent itself, and to all the great undertakings which feed the industrial life of the nation, the principle that their object is service, the service, not of private interests, but of the general development.

No doubt great corporations have come to stay; no doubt a certain degree of monopoly is inseparable from their size and accumulated might; but they may, by scrutiny and regulation, be freed from the spirit of monopoly. The statesmanship we need is not the statesmanship of destruction but the statesmanship of enlightenment and of unselfish devotion.

If we were to act now in the spirit of Jefferson in dealing with the affairs of our own day, what would we do? First and foremost, we should turn away from socialism, as no remedy but only a worse danger, a danger of the very sort we seek to escape, a danger of centralized and corruptible control. Our remedy, if we seek it in the spirit of Jefferson, would be to individualize men alike in their energies and in their morals, not to lump and merge them. The whole trouble now is, not that they unite in corporate undertakings, but that they sink their consciences in the corporations of which they form a part and act as instruments rather than as men,—men with consciences and an individual responsibility to God and their fellow men. The defect of our legal system is that it allows individuals thus to lose and hide themselves,—hide themselves from the community not only but almost from their own eyes, in the business of the organizations whose affairs they conduct. Law and opinion alike should single them out, hold each to a strict accountability for his own part in the common transaction, accountable for what he did and for what he neglected, and make clear the application of old-fashioned morals to new-fashioned dealings.

It would be folly to pull down the great structures of commerce and manufacture which have been reared about us in our day and which constitute the modern economic world; but they must be dominated by a clear sense of what the individual who takes part in their administration must do and must leave undone if he would keep our respect and his own privilege.

Neither, if we acted in the spirit of Jefferson, would we permit law to take sides in the struggle between capital and labour. If it takes sides now, we must readjust the balance and hold it even. The struggle is not in itself evil; it makes in the long run for right. It is evil only in so far as one side or the other is unfair, unjust, unmanly, unscrupulous in the use of an advantage. Law must, in this as in all things, individualize the participants in the struggle and hold them severally to the responsibility of clean morals, righteousness, forbearance. We have come upon no new region of morals: the difficulty is only to recognize old principles amidst novel surroundings.

If we would act now in the spirit of Jefferson, we must be careful not to depend too much upon the federal government or turn too often from the remedy which is at hand in the power of the states. It is easier to apply morals in limited communities than in vast states, easier for neighbours to understand one another than for fellow citizens of a continent. The best searchings of morals are those which are made at home, about our own doors.

We should be careful not to lose our individual sense of responsibility in the aggregate action of the nation. A revitalization of the parts is true Jeffersonian method.

With such principles we would turn again, and turn with confidence, to the common people of the country, whose eyes still perceive character and are unblinded by high finance. They do not think in corporate terms but in terms of individuals and persons. They see men singly and speak in their judgments the true and simple spirit of all just law.

Two More Victories in Baseball

AFTER the game with Wesleyan on Wednesday, the Princeton nine left for New England, to play Exeter at Exeter this Friday and Brown at Providence on Saturday. In the games of the past week, Princeton defeated Cornell at Ithaca, 3-1, and Wesleyan at Princeton, 4-3. Next Wednesday Brown comes to Princeton, and on Saturday, May 5th, Princeton plays Pennsylvania at Philadelphia.

PRINCETON 3, CORNELL 1

Princeton won the first of the two Cornell games, 3-1, at Ithaca on April 21st. The second is scheduled for Princeton on May 12th, the only other Saturday games at Princeton this season being with Harvard on May 26th, and with Yale on the Saturday of Commencement week. Since 1902, when Princeton took both of the Cornell games, winning at Ithaca 18-6, this is the first time that a Princeton nine has defeated Cornell on the latter's home grounds. For the past three years each team has won its home game.

Cornell has a strong veteran nine this year, which up to this game had not been defeated by a college team. So that Princeton's victory at Ithaca last Saturday was especially gratifying. Princeton won by hitting the ball at just the right time. After the fourth inning it began to rain, but in spite of the slippery ground the fielding was good. Both Byram and Deshon were steady, each giving one base on balls, Byram allowing four hits and Deshon five. Captain Reid made two of Princeton's hits, one of them a home run, Vaughn made two, and Harlan got off a three-bagger which brought in two runs and won the game. Each pitcher made a wild throw over first. Byram's was responsible for Cornell's only run, and Deshon's allowed Harlan to reach third, but he was caught at the home plate. Cornell made three more errors, but they did not affect the score.

There was no scoring until the fourth inning, when Umsted made Cornell's run on a single and Byram's error. In the sixth inning Captain Reid tied the score with a smashing home run to deep left field. In the eighth Byram was given a base on balls, and went to second on Captain Reid's single. They were both advanced a base by Dillon's sacrifice, and Harlan brought them in with his timely three-bagger.

At the end of the fifth inning the score was 4-0 in favor of Princeton, but Wesleyan got one run in the seventh, and two more in the ninth, on Princeton's errors. # The Interscholastic Track Meet

ABOUT a hundred and fifty preparatory school athletes came to Princeton last Saturday to take part in the Tenth Annual Interscholastic Meet of the Princeton Track Association, held on University Field. Mercersburg Academy, of which Dr. W. M. Irvine '88 is President, won the meet with 45 points, Hill School was second with 36, Lawrenceville third with 21, the other point-winners being Brown Preparatory School 13, Central High School of Philadelphia 11, Tome Institute 5, Baltimore City College 3, Delancey School 2, Pingry School 2, Peddie Institute 2, Friends' Central High School 1, South Jersey Institute 1, and Cheltenham Military Academy 1. Mercersburg, which by its victory last year won permanently the silver cup offered by the Philadelphia alumni, has now secured temporary possession of the new cup, presented by Tracy H. Harris '86 of New York, which is to belong finally to the school winning the games for five years, not necessarily in succession. By winning this year's meet the Mercersburg team also carried back to their school the handsome silk banner presented by the Princeton Track Association, a smaller banner for the winner of the relay race going to the Baltimore City College.

The weather at Princeton last Saturday was just right for track sports, and the meet was notable for the unusually good performances in most of the events. Four Princeton Interscholastic records were broken, and a fifth equalled. Robbins of Mercersburg ran the 440-yards in 50 4-5 seconds, breaking the record by 4-5 of a second; Paull of Mercersburg did the one-mile in 4 minutes, 37 2-5 second, 5 2-5 seconds better than the former record; Hunter of Central High School of Philadelphia broke the record for the two-mile run, by 13 seconds, his time being 10 minutes, 18 4-5 seconds; and Rector of Lawrenceville did the 220-yards dash in 22 1-5 seconds, lowering the record by 2-5 of a second. In the 220-yards hurdles Robbins of Mercersburg equalled the former record of 26 seconds. Of the other events, Rector of Lawrenceville won the 100-yards in 10 1-5 seconds, Hughes of Mercersburg won the 880-yards in 1 minute, 59 4-5 seconds; Caesar of Hill School won the 120-yards hurdles in 16 4-5 seconds; Talcott of Hill School won the running high jump with 5 feet, 6 1-4 inches; Platt of Hill School won the running broad jump with 21 feet, 11 1-4 inches; McCarrol of Brown Preparatory School won the 12-pound shot-put with 44 feet, 5 inches, and the 12-pound hammer-throw with 144 feet, 3 inches; and H. S. Gamble of Tome Institute won the pole-vault with 10 feet, 5 inches. Baltimore City College won the one-mile relay race in 3 minutes, 34 2-5 seconds, with Germantown Academy second and Delancey School third. During their stay in Princeton the young athletes were entertained hospitably at the upperclass clubs.

The Alumni

THE Princeton Club of Puget Sound, as it is henceforth to be called, assembled on March 29th at the University Club, Seattle, Wash., and had the most enjoyable meeting yet held. A little over half of the members were present. A committee consisting of John F. Main '91, Chairman; Charles F. Whittlesey '74, Secretary; and M. P. Randolph '93, was appointed to draft a constitution and by-laws, and made a preliminary report, which was adopted, recommending that the name of the association be The Princeton Club of Puget Sound, instead of The Princeton Club of the Northern Pacific, and that four meetings be held yearly, on the first Tuesday in January, March, June and September. At the next meeting, in June, the committee will present their final report, and permanent officers will be chosen. The new members elected were S. F. Hazlehurst '73, Rev. Robert Boyd '74, Robert P. Harris '95, R. W. Beymer '98, William W. Kilworth '02, Titus Hale '02, D. C. Wilson, Jr., '04, and Frank W. Popple '07. The Vice-President, Alfred L. Black '78, invited the members to be his guests at Bellingham for the September meeting. After the business session the club enjoyed a supper, "where," a correspondent writes, "'73 tried to sing the songs of '03 and couldn't."

PRINCETON ALUMNI ASSOCIATION OF NEW ENGLAND

The annual meeting and banquet of the Princeton Alumni Association of New England will be held at the University Club, 270 Beacon St., Boston, on the evening of May 3rd. President Wilson '79 is to be present and speak for Princeton, and Prof. A. Lawrence Lowell and Dr. Frederick B. Percy will represent Harvard and Yale, respectively. The committee is preparing for the largest banquet in the club's history. The price of the dinner is $2.50, and acceptances should be sent to Hugh Miller '01, Secretary, 60 State St., Boston, Mass.

Prof. J. Woodbridge Patton, of the law department of the University of Pennsylvania, contributed the leading article in the March American Law Register, on The New Replevin in Pennsylvania. The article covers forty pages and the subject is made clear as well as interesting, even to the lay mind.

'92

Charles P. Spooner is a member of the firm of Bogle & Spooner, attorneys at law, with offices at 377-380 Colman Building, Seattle, Washington.

Alexander R. Fordyce, Jr., who represented Middlesex County in the New Jersey Assembly for two terms, has announced himself as a Republican candidate for State Senator. Here is a portion of Mr. Fordyce's platform, as published in the New Brunswick Daily Press:

I believe in government by the people and not by bosses; representation of and responsibility to the people, not of and to a "Boss."

The boss, representing not the people, but special interests, dictating party nominations, making public officers his puppets, usurps the sovereignty of the people, and barter away their rights and liberties, to his own pecuniary profit.

Bossism and graft, going hand in hand, have been undermining the very foundation of representative government in this commonwealth.

I believe that the people, with the scales fallen from their eyes, with an awakening sense of present evils and dangers yet to come from these vampires, will repudiate and throw them off entirely.

Percy L. Gallagher is a member of the law firm of Gallagher & Gallagher, Prudential Building, Newark, N. J.

T. D. Riggs is President of the Mt. Vernon Motor Co., automobiles and supplies, 1118 Cathedral St., Baltimore, Md.

W. A. Reynolds, who is with the Southern Cotton Oil Co., at Columbia, S. C., is the father of Morgan Ayres Reynolds, born Dec. 23rd, 1905.

'98

The Rev. A. E. Alton and Miss Blanch Louise Warren were married on April 3rd, at Holden, Mass.

Philph Ely Robinson and Miss Mary Eves Gillespie were married at Wilmington, Del., on April 24th. They will be at home after May 23rd at 37 Bank street, Princeton. Mr. Robinson is instructor in physics in the University.

SATURDAY, MAY 5, 1906

NO. 30

ON BEHALF of the seven thousand alumni of Princeton University, The Weekly extends to Mrs. James McCosh their heartiest congratulations on the completion of her eighty-ninth year, on April 30th. And all the sons of Nassau, scattered over the wide world, will rejoice to know that Mrs. McCosh, though now in her ninetieth year, is still young in spirit, still deeply interested in the latest development of the college which the administration of her distinguished husband transformed from the Old Princeton to the New, still active in those works which have made her life a gracious benediction.

ALONG MCCOSH WALK, where during the closing years of his life Dr. McCosh loved to sit under the arching elms, greeting the passing throngs of "boys,"—for they were still his "boys,"—a fitting memorial of his genius as an educator is now rising,—such a memorial as he himself would have chosen,—McCosh Hall, the imposing building which is to provide the additional lecture and recitation rooms so long needed. The superstructure has been started, and by Commencement the work will be far enough advanced to give the returning alumni an impression of the fine proportions of McCosh Hall.

OLD PRINTS of the front campus, made some years before Dr. McCosh came over from Scotland, show that there was an entrance and walk directly in front of the steps of Nassau Hall. The completion of the Fitz Randolph Gateway has restored this entrance, and now the walk is being restored,—a broad footpath leading from Nassau street to the steps. This work will be completed before the Commencement season, which, by the way, is coming on apace,—only five weeks from this Friday.

THE SENIORS ARE NOW SINGING on the steps, with several fresh verses in the Faculty Song,—the new faculty room in Nassau Hall is just back of the steps, but it will not be occupied till next fall. . . . The excitement of the annual club elections is still on, and preparing for preceptorial conferences is serious business and strenuous; but the front campus is thronged each evening.

THE TRIANGLE CLUB, which presents its successful play Tabasco-Land in Baltimore this Friday evening and in Washington on Saturday, has invited the Paint and Powder Club of Baltimore to give a performance in the Casino. We are informed that the invitation has been accepted, and that the Baltimore thespians will appear in Princeton some time this month.

PRESIDENT WILSON '79 has accepted an invitation from the Committee of Seventy of Philadelphia, to speak at the celebration of Civic Day in that city,—probably May 25th. Civic Day in Philadelphia is to be an annual event, its purpose being to stimulate popular interest in municipal affairs. Those who have followed the President's engagements, as they have been mentioned here from time to time, have doubtless noticed with interest the large number of invitations of this public nature which he has accepted during the four years of his administration. They have been unusually busy years for the President of Princeton, with the framing and introduction of the new curriculum, the development of the Preceptorial System and its practical application, and the enlargement of the duties of his office along many other lines. Fortunately his large capacity for hard work has been reinforced by good health, most of the time, and he has been able to represent Princeton before the public with the distinction we all know so well. On behalf of the University, also, he has spoken frequently at the meetings of schoolmasters, and before other outside associations where our college is perhaps not as well known as we all wish it to be. With such numerous demands upon his time, President Wilson has found it impossible to go to as many alumni dinners as he would no doubt be happy to attend, if the very obvious interests of the University did not call him elsewhere.

FOR THE PAST THREE YEARS the University Library has been receiving through the generosity of John W. Garrett '95 a most valuable collection of musical works. The books have been purchased under the direction of L. F. Pease '95, sometime Lecturer on Music and University Organist, to whose skill and wide musical knowledge the collection owes much of its merit. It is not too much to say that the collection places Princeton in the forefront of the universities of the country in the matter of musical literature.

THIS MUSICAL LIBRARY, briefly described, includes the foremost musical journals, those of long ago as well as modern periodicals; the publications of the leading musical societies; the history of music is unusually well represented, as well as musical criticism, while the biographies of leading musicians are practically all included; old and modern works on the theory of music,—some of them of great rarity,—on harmony, counterpoint, fugue, and composition in its widest range, are another division of importance; there are also works on particular instruments, such as the violin, the organ, etc., and a large number on the various forms of music, the opera, oratorio, song, sonata, symphony, etc.

THE MOST UNUSUAL FEATURE of the collection—at least for a university library—is the large number of scores. The full orchestral scores of all the great masters have been given by Mr. Garrett, so that the library possesses the complete works in all their range and fullness of practically all the great composers. From Palestrina to Wagner and Tschaikowsky, from Bach and Händel to Elgar, the works of the masters are all available. In addition the vocal scores of a great many oratorios, operas, and masses have been recently added. The collection numbers over 2,000 volumes.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO CURRENT LITERATURE include "Songs of Nature," edited by Henry van Dyke '73, in Country Life in America; "The Return of Jotham Hall," by Edwin Asa Dix '81 in the Woman's Home Companion; a poem, "Nocturne," in the May Harper's, by Van Tassel Sutphen '82, and an installment of "The Doomsman" by the same author, in the Metropolitan; by Vance Thompson '83, an article in Munsey's on "The American Peril," and in Everybody's a sketch of "The New President of France"; in the Metropolitan, "The Roads that Lead to Town," by James Barnes '91; and "The Fourth Juror," a story by M'Cready Sykes '94 in the May Scribner's. A. S. Barnes & Company announce "The Voice of the Street," a novel (his first) by Ernest Poole '02, who has been in university settlement work since his graduation, and whose articles in the magazines have already attracted attention. The first novel of another '02 man, "Where Speech Ends," by Robert Haven Schauffler, has just been published by Moffat, Yard & Company (Robert S. Yard '83 and William D. Moffat '84), with a prelude by Henry van Dyke '73.

"THE STOLEN STORY," Jesse Lynch Williams' ('92) play, is now announced to open at the Tremont Theatre, Boston, on May 7th, to run there two weeks before the Chicago engagement already mentioned here. It's a big production, the cast including forty-two persons, with twenty-one speaking parts. The initial performances of the play were given this week at Providence, Newport and New Bedford,—with great success.

IN THE ANNUAL BAIRD PRIZE contests of the senior class, E. Sunstein of Pennsylvania won the Baird Prize of $100, his oration being on "Socialism: Its Logic"; W. S. Davison of New Jersey, who spoke on "The True Reformer," took the $50 Prize for Oratory; G. H. Cresse of New Jersey won the $30 Prize for Delivery, his subject being "The Tribunal of Last Resort"; the $50 Prize for Poetry went to K. S. Goodman of Illinois, whose poem was entitled "Today and Tomorrow"; in disputation, C. W. Greene of New York won the first prize of $40, K. M. McEwen of New York the second prize of $30. At the oratorical contest, Prof. H. F. Covington '92 presided, and the judges were Profs. Osgood, Root and Spaeth; Profs. Parrott '88 and MacDonald '96 were the judges of poetry; and Profs. Covington '92, Corwin and Croll judged the disputations.

A Remarkable Collection of Ancient Coins

By CHARLES RUFUS MOREY, A.M., Instructor in Classics

PART of the spoils brought home by the Princeton Expedition to Syria is a remarkable collection of 500 ancient coins, which is now being arranged and catalogued and will soon be placed on view in the Art Museum. These coins, excepting those struck at Rome by the emperors, are chiefly from the mints of Syria and its neighborhood, and cover a period of more than 900 years, from the early successors of Alexander (about 300 B. C.) to the time of the Eastern emperor Phocas (602 A. D.) and even later. One of the earliest, a small bronze of Ptolemy I of Egypt (305-284 B. C.), shows a fine head of the great Alexander, the reverse bearing that type of eagle known as the Ptolemaic, which thereafter became the symbol of the Egyptian Ptolemies and constantly recurs upon their coins. Another specimen, which had journeyed rather far from its mint, is a little silver drachma of Ephesus, with the Ephesian bee on one side, and a stag, the sacred beast of Artemis, on the other. On the reverse is the name of a Greek magistrate, which dates the coin between 202 and 133 B. C., in the period when Ephesus formed part of the kingdom of Pergamum. Attalus, last ruler of Pergamum, bequeathed his kingdom to the Romans, who made Ephesus the capital of their new province of Asia, so that Ephesian coins subsequent to 133 bear the names of the Roman governors.

In Syria itself, our earliest specimen displays a beautiful head of Tryphon, one of the most disreputable characters in the troubled history of the kingdom of Syria. He drove Demetrius from the throne to set up in his stead the infant Antiochus, being aided in this project by Jonathan, brother and successor of the heroic Judas Maccabaeus. The young Antiochus was then put out of the way, and Jonathan's protests against the murder only brought about his own death at the hands of the treacherous Tryphon. The latter reigned but three years and was put to death by Demetrius' brother (139 B. C.). The grandson of this Demetrius, Demetrius III, the last but one of the Seleucid kings of Syria, reigned from 94 to 88 B. C., and died in captivity at the court of Parthia. One of his silver tetradrachms is in the collection, bearing his portrait head, done in the heroic fashion set by Alexander, while the reverse has an archaic figure of Demeter, reminding one of the statues of Diana of the Ephesians. After the fall of the Seleucids, a considerable portion of their kingdom seems to have been held until the Roman occupation by the Arabian kings of Nabataea, who have left specimens of their coinage in Damascus and other places. Their coins in the Princeton collection contrast strangely with those of their Greek predecessors, the royal heads being strongly Semitic in type and head-gear, with inscriptions in Nabataean.

Jerusalem furnishes four silver denarii of the Republic, all but one inscribed as usual with the name of one of the "triumviri monetales" or mint masters. The fourth was coined—"by decree of the senate," the inscription says—by the quaestor M. Sergius Silus, whose name is stamped beneath the figure of a horseman brandishing the long-haired head of an enemy, an allusion to Sergius' famous ancestor of the same name, who distinguished himself in the second Punic War while battling against Hannibal's Gallic Allies. The M. Sergius Silus who struck this denarius was the father of L. Sergius Catilina, of conspiracy fame. Another piece, coined by L. Rubrius in 83 B. C., shows us a "thensa," the elaborate chariot which bore the statues of the gods of Rome to their couches (pulvinaria) in the Circus, a ceremony which always preceded the celebration of the games.

The imperial series begins with Nero, of whom we have three pieces, two of them containing the finest types of Nero-heads known. One is a small bronze with a fine green patina, the other a silver tetradrachm from Antioch, bearing on the reverse the customary Antiochene eagle, but in a rare form. The Greek letters beside it are the beginning of a date—"In the year . . ."—but the numerals are gone. It was probably 116, dating, as was the custom in Antioch at this time, from Caesar's crossing the Rubicon in 49 B. C., which makes 116 correspond to 67 A. D., the year before Nero's death. Nearly every emperor is represented by one or more coins and all contain some point of interest. For instance, one of Trajan's bronzes illustrates the curious mountain-worship prevailing in the East in that period. This coin was struck at Seleucia, a Syrian city south of Damascus, beside Mt. Kasios, a mountain sacred to Jupiter and worshipped in connection with that divinity. A "statue" or conical stone representing the mountain stood in its own temple at Seleucia and appears, temple and all, on the reverse of this coin of Trajan. Another image of a sacred mountain occurs on a coin in the collection which was struck at Caesarea in Cappadocia under Septimius Severus, and dated 199.

Of the coins of Antoninus Pius we have only two denarii, but a better selection could not have been made. One has the head of Antoninus on the obverse and on the reverse a bust of young Marcus Aurelius, his son and successor, both of them excellent portraits. This denarius is of the year 139, when Antoninus assumed the title of "pater patriae" and young Aurelius was consul-elect, both titles being inscribed on the coin. The other piece gives us a good head of Faustina, the notorious wife of Antoninus. It was struck in her honor after her death and deification, and the inscription divae Faustinae, "to the divine Faustina," is a curious commentary on the blindness of her devoted husband. A coin of Bostra in the Syrian desert, struck under Commodus, has a bust of Dusares, the Syrian Bacchus. The wine-god's appearance on the coinage of Bostra (the Biblical Bozra) may remind one of Isaiah's prophecy (LXIII: 1-3) where the vineyards of Bozra are referred to: "Who is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozra? . . . wherefore art thou red in thine apparel and thy garments like him that treadeth in the winefat," etc.? Bostra was given the coveted rights of a Roman colony by Alexander Severus (222-235), whereupon we find it issuing coins with heads of Alexander Severus and his mother Julia Mamaea on one side, and with the new colony, typified as a female head with a turreted crown, upon the other. A number of these pieces are in the collection.

Among the rarities may be counted a bronze of Trajan Decius struck at Rhessaina, an outpost of the empire in Northern Mesopotamia, which coined Roman money for a few years in the third century. Another is a coin of the Emperor Aurelian, bearing on its reverse a head of Vabalathus. The latter was a relative of the famous Zenobia of Palmyra and had been allowed to share the imperial purple by Gallienus, Aurelian's predecessor. Such coins show that he continued to do this for a time under Aurelian, until that Emperor's vengeance overtook Palmyra and the ephemeral Arab kingdom was wiped out of history forever.

In the Diocletian series we find a bronze with the attractive but somewhat melancholy face of Galeria Valeria, his daughter. This unfortunate lady, wife of Emperor Galerius, was sought in marriage by Maximinus after her husband's death. Upon her refusal, she was banished with her mother to Syria and there remained until Maximinus' death in 314. The two women then ventured forth to the court of Licinius, the Eastern colleague of Constantine the Great, but were soon forced to flee again, and after wandering in disguise over many provinces of the empire, they were finally caught and murdered at Thessalonica in 315. A sinister omen appears on Constantine's coins—the fortress-tower, typifying repairs to frontier fortifications and the herculean efforts of the fourth-century rulers to wall out the incoming barbarians. Thenceforth we see the tower on the back of the coins of nearly every emperor.

In such manner the collection conducts us faithfully through the series of emperors, reflecting their troubles at home and abroad, up to the fall of the Western Empire, and the series then continues in the East. Leo I, emperor of the Eastern Empire 457-474, is represented by an "aureus" of fair workmanship, but already stamped with the Byzantine spirit—or lack of spirit. His portrait, with its elaborate dress and crown, and conventional attitude, is thoroughly the product of the ceremonious court of Constantinople. Justinus' and Justinian's pieces betray the disintegration of the 6th century, quick to show itself even in an art so bolstered by tradition as the making of coins, but we are hardly prepared for the degradation of art apparent in the formless bronzes of Phocas, the bloodthirsty tyrant who reigned from 602 to 610. One needs only to compare the classic, though stiff, contours of the Leo "aureus" with the square lines, wooden modelling and puppet-like pose of Phocas on his coins, to realize the terrible rapidity of the decadence which set in with the barbarian invasion.

Baseball of the Week

DURING the past week the Princeton nine has played three games, winning two and losing one.

Princeton was beaten by Brown at Providence, 2-1, April 28th, but won from Brown, 4-2, at Princeton on May 2nd, and defeated Exeter Academy, 6-1, at Exeter on April 27th. The pitching and fielding continues unusually good, but the batting is by no means up to championship form. In the fourteen games played Princeton has averaged only six hits to the game. The largest number of hits made in any game was ten, and in two (the Boston Nationals and the first with Brown) Princeton made only one hit each. Pennsylvania at Philadelphia this Saturday; next Wednesday, Amherst at Princeton; and next Saturday, May 12th, Cornell at Princeton.

PRINCETON 6, EXETER 1

Princeton defeated Exeter Academy, 6-1, at Exeter on April 27th. Against the preparatory school nine Princeton appeared to good advantage and did better hitting than usual. Freshman Heyniger, who pitched for Princeton, allowed only four hits, and did some good batting himself, getting four of Princeton's ten safe hits. In the second inning Princeton scored two runs, and in the third added four more, with bunched hits aided by Exeter's errors. After the third inning Princeton could not score, and in the seventh Exeter got one run on a two-base hit, an error and an infield grounder.

BROWN 2, PRINCETON 0

Princeton got only one hit in the game with Brown at Providence on April 28th, and Brown won, 2-0. Apart from poor batting, Princeton played a fair game, but good fielding and pitching were not enough. Tift of Brown also pitched well, and his nine gave him good support. Sides made Princeton's only safe hit, in the second inning, and was advanced to second by Newcomb's grounder, but he got no farther. All through the game Princeton did not get a man as far as third base, and only three reached second. Brown scored one run in the first inning when Paine was given a base on balls and came in on Tift's two-bagger; and in the second Dickinson singled, stole second base, and scored on Dennie's single.

PRINCETON 4, BROWN 2

Princeton turned the tables on Brown at University Field, May 2nd, winning the second game, 4-2, in the most interesting contest seen on the home grounds this season. The Princeton nine showed some improvement in batting, but at critical times the hits were not always forthcoming. For instance, in the sixth inning Princeton had the bases full with none out, and could get only one run. Nourse, who pitched for Brown, was not as effective as was Tift in the game at Providence; he allowed eight hits and gave three bases on balls. Doyle did fair work in the box and fielded especially well. Sides was the most conspicuous player in the game, making three hits, one of them for three bases; and Vaughn reached first twice by clever bunting.

Brown scored first, in the third. Hoye singled to right field, Jones was safe on a hard drive which Doyle nearly stopped, and Paine was hit by a pitched ball, filling the bases. Then Raymond knocked a hard grounder to Reid, who juggled it, allowing Hoye to score; and Jones came home on Dickinson's fly to Dillon. Princeton got busy in the fourth inning. Vaughn bunted safely, and Sides brought him home with a clean three-base hit. Newcomb then knocked a fly to center field, upon which Sides scored. Bard was given a base on balls. Cooney was put out at first, but Elrod's throw to catch Bard went through Dickinson far out into center field, allowing Bard to reach home. In the sixth inning Vaughn bunted safely, went to second on Sides' single, and both were advanced a base on a passed ball. Newcomb was given a base on balls, filling the bases with none out. Vaughn scored on Bard's grounder, but Sides was caught at the plate on Cooney's grounder, and Doyle ended the inning with a fly over second which Dennie caught after a hard run.

SWIMMING

In its first meet the Princeton swimming team recently defeated the strong Yale team, 41-23, in the Brokaw Tank. The Yale swimmers had just returned from a successful Western trip, where they had won the Western Intercollegiate Championship. Of the seven events Princeton won three firsts, eight seconds and thirds, and the relay race, which counted ten points, J. W. Chambers '09 defeating C. C. Megel of Yale in the last lap by a margin of a few inches. In the other events Princeton's point-winners were: W. L. Dawbarn '09, second, and C. P. Ralli '08, third, in the 100-foot race; W. Abbey '07, first, and C. P. Deems '07, second, in the fancy diving; J. W. Chambers '09, second, and A. S. Swartz '08, third, in the 200-foot race; H. Kimball '09, second, and W. Abbey '07, third, in the 100-yards; J. G. Gordon '07, first in the plunge for distance (60 feet, 6½ inches), and L. S. Wells '08, third. In a five-minute game of "water-soccer," Princeton and Yale were tied with one goal each.

The Alumni

THE Western Association of Princeton Clubs wishes to extend a hearty invitation to all Princeton men, whether members of the association or not, to meet with it on the occasion of its 7th annual convention, to be held in Cleveland on May 19th. The indications point to the largest gathering of Princeton men ever held in the West, and the Cleveland Alumni Association will be glad to welcome and entertain any and all Princetonians who may come.

VOL. VI

SATURDAY, MAY 12, 1906

NO. 31

FOUR weeks from this date comes Princeton's 159th annual Commencement season, preparations for which are now going forward in and out of Princeton. The official programme of Commencement week will be ready for publication in an early number of The Weekly.

ATTENTION IS CALLED to the action of the Princeton Alumni Association of New England (whose successful annual dinner is reported on another page), authorizing its secretary to communicate with all New England congressmen, urging the passage of the bill now on the calendar of the House of Representatives, to appropriate $30,000 to aid in the erection of the proposed Princeton Battle Monument. It is also suggested that at the annual meeting of the Western Association of Princeton Clubs, a memorial on the subject be adopted, each club in the association to send a copy of this memorial to the congressmen of its territory. Meantime, we trust that the other alumni associations of the country will do as our New England Princetonians have done: authorize their secretaries to write to their representatives in Congress, requesting that a day be named for bringing up the Princeton Battle Monument Bill, and urging favorable action upon the $30,000 appropriation. The plans of the Princeton Battle Monument Association, of which Dr. Henry Clay Cameron '47 is President, look to a memorial costing $60,000, the State of New Jersey to provide $15,000, the local association $15,000, and the National Government $30,000. Private advices from Washington indicate that unless Princeton men bestir themselves at once, the government appropriation, upon which the project has waited for so many years, may again fail of adoption at this session of Congress.

AN ATTRACTIVE PROGRAMME has been arranged for the seventh annual convention of the Western Association of Princeton Clubs, which is to be held next Saturday, May 19th, at the Hollenden Hotel, Cleveland, under the auspices of the Princeton Alumni Association of Northern Ohio. On that occasion President Wilson '79 and Dean West '74 will be present to discuss the affairs of the University with the delegates of the alumni associations west of the Alleghenies.

THE NINETY-FOURTH ANNUAL COMMENCEMENT of Princeton Theological Seminary was celebrated this week, beginning with the Baccalaureate Sermon on May 6th, by the Rev. Dr. E. D. Warfield '82, President of Lafayette College. Tuesday was Commencement Day. The graduating class numbered fifty-one, and the degree of Bachelor of Divinity was conferred upon thirty candidates who had taken extra courses. Addresses were delivered by President Patton and the Rev. Dr. W. L. McEwen of Pittsburg. E. H. Kellogg '02 was announced as the winner of the Elson-Winthrop Fellowship in Apologetics, and L. L. Daniel '03 was awarded the Elson-Winthrop Fellowship in Church History, the other alumni of the University in the graduating class being J. B. Brown '00, E. A. Odell '03, H. J. Rendall '03, P. Stratton '03, G. W. Arms '04, and F. L. MacLeod '04. After the graduating exercises a memorial missionary tablet was unveiled in Stuart Hall, Robert E. Speer '89 making the address. At the annual alumni luncheon on Tuesday afternoon, speeches were made by Dr. W. W. Knox '62, Dr. J. R. Smith '72, and the Rev. J. C. Russell '83.

ABOUT A YEAR AGO, it will be remembered, the college world was stirred by some vital statistics prepared by Andrew C. Imbrie, Secretary of the Class of '95, indicating that that Princeton class was by no means verifying the theory of race suicide put forth by an eminent authority. Mr. Imbrie's figures showed that during the ten years of the graduate life of his class, in a membership of 260, 142 or 55 per cent. had married, and that the class had 119 children, the percentage of children to marriages being 84. There was also a comparison of the Princeton Class of '95 with the classes graduated that year at Yale, University of Pennsylvania, and Columbia, the percentages of marriages and of children to marriages being considerably larger for the Princeton Class of '95 than for the corresponding classes at those universities.

THAT WAS INTERESTING. But now these even more impressive vital statistics for the ten graduate years of the Princeton Class of '96 are submitted by C. B. Bostwick, the Secretary of that vigorous class:

PRINCETON '96
Living	172 married	152 single	Total 324
Dead	1 married	12 single	Total 13
	173	164	337
Living children	93 boys	69 girls	Total 162
Dead children	10 boys	4 girls	Total 14
	103 boys	73 girls	Total 176
Number of members			337
Marriages recorded			173
Per cent. married			51
Children			176
Per cent. of children to marriages			101 (plus)

While '96's percentage of marriages for ten years is slightly less than '95's, in the percentage of children to marriages '96 leads its immediate predecessor by several laps,—101 per cent. as compared with 84 per cent. Edward G. Faile of White Plains, N. Y., is the honored holder of the '96 class record for parentage: seven children and no twins.

ONCE UPON A TIME, when Jesse Lynch Williams '92 was editor of The Princeton Alumni Weekly, a young man came into the sanctum and inquired for the author of Princeton Stories. He explained that while working in an office in a western city he had happened upon a copy of those sketches of college life; that before that he had never thought much of going to college,—having his own way to make in the world; but that Princeton Stories had made him look at things differently; that after office hours, there had followed late nights over Xenophon and Homer, Caesar and Virgil, Algebra to Quadratics, etc., etc.,—“and here I am.” . . . He paid his own way through college, and was graduated with honors, academic and otherwise. . . . How many others there are who were first turned to Princeton by the same little book,—but that’s another Princeton story.

IT IS A SOURCE OF PRIDE among Princeton men that one of their number is the author of what has been generally pronounced the best volume of stories of American college life. It will be a source of even higher satisfaction that in his more mature work the author of Princeton Stories is fulfilling his early promise. Referring to the first performance of Mr. Williams’ first play, The Stolen Story, given at Providence on the evening of April 30th, the New York Herald the next day said: “It was the most important first night Providence has had in years.” Also, “The fourth act, when all the force is locked in while Billy Woods is writing his story, created a genuine sensation.” Mr. Richard Harding Davis, who has himself recently turned from the short story to playwriting, with continued success, and who went to Providence to witness the first night of The Stolen Story, declared that he had never seen such enthusiasm in Providence. The Providence Journal, in a column review, says that “the occasion was a personal triumph for the dramatist, Jesse Lynch Williams.” The following paragraphs from that paper’s criticism of the play indicate the impression it made at the initial presentation:

“THE FIRST MARK OF APPRECIATION came only a few seconds after the curtain rose, when the handsome and well-devised setting of the first act impelled a wave of applause. With the play itself and the acting striking into harmonious accord from the first, the satisfaction increased as the evening progressed, and the friendly manifestation culminated in a number of curtain calls at the end of the third act, finally forcing the author upon the stage to make a speech. This he did in a couple of brief and modest sentences, acknowledging his gratitude for the cordial reception and implying that equal credit for the affair was due the management and the cast, a fact which was quite apparent, and may be mentioned without detracting in the least from the worth of Mr. Williams’ personal efforts. Even after making due allowance for the friendliness of the first-night audience, there was small question as to the success of the play; after it was all over the tone of the comment was one of general and unqualified approval. . . .”

“WITHOUT EXTRAVAGANCE it may be said that Mr. Williams has made a strong, actable play, notable for its vivid picture of newspaper life and environment rather than for any inherent dramatic strength in the plot itself, although this is entirely sufficient for its purpose. As this is his first essay in writing for the stage, there is reason for expecting that he will be heard from as a dramatist in no uncertain way in time to come . . .”

“THE PLAYWRIGHT was certainly fortunate in the manner of his first production. The mounting given to the piece by Henry W. Savage is sumptuous and satisfying in every particular. The first act setting, showing a large country house with moonlit terraces and gardens, is beautiful, and in the newspaper office scenes a genuine atmosphere is created and the illusion is well-nigh perfect. In the last act, especially, with the paper-strewn floor of the city room, the clicking of typewriters and telegraph instruments and the busy throng of reporters, with the central figure of the 'star' man writing with feverish and trembling haste, there is a reproduction of the journalistic hum that is very close to the real thing." . . . "The Stolen Story' is a dramatic novelty as to environment and all 'outsiders' who would like to gain a vivid and quite accurate impression of newspaper work at a busy time should not fail to see it."

THERE IS ALSO MUCH PRAISE for the strong cast chosen by Mr. Savage, which includes Mr. Jameson Lee Finney as Billy Woods, the hero, and Miss Dorothy Tennent as Frances Cunningham, the heroine. This week The Stolen Story is running with great success at the Tremont Theatre, Boston.

THE MAY BOOK NEWS is a "Henry van Dyke Number," with numerous portraits of and articles on Dr. van Dyke '73. Mr. Hamilton Wright Mabie contributes an appreciation of "Henry van Dyke, the Man," Louis D. Froelick '06 writes on "Dr. van Dyke in the Class-Room," and Dr. van Dyke's "God of the Open Air," is reprinted from "Music and Other Poems." Also, the following verses on "A Quadruplex Poet," by Robert Bridges '79, are reproduced, with this explanation :

At the Lotus Club dinner given recently in New York to Henry van Dyke, Robert Bridges alluded to Dr. van Dyke as a "quadruplex poet" who could treat any theme in four different manners, as poet-preacher, poet-professor, poet-fisherman, and poet-novelist. Taking a congenial subject, "The Trout," he gave the following examples of how Dr. van Dyke might be expected to elaborate it :—

THE TROUT. By the Poet-Preacher.

PREDESTINED is the course that you must swim
Through whirling rapids seething to the brim ;
A little sunshine gleams along your track,
But mostly it is gray, and often black.
In vain you strive some joy to snatch or beg—
The sin, original, was in the egg ;
You can't escape it, by John Calvin's plan
The paths of glory lead but to the pan.

Beware the gaudy lure a-floating by—
Some evil-minded person cast the fly ;
A little while you gaily swim the stream—
Your boasted freedom is an empty dream,—
And, soon or late, you'll know where you are at,
Frying and sizzling in the scorching fat.

THE TROUT. By the Poet-Professor.

IN joyous quest of all Salmonidae
From petty cares and greater woes I flee ;
With trusty guide and boat I journey far
And whip the stream for royal trout and char ;
In Scottish hills, regardless of expenses,
I fish the lakes for salmo leuvenensis,
Or farther go to find the Gillaroo,
The Dolly Varden, golden trout, or blue.

Branchiferous vertebrate, I sing thy praise—
From crest occipital to caudal rays—
And thrill with ecstasies that never fail
Whene'er you lash your homocercal tail.
Then come, ye Sportsmen, fill the golden chalice !
All drink to salvelinus fontinalis !

THE TROUT. By the Poet-Fisherman.

HAIL to the beautiful queen of the fishes, Gleaming like silver and pink like the rose—
Spirit of brightness, goal of our wishes,—
Music that sings in the stream while it flows ;—
Happy your life in the crystalline waters,
Playing and loafing in cranny and nook—
Teaching your wiles to your sons and your daughters—
Happier still when you land on our hook.
Saved from old age, or the jaws of a stronger—
Sleeping in peace in the sheltering crate,
Foolish the fish who would want to live longer !
Drink to the Trout from a jug of good bait !

[Embodying Dr. van Dyke's theory that the true sportsman comes to his victim as Euthanasia—saving it from lingering death by old age or from a stronger rival.]

THE TROUT. By the Poet-Novelist.

ONCE there was a lady trout, strolling down the water
Rubies on her mantle, diamonds in her eye ;
Then there came a dandy trout, no better than oughter
Be, and looking for a captivating fly.
From the bank an evil man cast a feathered beauty—
Lured him with a Parmachenee Belle—
Then the wiley lady trout saw and did her duty,
Flirted with him—saved his soul from—well
They were married in the church, wedding bells and laughter
(Little trout to bless them by and by),
So they lived a charming life—happy ever after—
Just because she was a little fly.

[Embodying a hero, heroine, villain, and a happy ending—
all the elements of true romance.]

PRINCETON MEN GENERALLY will be interested in the new novel "Where Speech Ends," by Robert Haven Schaufler '02 (with a prelude by Dr. van Dyke), not only because the author is a Princeton man himself, but because the book has a distinct college flavor, the scenes being laid partly in Princeton, with vivid pictures of some phases of the undergraduate life of the modern Princeton student. One of the principal characters of the story is Peter Morris, a Princeton undergraduate with a great fondness for classical music—a rare type, perhaps—who leaves college to join a German orchestra. Another character is a young German musical genius. These two become fast friends, but they both fall in love with the heroine, the daughter of one of the musicians, and the "Little Mother" of the whole orchestra—as they affectionately call her. There is, of course, the villain, who plots to succeed to the leadership of the orchestra and is also a suitor of the girl. He makes lots of trouble, but finally gets his just deserts. Franz, the German genius, at last wins the girl and becomes the leader of the orchestra, while Peter, the "simple student," loses gracefully and decides to return to college. There are two Princeton scenes, one on the occasion of Peter's leaving to join the orchestra, and the other when the company later gives a concert in Alexander Hall on the evening of the Junior Prom. The book is published by the firm of Moffat, Yard & Co., New York,—Robert S. Yard '83 and William D. Moffat '84.

The Princeton Dinner in Boston

THE sixth annual banquet of the Princeton Alumni Association of New England was held on May 3rd, at the University Club, Boston, the guest of honor being President Wilson '79, who spoke interestingly on the operation of the new curriculum and the Preceptorial System. Other speakers included Prof. A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard, Prof. W. R. Martin '72 of Trinity College, Hartford, representing the new Princeton Alumni Association of the Connecticut Valley; the Rev. Clay McCaulay '63, who has recently returned from educational work in Japan; and the Rev. Edward Huntingt Rudd '83 of Dedham, the newly elected President of the association. President Francis L. Coolidge '84 presided.

At the annual business meeting of the association, held previous to the banquet, the following officers were elected: President—Rev. Edward Huntingt Rudd '83, Dedham, Mass.; Vice-Presidents—Isaac C. Wyman '48, Salem, Mass.; Rev. Dr. John L. Withrow '60, Boston; Francis L. Coolidge '84, Boston; Secretary and Treasurer—Hugh Miller '01, Lexington, Mass.; Executive Committee—Dr. H. M. Cutts '80, Chairman, Brookline, Mass.; T. C. Chapin '93, Boston; L. P. Leas '96, Brookline, Mass.; B. R. Miller '97, Boston; R. G. Wright '02, Cambridge; M. H. Eisenhart '05, Boston.

A resolution was passed authorizing the Secretary to write all New England congressmen urging the passage of the bill now before Congress to appropriate $30,000 to aid the State of New Jersey in erecting a suitable monument on the battlefield at Princeton, to commemorate that important event of the Revolutionary War.

A communication was read from the Brown University Club of the Connecticut Valley, urging the Princeton Alumni Association to join in a movement for the federation of college and university clubs, and the matter was referred to the executive committee, who will appoint a representative to attend a conference of delegates from various college and university clubs, which has been arranged for May 17th, at the Cooley House, Springfield, Mass.

Hugh Miller '01, the Secretary of the Princeton Alumni Association of New England, whose business address is 60 State street, Boston, requests all Princeton men living in New England to communicate with him. He writes that the Princeton dinner in Boston was "the largest and most enthusiastic banquet we have ever had here, and it is only a question of time when we will get the two hundred or more alumni scattered throughout New England as firmly knit together as the alumni of the Middle States are. The new Connecticut Valley Princeton Club was ably represented by Prof. W. R. Martin '72, who said that they considered their organization as simply a local one, subsidiary to ours, and we are glad to be able to have their aid in covering our vast territory. Our constitution and by-laws, which are to be drawn up by a committee of three appointed by the president, will probably provide for the future formation of clubs similar to that of the Connecticut Valley in different parts of New England, to co-operate with our association in spreading the gospel of Princeton."

Princeton 5, Pennsylvania 0

ONLY one game was played by the Princeton baseball team during the past week, University of Pennsylvania being shut out at Philadelphia on May 5th. The Wednesday game, Amherst at Princeton, was prevented by rain. This Saturday, the second game with Cornell, on University Field; and next Saturday, the first Harvard game, at Cambridge.

PRINCETON 5, PENNSYLVANIA 0

By good batting combined with fine pitching and fielding, Princeton won by 5-0 in the first of the two games with University of Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia on May 5th. Pennsylvania succeeded in getting only two safe hits from Byram, who struck out ten batters; during the first five innings he did not allow a Pennsylvania player to reach first base. Princeton, on the other hand, made nine safe hits, including two two-baggers and two three-base hits, Harlan leading the batting with a single, a two-bagger and a triple.

All the scoring was done in the fourth and fifth innings. In the fourth Harlan made a clean two-base hit, went to third on Vaughn's safe bunt, and scored on Sides' fly to center field. And in the fifth Princeton's timely hitting, materially assisted by Pennsylvania's errors, brought in four runs. After Newcomb had gone out at first, Bard hit safely for three bases. Then Cooney made the second out on a high fly, but Byram reached first on Carter's error, and Bard scored. Byram went around to third on a passed ball and came home on Captain Reid's safe bunt. Reid stole second, and Dillon was given a base on balls. Reid also stole third, and scored on a wild throw by Brown, Dillon going to second. Harlan then brought Dillon home with his three-bagger. Vaughn's strike-out left Harlan at third, but Princeton was five runs to the good.

The Rev. Dr. James Morrison Barkley, pastor of the Forest Avenue Presbyterian Church of Detroit, has been selected by the Synod of Michigan as its candidate for Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, to meet this month at Des Moines, Iowa. The Michigan Presbyterian has a leading article in a recent number, in support of

Dr. Barkley's candidacy, and the following is from an editorial in The Interior of April 19th:

A peculiarly fine example of character attaining to power by virtue of its own inherent strength,—claiming nothing through self-assertion but doing much by patient bending of excellent gifts to humble tasks,—is readable in the career of Rev. James M. Barkley, D.D., pastor of the Forest Avenue Church at Detroit. For nearly twenty years he has labored steadfastly in this one field, causing no ado but continually bringing things to pass; gathering into the church almost a thousand members, of whom, after all subtractions to which church rolls are liable, there remain today more than 500 to make up one of the most aggressive and intense Christian bodies in the Michigan metropolis. Meanwhile, through presbytery and synod he has as conscientiously and unassumingly done his duty in larger interests, and the sum of result is that at this present hour he is recognised throughout his state—and indeed more widely—as one of the very strongest personal factors in a synod by no means wanting in strong men. It is happy proof that good repute for eminent talents does not always come by way of determined self-advancement, but that the worth of modest work may command a more enviable recognition.

The Hon. James S. Harlan of Chicago has been appointed a member of the United States Commission to the Pan-American Conference, which is to meet at Rio Janeiro in July.

'86

W. S. Elder was the "Citizens'" candidate for Mayor at the city election of Deadwood, S. D., on April 17th. He was defeated by 16 votes, after the most stubborn fight ever witnessed in an election in that city. He ran on a "reform and anti-gambling" platform, and has been urged to contest the election on the ground that many illegal votes were cast. It is said that enough illegal votes have already been discovered to more than offset the majority against him.

Dr. Dunlop Moore, who has been for the past four years Assistant Surgeon of the United States Marine Hospital and Public Health Service at Yokohama, has recently left Japan, to take up similar work at Honolulu. The following editorial is from the Japan Daily Advertiser of Yokohama, March 22nd:

There will be many genuine regrets when this popular official leaves Japan. For four years he has been among us, and during that time has made many staunch friends. Japan has been a pleasant assignment for him. He brought to his duties here an immense amount of valuable information, and is judged one of the best equipped men in the service. Of late years he has made a specialty of Trachoma, the eye disease which is the curse of Japan, and is perhaps the best equipped man in this specialty of any in the service, if not in the World. During the term of service at this port Dr. Moore has personally examined over 50,000 emigrants. He has in contemplation it is understood the preparation of a paper upon this disease and within the next three months it is hoped it will be published.

Dr. Moore is a first class Japanese scholar and speaks the language with an ease that is seldom attained by foreigners. He also reads the Chinese characters well.

Wherever Dr. Moore goes he takes with him the hearty good wishes of host of friends.

APPPLICATION blanks for seats at the Yale-Princeton baseball game to be played at Princeton on June 9th, the Saturday of Commencement week, are now ready and may be had at the Princeton Club of New York, the Princeton Club of Philadelphia, or from George R. Murray '93, the General Treasurer, Princeton, N. J. The maximum number of seats to be allotted to one applicant is four; the maximum number of adjoining seats, sixteen,—those desiring seats together being required to apply on the same blank, and all tickets so allotted will be mailed to one address. The last date for receiving applications is Friday, June 1st. The prices are, for the grand stand, including admission, $1.50 a seat; for the open stand, including admission, $1.00 a seat; for grand stand boxes, holding six persons, $2.50 a seat. Seats for the second Harvard-Princeton baseball game, to be played at Princeton on May 26th, and for the first Yale-Princeton game, at New Haven, June 2nd, may be had at Briner's drug store, Princeton, during the week before those games, or on application to the General Treasurer.

THE RESULT OF THE FIRST baseball game with Harvard, at Cambridge this Saturday, will be known by the time this issue of The Weekly reaches many of its readers. We go to press, also, too early to announce the outcome of the annual Yale-Princeton debate, to be held in Alexander Hall this Friday night. The Princeton team, Raymond B. Fosdick '05, P. G., Kenneth M. McEwen '06, and Thomas S. Clark '08, are defending the affirmative of the interesting question "Resolved, that the bachelor's degree should be required for admission to any law school controlled by a university." The Yale team announced to defend the negative (by choice) are Louis D. Bergh '06, Donald A.

Adams '08 Law School, and Roger B. Hull '07. President Patton is the presiding officer, and the judges are Prof. John B. Clark of Columbia University, and Messrs. Paul D. Cravath and John G. Milburn of New York. For the annual Lynde Debate at Commencement, between six seniors representing the Halls, Whig has appointed J. B. Beaty, C. W. Greene and E. Sunstein; Clio, J. K. Jackson, W. S. Davison, and N. P. McClanahan.

THE TRIANGLE CLUB presents Tabasco Land at the Broad Street Theatre, Philadelphia, this Saturday night, under the auspices of the Princeton Club of Philadelphia. Apropos, the modern languages department is making the most of the modern undergraduate's desire to "appear in public on the stage." Interest in the study of German has been greatly stimulated by the organization of the German Club, and the presentation of a play in that language,—Roderick Benedix's entertaining farce "Elgensinn," which was recently put on the Casino stage with great success. And if the six students who acted the parts with much spirit and abandon, did not speak their lines in the best Berlinese, there were very few in the large audience of invited guests who were aware of it. Several songs were introduced with good effect, the play ending with a rollicking chorus to the tune of "Java" in Tabasco Land, one of the preceptors of the department having supplied appropriate German verses. It was all very good fun both for the performers and the audience.

IN WRITING TO YOUR CONGRESSMAN about the Princeton Battle Monument Bill, urging that a day be fixed for action on the proposed government appropriation of $30,000 to assist in marking the Battle of Princeton, send him this editorial from the New York Sun of May 17th:

For years the college and townspeople of Princeton have been working for a

Princeton battle monument. A fine site for the monument is available at any time, and excellent plans for it have been prepared. The university, the town and the State Legislature stand ready to do their part, contingent upon the contribution of a proportionate share through the appropriation of $30,000 to this purpose by Congress.

The scheme is not an isolated project, but part of a scheme calling for a commemorative structure at or near each revolutionary battlefield where Washington commanded in person.

The Battle of Princeton was one of the most stirring fights of the war, and marked a critical point in the fortunes of the Colonials. The tide was at its lowest ebb when the defeat of Colonel Mawhood's men at Princeton brought a respite and encouragement to the discouraged and almost despairing patriots, compelling Cornwallis to leave New Jersey in undisputed possession of the American forces, and giving the worn troops of the Continental Army a chance to rest and recuperate at Morristown.

The Princeton battlefield is, we believe, the only one of the five included in the original scheme that remains unmarked, although, next to Yorktown, it is perhaps the one that appeals most imperatively to the imagination and the sympathy of those who know best the history of the struggle for American independence.

Now, as a last resort, the alumni of Princeton in every section of the country are writing to their representatives in Congress in behalf of this apparently wholly commendable project. This movement was begun by the Princeton Alumni Association of New England.

There is much more than any merely local appeal in favor of a monument to mark the field where fell dashing Hugh Mercer in a hand to hand struggle, won through the personal presence and intrepid personal courage of the Commander in Chief, within a mile of the old hall where Congress, in 1783, received the news of the completion of the treaty of peace and tendered its thanks to George Washington in person.

The one hundred and thirtieth anniversary of the Battle of Princeton will occur on January 3, 1907. That would be a good date for the unveiling of a Washington monument.

COMMUNICATION

New York, 14 May, 1906.

To the Editor of The Weekly,

Sir: The Class of '95 is not discouraged by the astounding vital statistics of the Class of '96 printed in the last number of The Weekly. You state that "while

'96's percentage of marriages for ten years [51 per cent.] is slightly less than '95's [55 per cent.], yet in the percentage of children to marriages '96 leads its immediate predecessor by several laps,—101 per cent. as compared with 84 per cent."

I submit, sir, that in simple justice, you should also have set forth the fact that in the Class of '96 there are 266  $\frac{3}{4}$  per cent. more foreign missionaries than there are in the Class of '95.

Moreover, in the Bright Lexicon of Ninety-Five there is no such word as Faile.

Respectfully,

ANDREW C. IMBRIE '95,
Class Secretary.

A Japanese Impression of Princeton

BUNSHIRO HATTORI of Tokio has the distinction of being the first native of Japan to receive from Princeton the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. Dr. Hattori has just completed a four-years graduate course in Princeton; he has passed the rigid examinations for the doctorate, his thesis has been accepted, and the degree will be formally conferred at the approaching Commencement.

Dr. Hattori was graduated Bachelor of Arts in 1902 from the University of Waseda in Tokio, where, during his senior year, he held the highest academic honor. In the fall of 1902 he came to America, entering the Princeton Graduate School. During his first year here he learned to speak and understand the English language, of which he had acquired a reading knowledge at Waseda. In 1904 he received the degree of Master of Arts and was awarded the South East Club University Fellowship in Social Science, which he has since held. Recently he has been appointed to a similar fellowship by the University of Waseda, and upon leaving this country next autumn he will spend two years under this appointment at the University of Leipzig, returning thereafter to Japan, as Professor of Economics in Waseda.

During his four years in Princeton Dr. Hattori has entered into the life of the place with a hearty zest, and now upon the conclusion of his course, at the request of The Weekly, he has written the following impressions of Princeton, from the point of view of a Japanese student:

My dear friend:

As I have promised, I now sit down to write you a letter telling you all about my feeling toward Princeton and what I think about the University.

I came back to Princeton a few days ago to enjoy my last spring in this country. Princeton is just as beautiful as ever. The green campus and the young tender leaves of the trees seem like the promise of the future prospect of young men who pursue their study here. The sublimity of the buildings standing in the campus manifests the manliness of Princeton spirit.

I think it is fair to remind you of one thing to begin with,—that I am going to tell you frankly how I think about Princeton. It is absolutely against my established principle to utter any flattering word from my mouth, so that what I now write you is really my actual feeling. I have, however, always so pleasant an idea and high opinion about Princeton that I feel bound to say all very well. But I hope you will understand that I am telling you the truth. You and I are fortunate enough to be called Princeton men, and I trust you can see this clearly.

There are lots of things I shall write. I think I will begin with my study. It was about three and a half years ago when I came here. I knew then very little of the University. While I was in my home, I heard much about Harvard, Yale, Columbia, and Michigan. The reason is, it seems to me now, that those universities have many graduates in Japan among whom very prominent men of the day are included, while Princeton has a few representatives. I was therefore naturally inclined to go to Yale, where I had a few friends, and received an introductory letter to Yale from the President of my university in Tokio, who is also a Yale man. When I mentioned, however, my intention to go abroad to Mr. Okuma,* a Princeton man and then the supposed heir of Count Okuma, ex-premier, and Mr. Tamura,† another Princeton man, they told me something about Princeton and recommended me to go to Princeton. They said Princeton is a very fine place and the only place for the Japanese to enjoy thoroughly American university life. I thought then I should go to Princeton; for we do not go abroad simply to study some advanced piece of knowledge, but we do come to master the language, to see the college life, and to investigate the methods of study. The universities in Japan give courses of study just as high as in the universities in foreign countries. But the advantages which can be derived from study abroad will not cease, however the country from where one comes be progressed higher than other countries. I think, therefore, young men of any country can get great help for their future work, if they go to foreign countries for study. Suppose that all these young men can use their experience and knowledge not for themselves, but for their fellow people: How great will the benefit be for mankind in general! I changed my mind to come to Princeton, left my fatherland soon after the Commencement of my university, and came here at the end of September, 1902. Now I can fully appreciate how I was fortunate in my choice of a college.

I studied English before I came here, but I could hardly express my thought in English. Through the kindness of professors and friends, everything was settled nicely and I began my study of economics as my special subject. The first class I attended was Prof. Daniels' course in applied economics, and at that time he was teaching the theory of monopoly. I tried to understand the lecture, but I could not. I worked hard indeed, but it was not until after one term that I could catch the meaning of the lectures. Besides economics, I took President Wilson's courses on jurisprudence and constitutional government, and Prof. Garfield's courses on politics. I studied also history, German and English. I was very much interested in all these courses. All the professors under whom I worked were very kind to me, and I am unable to find the words to express my thanks to them. I assure you that I am entirely satisfied with my study here. It is certainly a pride of Princeton that we have a strong faculty. The courses of economics given here are not of course so many as in other universities, but the relation between professors and students are so close that we can study anything we want under the most careful guidance of professors. This relation is really ideal and impressed me a great deal with its admirable working. The great new force of preceptors makes the relation closer than ever. It seems to me that the ideal system of education is to have the personal influence of professors on students. Professors are not simply the men who teach the different branches of learning, but they are the personal example to those who receive their instruction. I sincerely respect and congratulate Princeton, where we can see as professors so many men of good type of the true gentleman. The only thing I wish for Princeton is the fuller development of the Graduate School, even if we can not have professional schools. As one of the first-class universities of America, it is necessary to have a Graduate School in which students can complete the most advanced study of every branch of knowledge.

I have just received the degree of Ph.D. I am very glad to receive it from Princeton as I am the first Japanese who ever attained to it. My thesis will be published next week. I worked hard to write the thesis; for the difference of language is one great obstacle for the communication of thought—much more than the difference of the monetary system is for international trade. I owe a great deal to Prof. Daniels, who kindly reviewed my English.

The expenses in Princeton are not so high as I expected. I earned some of my expenses myself, especially during the summer. The appointment as a university fellow pleases me more than anything else in my life. When I was first congratulated by friends, I thought that Japan had won another victory over Russia; because the war was going on at that time, and I did not know that I had been nominated the university fellow of social science. I greatly appreciate the exceptional privilege bestowed on me, coming here a complete stranger. I held the academic honor in Japan, but I never expected to get it in this country.

The atmosphere of the University is truly democratic, though sometimes strange college customs seem not to agree with it. Everybody is treated fairly. The University is like one great family. I had the exceptional opportunity to mingle with American students, and I feel with some of them just as intimate as I feel with the classmates of my Alma Mater in Japan. The friendships I made here, which enrich my life, I wish to prove lasting. The club life in Princeton seems very interesting. Through the courtesy and kindness of The Bachelors, I was in that club for two years. Its members are nearly the promising young professors of the University. I had a good chance to make friendships with them. I was also invited to a few different clubs in Prospect avenue, and I saw their organization. The club system is a good thing for students to let them have a good time together and train them unconsciously to be social. I have often heard of the inter-club treaty. I cannot see why they do not increase the number of the clubs, in order to give a fairer opportunity to all students and avoid the trouble of the treaty.

The greatest power which attracts me to Princeton is Princeton spirit, which has the predominant influence in the college. It is the pride and essence of the University. Without it, Princeton would lose much of her influence. The high sense of personal responsibility and honor, and the strong Christian faith, make the noble character of the typical son of Old Nassau. Her ancient historical relation to the independence of the country is also one of the sources of her good influence. I remember still President Wilson's speech, that Princeton men should not spend their energy for the sake of themselves, but for the benefit of their fellow people. The success which should be attained by Princeton men should not be merely worldly success, but the success which is honorable. The great ideal, indeed! It seems to me that Princeton shall be the place where the genuine element of the great republic of the world shall be produced. The task is by no means easy. The ideal must be high, faith strong, to achieve the work and purify this yet unsettled America in her every department of activity. The honor system of Princeton is the manifestation of the spirit. Its successful working is certainly worthy of admiration. The idea of honor will do the work. The duty which is hanging on the shoulders of Princeton men is not easy to fulfill, and I sincerely hope that all students will come under the perfect influence of the Princeton spirit.

The town of Princeton and its surroundings are naturally beautiful. The town people are good and kind. It is wonderful to see how the influence of education goes to the people. I observed this in several places.

I would tell more about Princeton, but enough has been said so far. I will leave here soon for Washington, where I will spend the most of the summer. I will leave this country for good, going to Europe in September, so far as I can see now. I expect to stay in Germany for two years, and at first I am going to Leipzig. My work in Japan will be teaching economics in Waseda University from which I graduated.

After going home to the Far East, we will organize a Princeton club in Tokio. We can get over thirty members. I think it is interesting and useful for us to have Princeton influence felt in Japan.

I owe a great deal to Princeton indeed, and I cannot express myself by any means man ever discovered. I will do the best I can wherever I go and work with the idea I acquired in Princeton, which will remain in my mind forever. Do you think that is right?

Very truly yours,

B. HATTORI.

Two Ninth-Inning Victories

THE baseball team is in New England this week-end, playing Andover at Andover on Friday and Harvard at Cambridge this Saturday. During the week Princeton won two ninth-inning victories on University Field, taking the second Cornell game by 2-1, and the third Georgetown game, 3-2.

PRINCETON 2, CORNELL 1

By timely hitting in the ninth inning, Princeton won the second Cornell game, 2-1, on University Field, May 12th, in the closest and most exciting contest on the home grounds this spring. It was the first big game of the season at Princeton, and there was a large and enthusiastic crowd. The umpire, Mr. Hassett, added to the interest by his unusually emphatic manner of rendering decisions. This is the first time since 1902 that Princeton has won both the Cornell games, and the Cornell nine has not been beaten by any other college team this year. Byram and Umstad were both in good pitching form, and there wasn't much hitting. Byram struck out twelve men, gave two bases on balls, and allowed only three hits. Umstad was hit safely six times, and struck out only two batters, but he gave no bases on balls. In the fourth inning Cornell had runners on second and third, with only one out. It looked good to Cornell, but Byram rose to the occasion and struck out the next two batters. In the following inning he also struck out three batters,—making five strike-outs in succession.

There was no scoring until the eighth inning, when Cornell made the first run, on errors. After two were out, Heilman knocked a grounder between first and second, which took Bard off his base. Vaughn finally fielded the ball, but threw wild to Byram, who was covering first, and Heilman went down to second. Then Umstad knocked a grounder to Sides, who made a bad throw to first, allowing Heilman to score the first run of the game. But Cornell's lead was short-lived. In the latter half of the eighth Cornell's errors helped Princeton tie the score. Byram started the inning with a single to right; Captain Reid struck out and Dillon knocked a high fly. But Harlan's grounder was juggled by Preston; Hollands fielded the ball, but his throw to third to catch Byram went wild, and Byram had plenty of time to get home. And in the ninth, after Cornell had been retired, Sides singled, was advanced to second by McLean's sacrifice, and Bard's liner to left brought him home with the winning run.

PRINCETON 3, GEORGETOWN 2

Princeton won another ninth-inning victory on University Field, May 16th, defeating Georgetown 3-2, and making the record for the Georgetown series two victories out of three games. Princeton scored twice in the second inning, Georgetown made one run each in the third and fourth, and then the score remained a tie until the last half of the ninth, when opportune hits by Cooney and Vaughn brought in the winning run. But it was a loosely-played game, Princeton making five fielding errors, two of which were largely responsible for Georgetown's two runs. The Georgetown batters found Doyle for ten safe hits, but bad base-running kept their score down. Montgomery, the Georgetown pitcher, allowed seven hits and gave six bases on balls.

In the second inning McLean reached first on Scheller's error, went to second on Bard's grounder, and scored on Cooney's single. Doyle was given a base on balls, advancing Cooney to second. On Reid's grounder Cooney was caught at third, but Doyle was safe at second, and Dillon brought him home with a clean single.

In the third inning, after two were out, Devlin hit safely and scored on Scheller's single to right which McLean should have stopped but didn't. And in the fourth Georgetown scored on hits by Monahan, Duggan and Mayock, and an error by Dillon.

Princeton was deprived of an apparently sure score in the eighth, when with Sides on third Bard sent a hot drive to right field. It looked like a home run, but a fine catch by Mayock spoiled it. However, in the last half of the ninth Cooney singled, went to second on Doyle's sacrifice, reached third on a wild pitch, and scored the winning run on Vaughn's single to left. Meantime, Reid had been hit by a pitched ball, Dillon had gone out on a pop fly, and Harlan had waited for four bad balls, so that the bases were full and only one out when Vaughn's drive past third broke the tie and won the game.

Gamble '09, third in the 100-yards; N. B. Tooker '06, third in the high jump; and L. H. Simons '08, third in the broad jump.

INTERSCHOLASTIC TENNIS TOURNAMENT

The fourteenth annual Princeton Interscholastic Tennis Tournament, held on the University courts, May 12th, was won by William C. Harrison of the Western High School of Washington, D. C. This is the second year in succession that the Western High School has won the Princeton tournament, last year's champion being Spencer Gordon '09, who comes from that school. In the semi-final round last Saturday Harrison defeated Grant of Lawrenceville in the closest match of the tournament, 4–6, 7–5, and 10–8. And in the finals Harrison won from Smithers of Tome Institute, 12–10 and 6–3. By winning this championship, Harrison becomes Princeton's representative at Newport, to meet the winners of the Yale, Harvard and Columbia interscholastic tournaments, for the interscholastic championship of the United States. In the Princeton tournament there were eighteen entries, representing St. Paul's School of Garden City, Lawrenceville, Pingry, Brown Preparatory School, Tome Institute, Lakewood School, and the Western High School of Washington.

DUAL TENNIS MATCH

Princeton defeated the University of Pennsylvania, 5–3, in a dual tennis match, at the Merion Cricket Club courts, Haverford, on May 12th. In doubles each team won two matches, and in singles Princeton won three and Pennsylvania one. In doubles Dewhurst and Register, Pennsylvania, defeated Rendall, P. G., and Sunstein '06, and also defeated Thomson '07 and Marsh '07; for Princeton, Thomson and Marsh defeated Philler and Downey, and Rendall and Sunstein also defeated Philler and Downey. In singles, Dewhurst, Pennsylvania, defeated Rendall, P. G., but Marsh '07, Thomson '07 and Sunstein '06 won their matches from Downey, Register, and Philler of Pennsylvania, respectively.

SHOOTING

Yale won the semi-annual intercollegiate gun shot, at New Haven on May 12th, with a score of 212 out of a possible 250. Captain O. D. Munn '06 won the individual championship for Princeton, with a score of 47 out of 50, equaling the intercollegiate record held by P. Archer '04. The University of Pennsylvania was second with 191, Princeton third with 185, and Harvard fourth with 179. The indications, that any of its reunions has had. The class headquarters, in the Goldie house, 31 University Place, will be open from Friday, June 8th, to Wednesday, June 13th. The class will march in a body, with a band, Saturday afternoon to University Field, to see the Princeton-Yale baseball game. #### THE '05 CLASS MEMORIAL FUND

This is an appeal to all members of the Class of '05 who have not as yet subscribed to this noble work. As a whole the class is to be congratulated upon its showing up to date, but individually many have not shown an interest in this fund who could well afford to do so. Do not be ashamed to give a small contribution; each dollar will purchase a good-sized stone for our 1905 Class Memorial Dormitory. Every man in the class surely desires to own a part of this dormitory. We never have had a better chance to show our combined class and Princeton spirit, than in this attempt to enlarge and beautify Princeton University. Scrape up what you can and either send it, or, in June, bring it to one of the committee or the chairman, as the first year's subscriptions should have been foreclosed last January.

CLASSES holding reunions this June, and all the alumni who expect to return to Princeton for Commencement, will be interested in the very full official programme of that auspicious occasion, which is printed on another page. The arrangements for accommodating the large crowd are much better than they used to be; in addition to the facilities of the upper-class clubs, the Nassau Club, and the local hotels, restaurants and boarding houses, meals will be served to alumni and their friends at the rooms of the freshman eating clubs in University Hall. Also alumni coming in automobiles will be glad to know that the Princeton Garage Company is prepared to accommodate about forty cars, in its garage back of the Nassau Hotel. Those expecting to have their autos here through Commencement week are advised to apply for space at once.

ALL GRADUATE MEMBERS of Clio and Whig Halls who expect to be in Princeton for Commencement, are urged to attend the annual meetings of their respective societies, which, we are informed, are to be of unusual importance this year. Questions relating to the administration (not the finances) of the Halls are to be discussed. The meetings are set for eleven o'clock, Tuesday, June 12th.

ANNOUNCEMENT WAS MADE this week of the purchase of the large Nassau Hotel property by the Nassau Realty Company, a new organization of which Mr. H. C. Bunn, the Curator of Grounds and Buildings, is the secretary and treasurer, and in which several alumni are interested. Both the old Nassau Hotel and the property formerly known as the Mansion House are included in the purchase, comprehending a frontage of 155 feet on Nassau street with a depth of 430 feet. The price paid for this valuable block is announced as $155,000. The three upper stories of the eastern half of the building (the old Mansion House) are to be opened next fall as a private dormitory for students; the western half will be continued as the Nassau Hotel, under new management.

A FINE EXAMPLE of Princeton loyalty has been set by the ten classes, '92 to '01, whose combined memorial gifts to the University are represented in the latest addition to the Gothic architecture along the west side of the campus, Patton Hall. This imposing dormitory, now nearing completion, will add not only to the embellishment of the campus and the comfort of the students; it will also add to the endowment of the University $170,000, the cost of the building, in round numbers. The rental from its rooms will bring to the University Treasury a net return of four per cent., approximately, on the cost of the building, thereby increasing the University's annual income by nearly seven thousand dollars. Obviously, therefore, this form of gift combines to an unusual degree the best purposes of class memorials: It is a notable addition to the campus architecture, it improves living conditions on behalf of the students, it brings a dependable increase to the income of the University, and its several entries, each marked with the numerals of one of the contributing classes, are permanent monuments of the loyalty and generosity of those classes.

IT IS WITH MUCH PLEASURE, therefore, that we are able to announce that another new dormitory has been designed by the architect of Patton Hall, and that several classes have engaged to contribute the cost of an entry, approximately $17,000. Continuing the graceful line of architecture started a decade ago by Blair and Little, the new building will be erected immediately to the south of Patton Hall, as a section of the imposing quadrangle which is to enclose Brokaw Field on the east and south. Class memorial committees wishing views and plans of the new dormitory may secure them from Harold G. Murray '93, the Secretary of the Committee of Fifty, 52 Wall street, New York.

PLANS FOR NEXT FALL'S FOOTBALL season include the appointment of William W. Roper '02 (who played end rush on the '01 eleven, and who has had charge of this spring's practice) as head coach; and of Mr. Valentine Flood of New York as general athletic trainer. Mr. Flood comes to Princeton highly recommended; he was formerly trainer at the University Athletic Club of New York, and the Crescent Athletic Club of Brooklyn. Mr. A. L. Copeland, who has had charge of the track team this season, will continue as special track coach next year.

THE SILVER CUPS offered by Tracy H. Harris '86 and John B. Fine '82, for punting and drop-kicking, were won this week by J. B. McCormick '08, the varsity fullback, and G. N. Hunting '07, respectively. Fourteen undergraduates entered the contests; their kicking was mediocre. Mr. Harris and Sheppard Homans '92 were the judges.

MRS. CHARLES W. HENRY of Philadelphia, who established, two years ago, the Charles W. Henry Memorial Tree Fund of $5,000, has again shown her friendship for Princeton by an additional gift of $1,000, to be expended outright for the planting of trees on the campus. The gift is being used for plantings at the Gymnasium, Seventy-Nine Hall, and Brown Hall.

YALE'S VICTORY in the annual debate with Princeton, in Alexander Hall on May 18th, makes the record of these contests: Yale 8, Princeton 4.

The Annual Convention of the Western Association of Princeton Clubs

By JAMES MATHERS '90

THE seventh annual convention of the Western Association of Princeton Clubs was held at Cleveland, Ohio, May 19th. A large number of delegates responded to the invitation of the Princeton Club of Cleveland, and by nine o'clock in the morning the lobby of the Hollenden Hotel was filled with enthusiastic Princeton men. They came from all over the West and brought the Princeton spirit with them. As soon as classmates had settled identities, the association met in business session, with John H. Thacher '95 of Kansas City, Mo., President of the association, presiding. The invitation of the Princeton Club of Chicago was accepted for the 1907 meeting of the association.

A resolution was presented by Judge White '54 of Indiana, Pa., addressed to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, asking that action be taken on the House bill relating to an appropriation for the Princeton Battle Monument. This resolution was unanimously adopted, and the Hon. Harry White '54 of Pennsylvania, Henry D. Pierce '68 of Indiana, and Cyrus H. McCormick '79 of Illinois were appointed a committee to go to Washington and call upon Speaker Cannon in behalf of the bill.

At twelve o'clock, private cars carried the delegates to the Euclid Club, where luncheon was served. Enthusiasm reigned supreme. Locomotive, triple and long cheers followed in rapid succession, favorite soloists were called upon and responded, the quartet as well, and everybody sang. The officers for the following year were announced, — President, James Mathers '90, Cleveland; Secretary, James W. Thorne '00, Chicago. After luncheon, automobiles were provided, the Country Club was visited and a pleasant afternoon spent.

In the evening the seventh annual banquet was held at the Hollenden Hotel, tendered to the delegates by the Princeton Club of Cleveland. The toastmaster was H. S. Johnson '78, President of the Cleveland Club, and the following toasts were responded to: "Princeton University," President Woodrow Wilson '79; "Maintaining the Standards," Professor Andrew F. West '74; "The Princeton of Former Days," John H. Voorhees '41 of Cincinnati; "Princeton in the South," William L. Granberry '85 of Nashville; "Princeton, Pittsburgh and the West," George R. Wallace '91, Pittsburgh. Unannounced subjects were responded to by John D. Davis '72 of St. Louis, David B. Jones '76 of Chicago, and Judge Harry White '54 of Indiana, Pa.

A resolution was presented by Cyrus H. McCormick '79 of Chicago, recommending that steps be taken as soon as possible to have a standard band and orchestra arrangement of the principal Princeton songs.

The greatest impression was of course made by our President, who arrived here Thursday, and spent all day Friday addressing the principal preparatory schools.*

The result of this meeting will be a strong Princeton sentiment in a district of Northern Ohio which has suffered for years under the sway of Harvard and Yale. We are all satisfied that these annual gatherings produce beneficial results, not only for the men who attend them but for the dear old University in "New Jersec," our beloved Alma Mater.

*The speeches made at the banquet by President Wilson and Dean West were stenographically reported and will appear in the next number of The Weekly.

Three Victories and One Defeat

THREE victories and one defeat is the record of the Princeton baseball team for the past week.

On the New England trip, Andover was shut out, 5-0, on May 18th, and the next day, at Cambridge, the score in the first Harvard game was 8-6. After the return to Princeton, on Monday the 21st an extra game, not on the schedule, was played with the Mercersburg Academy nine, which the schoolboys won, 2-1,—they had been shut out by Lawrenceville on Saturday. And on Wednesday the 23rd, Princeton beat Dartmouth 2-1 in an eleven-inning game on University Field. This Saturday, the second Harvard game at Princeton.

PRINCETON 8, HARVARD 6

ninth-inning victories. In an erratic but intensely interesting exhibition of baseball Princeton won the first of the two Harvard games, 8-6, at Cambridge on May 19th, scoring the decisive runs in the last inning. Princeton got a good start early in the game, but had a bad sixth inning, when three infield errors helped Harvard get four runs and take the lead. However, Princeton tied the score in the eighth, and made three runs in the ninth. Harvard had the last bat, but could get only one runner home, the game ending with Princeton two runs to the good.

After the game the Princeton squad occupied boxes at the Tremont Theatre, to see Jesse Lynch Williams' ('92) new play, The Stolen Story, which has had such a successful run in Boston. The nine raised the roof with locomotives for Mr. Williams, Mr. Finney, the hero, and Miss Tennent, the heroine, and insisted upon a speech from the author, who reluctantly complied. After the play Mr. Williams took the team to the Green Room and introduced them to the cast of The Stolen Story.

At Soldiers' Field in the afternoon there was some heavy batting by both nines. Each made ten safe hits, including a home run by Dexter of Harvard and three-base hits by Harlan and Sides for Princeton. Byram had a little the better of Castle, the Harvard pitcher. Each gave one base on balls, but Byram scored nine strikeouts to Castle's four. Princeton had the better fielding record, also, making three errors to Harvard's six, but Princeton's errors all came in a bunch in the sixth inning and were expensive.

In the first inning, after Reid had flied out, Dillon hit safely. Then Harlan was safe at first on Leonard's error of his hard drive to third, Dillon going to second. Vaughn's grounder advanced Dillon and Harlan, and Sides brought them both home with a single. Princeton got one more in the fourth, when Sides scored on errors and McLean's long fly to outfield.

Harvard made her first run in this inning on Dexter's home-run hit to deep center field. Princeton added another run in the fifth. Dillon singled and came home on Harlan's three-bagger, making the score Princeton 4, Harvard 1. It looked like a fairly safe lead, but in the sixth inning three singles, three errors and a base on balls changed the aspect of the game,—Harvard 5, Princeton 4. But in the eighth Sides lined out a three-base hit, and Bard brought him home with a long fly, tying the score at 5-5. Then in the ninth Reid, Harlan and Vaughn scored for Princeton on a combination of hits and errors, making it Princeton 8, Harvard 5. And in the last half of the ninth Harvard could get in only one run.

MERCERSBURG ACADEMY 2, PRINCETON 1

After shutting out Andover and defeating Harvard, the Princeton nine was beaten by Mercersburg Academy, 2-1, at University Field, May 21st. The prep. school players were in fine form and played an errorless game, while Princeton showed the bad effects of the hard Cambridge trip and played carelessly. Several Princeton errors, combined with bad judgment, were largely responsible for Mercersburg's two runs in the sixth inning. Heyniger pitched a good game, striking out ten men and allowing only four hits, but his fielding wasn't so good.

PRINCETON 2, DARTMOUTH 1

It took eleven innings for Princeton to win from Dartmouth, 2-1, at University Field, May 24th. It was a very exciting game. Brilliant catches were made by the outfielders of both teams, but Princeton's infield made six errors, one of them being directly responsible for Dartmouth's run. Doyle and Skillen divided the pitching honors about evenly. Neither nine did much batting, but Princeton's hitting was just enough better to win out. Sides got two of Princeton's six hits, one a two-bagger and the other for three bases. For the first six innings neither side could score, but in the seventh, Sides' three-bagger and McLean's long fly to center field brought in the first run. Dartmouth tied the score in the ninth, when McDevitt sent out a smashing three-base hit, and scored on Reid's fumble of Skillen's grounder. There was nothing doing in the tenth, but in the latter half of the eleventh, after two were out, Dillon was hit by a pitched ball and stole second. Harlan was given his base on balls, and then Vaughn won the game with a timely hit to left field, bringing in Dillon.

TRACK

Princeton defeated Columbia 72-32 in their annual dual track meet, held on University Field, May 21st. The weather conditions were very favorable, but no especially good records were made, and the field events in particular were below the average. Princeton won eleven first places to Columbia's two, and also won six seconds and five thirds. Captain W. M. Armstrong '07 won easily in both the hurdle races, R. A. Gamble '09 won the 100-yards and 220-yards dashes, H. L. Powers '08 won the 440-yards, A. L. Swan '06 the one-mile, J. S. Kelly '08 the two-mile, N. B. Tooker '06 the high jump, L. H. Simons '08 the broad jump, H. L. Moore '06 the pole vault, and W. H. Daub '07 the hammer throw. Columbia's first places were in the 880-yards and the shot put.

The Class of '56 holds its semi-centennial reunion at this Commencement. It will dine on Monday night at the home of the Class Secretary, Gen. Alfred A. Woodhull, 46 Bayard Lane, and will hold its class meeting at ten o'clock, Tuesday morning, in Room 2, Dickinson Hall. Of seventy-six graduates twenty-seven are not known to have died, and the geographical range of the presumed survivors includes seventeen states and one foreign country. It is interesting to know that all but three reside in states that are touched by salt water or by the great lakes, that is, that they live on the great outer circle rather than in the interior; and that nine states south of Mason and Dixon's line are represented on its roll. One hundred and fourteen men were connected with the class at one period or another, but, as it was not the custom fifty years ago to keep in touch with those who withdrew, the most of these have disappeared from the class view.

A recent issue of The Westminster Gazette contains a long review of the play translated by Jack R. Crawford '01, Gorky's "The Bezsemenovs," and produced in London by the Mermaid Society. Concerning Mr. Crawford's work, The Gazette remarks:

The translator, Mr. J. R. Crawford, has done his work well, and has not attempted to reproduce dialect or colloquialisms. This probably means some loss of realism, but the method is a wise one, and there does not seem to have been any loss of humour or poetry in the process. The Mermaid Society, which is thus reappearing after its recent discouraging attempt to establish a repertory theatre, has, on the whole, never done anything better than this performance.

SATURDAY, JUNE 2, 1906

THIS issue of The Weekly is a 24-page number, — four pages more than we have been running most of the year, and eight pages more than we were printing a year ago. The increase in size is made this week to enable us to publish the full text of the notable addresses delivered by President Wilson '79 and Dean West '74, at the recent annual convention of the Western Association of Princeton Clubs. A more lucid presentation of what our University stands for in American education, a more inspiring expression of the ideals of Princeton, we have not had the good fortune to put before the alumni in many a day.

AMONG THE MANY USEFUL things said and done at the Western Association meeting, the one which perhaps received the most enthusiastic applause was the suggestion that as vacancies occur in the life membership of the Board of Trustees, at least some of those vacancies should be filled by trustees who have been elected by the direct vote of the alumni. When a prominent graduate made this suggestion, urging especially that Alumni Trustees be transferred to the two vacancies now existing in the life membership, the warm demonstration of approval that came from the large body of delegates present, representing all of the Princeton clubs west of the Alleghenies, left no doubt of the popularity of this sentiment among Princeton alumni. The loyalty of the graduates' official representatives in our governing board, their usefulness in contributing to legislation and administration, are well known; and their faithful and intelligent services have received from their constituents the unanimous endorsement of unvarying reelection.

ALL ALUMNI AND THEIR FRIENDS expecting to attend the Princeton Commencement will be glad to learn that an arrangement has been made with the Trunk Line Association for a one-and-one-third railroad fare for the round trip. The conditions are as follows: Tickets at full fare for the journey to Princeton may be secured within three days prior to and during the first three days of Commencement Week, which begins on June 8th and continues to June 13th. That is, tickets can be bought not earlier than June 5th and not later than June 10th. Upon purchasing a ticket a request should be made for a certificate (not a receipt) and upon arrival at Princeton this certificate must be presented to Mr. H. C. Bunn at the University Offices on the campus, and validated by Mr. Bunn and a special agent of the Trunk Line Association, who will be in the Curator's office. A fee of 25 cents will be collected for each certificate thus validated, to pay the expenses of the special agent. Upon presentation of the validated certificate at the railroad ticket office in Princeton, the holder may secure, up to June 16th, a continuous passage return ticket, by the route over which he came, for one-third of the regular rate.

THE TERRITORY COVERED by the Trunk Line Association is the State of New York east of but not including Buffalo; the State of Pennsylvania east of but not including Pittsburgh; the States of New Jersey, Delaware, and Maryland; the State of West Virginia east of but not including Parkersburg; and the District of Columbia. All of the other passenger associations of the country, covering practically the entire territory of the United States, have been requested to cooperate with the Trunk Line Association in granting the one-and-one-third fare for the round trip, and will doubtless allow the reduction if a sufficient number of alumni make application for their tickets immediately. Bear in mind that all who wish to take advantage of this reduction of fare must secure certificates at the starting point and have them properly validated at Princeton,

TICKETS FOR THE SECOND Yale-Princeton baseball game, to be played at Princeton next Saturday, will be mailed to applicants the first of next week. With fair weather the crowd promises to be another record-breaker, and the alumni pee-rade will doubtless surpass all previous efforts.

IT GIVES US UNUSUAL PLEASURE to announce that Karl Langlotz, the venerable composer of "Old Nassau," has accepted an invitation to attend the game next Saturday, as the guest of Wilford S. Conrow '01, the editor of the beautiful book on "Old Nassau" which was published last winter. A seat in the grandstand, just back of the home plate, has been reserved for Mr. Langlotz,—from which he will review the alumni pee-rade, and listen to the modern singing of the song which has endeared him to all Princeton men.

Asahigawa, Hokkaido, Japan,
April 30th, '06.

To The Princeton Alumni Weekly:

Princeton is not as far off as the geographers would persuade. One of its isothermal lines terminates in North Japan. I reached home on furlough in 1904 in time for the Commencement game and left just after the game of 1905—not that the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions makes Yale games polar to furloughs; I simply mention the historic fact.

To a returned missionary from the wilds of Yezo, albeit his return was via the Colloseum, that bright crowd on a bright day around the bright field was more than impressive, and that same crowd on their feet singing "Old Nassau" made the r. m. feel strange as to the roots of his remaining hair. When out on long tramps over lonely, snowy roads or under the hydraulic pressure of the modified cotton bales that constitute the bedding of country hostleries, the unreturned missionary in dreams by day and dreams by night bethought him oft of browsing around the campus old and new. The dream prophecies were fulfilled. There was enough left of the old college to keep the memory in lively exercise and to induce a nostalgic symptom.

It is a fair vision and we can forgive it for being a University.

There was, however, a fly in the ointment. One feature of the Pee-rade and general show gave discomfort not only to your r. m. but, I am confident, to two-thirds if not three-thirds of the spectators. I refer to the inscriptions on the transparencies. These were decidedly irreverent and without apology. Irreverence is a college sin, as witness some of the college songs, but I am protesting now against the (occasional) practice of returning graduates. We have no censorship to recommend except the censorship of second thought—we simply file our protest and plead that the line be drawn this side of irreverence, to the end that this and all features of the greatest show on earth may be a joy and not a dread.

GEORGE P. PIERSON '82.

The Addresses by President Wilson and Dean West, before the Western Association

THE full text of the speeches delivered by President Wilson '79 and Dean West '74, at the seventh annual convention of the Western Association of Princeton Clubs, held recently in Cleveland, is given below. Responding to the toast "Princeton University," President Wilson said:

Mr. Toastmaster and gentlemen: I am always at a loss to determine whether I would rather come at the beginning of a list of speakers, or at the end. At the beginning I have no speech to make but my own; at the end I may have gathered a number of suggestions from the speakers who have already spoken. You are at my mercy if I come first, because I can do nothing but deliver you my well-known speech.

I always feel, upon an occasion like this, that I am a responsible minister reporting to his constituents. And I think that Professor West will bear me out in saying that the report of the present year, now about concluded, is in every way very satisfactory. I do not know that it is particularly satisfactory to the eighty men who were dropped at the mid-year examinations; but I think that all of them are coming back next year, and will probably regard themselves as able to report progress at that time. I do know that the new spirit of study which has come upon Princeton would surprise some of you. (Laughter and applause.) About this table I recognize the faces of some who were ingenious in resisting the processes of learning—and if they have applied as much ingenuity to their business as they did then to their pleasure, I congratulate them upon their success. One of the undergraduates the other day said, in a tone of great condemnation, that Princeton was not the place it used to be—that men were actually talking about their studies at the clubs. He evidently regretted that as an invasion of the privileges of undergraduate life. But the beauty of the situation is that the studies of the University are becoming, I will not be so bold as to say they have already become, a part of the life of the University, and for my part I don't care a peppercorn for studies which do not constitute a part of the life of the men who are pursuing them. (Applause.) I believe that there has been in all our universities in years past too much of the spirit of schoolboys; not because the men there were not often really interested in their studies, but because the processes of the university kept them schoolboys in their attitude toward their studies; now at Princeton they are beginning to feel that they are coming into the privileges of manhood.

You have heard a great deal, I dare say, first and last, about the Preceptorial System, and most of it has been from the old point of view, namely, that it brought the teacher into personal and intimate contact with the pupil. But the point I would dwell upon is that the relationship is not so exclusively that of pupil and teacher as it used to be; that the new thing we are introducing is the independent pursuit of certain studies by men old enough to study for themselves and accorded the privilege in their studies of having the counsel of scholars older than themselves. It is not merely that they are being led, but that they are becoming what every university student ought to be, namely, reading men.

I have sometimes said to the men I knew best in the University that it did not make so very much difference with me what a man read, but it did not seem to me that any man had the title to call himself a university man who was not a reading man, who merely gathered the transitory impressions of the day in which he lived and did not put himself into the main currents of thought that flow out of the old centuries into the new, that constitute the pulse and life of the race. Men are in universities in order to come into contact with the vital forces that have always beat through the centuries in making civilization and in making thought (applause), and if they do not voluntarily put themselves into contact with those forces, those forces are of no avail to them. For what a man re-

The thing which has pleased me most in regard to the Preceptorial System is not only the splendid fact that the alumni have given us the money to conduct the system, but the significant fact that the undergraduates have welcomed the change and have felt that it enriched their own life. It would be a very petty life to live if we were merely schoolmasters; it would not interest me for twenty-four hours to be a taskmaster in respect to the studies of a lot of youngsters. Unless I can lead them to see the beauty of the things that have seemed beautiful to me, I have mistaken my profession. (Applause.) It is not the whip that makes men, but the lure of things that are worthy to be loved. (Applause.) And so we feel that we are entitled to be full of hope in regard to the increasing intellectual life of Princeton. For, gentlemen, I am covetous for Princeton of all the glory that there is (applause), and the chief glory of a university is always intellectual glory. The chief glory of a university is the leadership of the nation in the things that attach to the highest ambitions that nations can set themselves, those ideals which lift nations into the atmosphere of things that are permanent and do not fade from generation to generation. (Applause.) I do not see how any man can fail to perceive that scholarship, that education, in a country like ours, is a branch of statesmanship. It is a branch of that general work of enabling a great country to use its energies to the best advantage and to lift itself from generation to generation through stages of unbroken progress.

When I look about upon the generation in which we live, I, like every man who looks with thoughtful eyes upon it, am very much sobered by what I see; not disconcerted, not robbed of hope, not cooled even in my optimism, but nevertheless very much sobered by the seriousness of the task which confronts us.

Every age is compounded of things old and new, and the men of middle age are more involved in the things that are old than are the men in the generation that is coming on. And I always think of the change that must constantly be expected in a complex age as residing more with the younger generation than with the generation that is actually in charge of affairs. I see these young men drawing on all the complicated skeins that make up the pattern of our modern life, modifying that pattern, renewing the stuff where it is old, changing, confirming, doing all those things that draw on the forces of one age to be the forces of another. Because only they, when they are competent, can see the pattern as a whole. I believe that in spite of all the things which we deplore, and which bring the blood to our faces, there is a great deal that is splendid about the civilization of our day. The things that have been done in this country by way of its material advancement could not have been done without great gifts, without great powers, individual and corporate. There is a sense in which the individual in the modern industrial world is necessarily greater, if he be noticeable at all, than the individual of any other generation. For no man can do anything in this generation by and of himself. He must rule his fellow men and draw them into coöperation with himself, if he would accomplish anything. There is a touch of statesmanship about every piece of modern business, about every piece of modern engineering. It is as if all the powers of the world were organized and the captains of industry were making their way forward in the ranks to be generals in command of the forces of mankind. There is a great deal of planning and energy by which men have won their material supremacy — as well as the other side of the picture, which for the present I do not care to draw.

Now, young men coming with new forces into this complicated plot, have freer hands than other men in the generation, cleaner hands and freer hands than anybody else. And when one asks one's self what sort of education these men should have in order to carry what will be the young man's burden for many a day to come, it seems to me evident that the education they receive should not be such as to catch them at once in the web of the complicated interests which they must touch without prejudice and without favor. To put it in plainer, less abstract terms, if you merely train men for business, directly for business, they are immersed in the business, so far as their thoughts are concerned, throughout their education, and are committed to the prejudices of their occupations before even they enter upon them. (Applause.) You cannot train men for a particular business without filling their heads with the atmosphere of that business; and we want a great body of young men going into the active affairs of this world untouched by the atmosphere of any particular interest. We must in our processes of education, somewhere, put ourselves in a position to give young men a view of life which shall not be touched by the interests which will engross them when they seek to make their living. (Applause.)

For, gentlemen, there are many complications of human motive. When we speak of a man's making his living, we forget that he is also making somebody else's living in nine cases out of ten. Many a man would draw out of the business he is in, when he saw it was touching him with corruption, if it did not mean privation to a woman he loves, to children he loves; if it did not mean he was bringing upon others a kind of suffering and a sort of anxiety which he might be willing to bring upon himself singly, but is not willing to bring upon them. If men acted singly and each for himself, the aspect of affairs would be very different; and many a man is debased by some of the noblest impulses of his nature, his love for those who are not concerned in the things which have involved him. Many a man would be morally independent if he were in fact independent, but he is carrying the fortunes of others.

Look, therefore, how impossible it is for him to assess any problem in a disinterested fashion, if from the first he has been taught, in college as well as elsewhere, that the chief end of man is to make a living! If the chief end of man is to make a living, why, make a living any way you can. But if it ever has been shown to him in some quiet place where he has been withdrawn from the interests of the world, that the chief end of man is to keep his soul untouched from corrupt influences, and to see to it that his fellow men hear the truth from his lips, he will never get that out of his consciousness again. There will always come up within him with a great resurgence, some way or other, those lessons of his youth, and there will come a voice from the conscience which will arrest the very progress of a generation. But if you never teach him any ideal except the ideal of making a living, there will be no voice within him, he will know no other ideal.

I believe, therefore, that there must be some universities in this country which undertake to teach men the life that is in them, by teaching them the disinterested truths of pure science, by teaching them the truths of pure philosophy, and that literature which is the permanent voice and song of the human spirit, letting them know that they are not going a lonesome journey, but that generations of men behind them are crying them on to do better things than they could otherwise even attempt, and that generations beyond them are beckoning them on to a day of happier things. (Applause.) There must sound in the halls of the true university this eternal voice of the human race that can never be drowned as long as men remember what the race has hoped and purposed.

And so, gentlemen, the ideals that we talk about, the ideals that we try to translate into definite programmes of study, are not things which we can take or leave as we please, unless you believe that we can take or leave life itself as we please. There is no choice in the matter. I am not daunted by the prediction that we are going to be submerged in waves of materialism, because any man who has read never so superficially the history of the race knows that there are certain things that cannot be absolutely submerged or crushed. If there remain any little band of men keeping the true university spirit alive, that band will, after a while, seem to be all that there is of a great nation, so far as the historian is concerned.

It affords me very great satisfaction sometimes to see how certain public men are misjudged, and to know that quiet gentlemen, sitting in university chairs, will, when the noise of that generation is over, readjust the balance and tell future generations who were really the great men of that generation. (Applause.) We are the jury that sits last, and future generations will know from us alone who were the great men that were our contemporaries. The noisy talk of the day will pass with the day itself, and then that eternal voice of literature will continue to sound, that voice which is purged of passion, which at any rate seeks to speak the thing which is just and true and of good repute.

And so, our ambitions for a university which retains this spirit are not hopes so much as a definite confidence that certain things must come to pass. The best thing, to my thought, about what we call the Princeton spirit is the manliness and the unselfishness and the truthfulness that there is in it. Why should any of you love Princeton? Because it is a beautiful place? Because the trees are beautiful to look upon in the spring? Because the sward is green and the buildings are handsome? Are you in love with a physical image? Are you in love with a thing the life of which is all over for you, simply because you remember the good times you had in those pleasant places? Your love would die in you tomorrow, if you did not know that you got while in Princeton the thing which made you better citizens and better comrades and more honest and just men than if you hadn't gone there. That is what gives you the Princeton spirit, that is the reason that the Class of '41 is modern; that is the reason that there is no difference whatever in the conception which Mr. Voorhees has and the conception which members of the present senior class of Princeton University have. The life is different, but the personality of the place is the same; it is the same place you have all loved, and praise God it shall always remain the same place. (Applause.)

And so, gentlemen, I feel the spirit of all the ideals which we entertain for Princeton made greater, the effort made more confident to partake of such things as can never be conquered or lessened, when I come into contact with companies like this. I don't know that I do you any good in going from gathering to gathering, but I certainly know that in coming I drink of the wine of the spirit which is the life of the place which I am entrusted to govern. (Applause.) We all intend the same thing, we all share the same thoughts, we all feel the same impulse, and that is the ground of our confidence as to the future. (Prolonged applause and cheers.)

DEAN WEST ON "MAINTAINING THE STANDARDS"

Mr. President and fellow alumni: I hardly know how to begin, but shall try to remember how to stop, if I can. I believe that Princeton is at last coming into its intellectual and moral inheritance. I believe, as I have never believed since I have known Princeton, that it is entering on a new age, full of promise, full of energy, and I hope full of the resources needed to carry out the new promise. And I believe, with all the conviction I have on any subject in which I am most deeply interested, that the reason why Princeton is now entering upon a new age, full of promise, is that it is headed in the right direction, and that it is engaged in the one all-important business which alone justifies its existence, and that is in maintaining certain true standards of knowledge and conduct. (Applause.) It is not worth while to pay a dollar to support a college, to found a university, to get professors, if the object is merely to find out what the public want and to furnish that to them. The business of a university is to find out the things that are eternally true, and teach them, whether men believe or whether they do not. Otherwise you are in the ignoble position of keeping your ear to the ground to hear this, that, and the other passing rumor. You are converting what ought to be the one place where true standards are found and maintained into a place which furnishes and passes off on the public as right standards what one or another from time to time chooses to think is a standard; you are deserting truth for the passing fads and fancies. This is the way to corrupt the universities. People are spending lots and lots of money for one and another notion or bauble or gimcrack, apparently unconscious that all the time somewhere there is such a thing as the truth. Happy that man who finds it early in life. Happier yet is he who keeps it through his life; and happier above all universities is the one which knows what is true and holds to it unfalteringly through changing and shifting opinions steady as a rock in the storm. And when I think of that figure I am reminded of the old motto of William of Orange, with whose house in some way the colors of Princeton are associated, "Saevis tranquillus in undis," "Tranquil amid the wild waves." That is what Princeton is now and what she is going to be amid the weltering chaos of conflicting opinions about American college education. I honor President Wilson most for perceiving the right direction in which to head

our universities, for sailing by chart and compass, and not by mere drifting, for nailing his flag to the mast and for calling upon every son of Princeton to stand by us as we go ahead. (Applause.)

The last twenty years has seen so many opinions about American college education, that it would take an encyclopaedia to record them. We have had everything from a university where a student studied single studies tandem six weeks at a time to get through a four years' course, to the university where the student took what he pleased as he pleased and studied it if he pleased. In all that confusion Princeton has in the main stood firm. But at last the age of chaos as to what constitutes college education is passing, and the whole question of leadership in the next generation rests with that university which most clearly perceives the way to lead out of this anarchy into the new age of order. That way President Wilson has pursued. In the constitution of our new course of study, the new way of applying it, the new inspiration to students given by our new mode of personal instruction, we are getting the germ of the new Princeton. Somewhere in Paris there is a standard metre, carefully determined and put away, and by that single metre every metrical measurement is standardized. You may say that is not a perfect measure. It is not. It is only an approximately perfect measure. But it has this advantage. It is a definite measure. You know what it means, and you know what everything else means when it is measured by that. The standards of our knowledge are similar to that. There are some things that are true; there are some things that are more important truths than others; there are other truths that are first and primary, and prior to all others. And those first standard truths Princeton is going to put into the education of every man who comes to Princeton, whether any other college agrees with it or not. (Applause.)

The same is true as to standards of expression as well as of knowledge. There is a pedantry of expression that is false. But give a true standard of knowledge to a man and a true standard of expression,—and how much have you done for him! Then there are the standards of judgment. Huxley says, somewhere, that the highest scientific knowledge is nothing else and nothing less than highly trained common sense. What a lot of charlatanism there is in the educational world, how many false teachers there are, and how few the men of whom you can say, "He is a balanced, sane, sound man; he is a straight thinker; he has horse sense in his studies as well as in his conduct!"

The highest thing in Princeton is its standards of duty. As President Wilson has said, when you settle what the chief end of life is, you have settled everything else. There is not a view on education, whether true or false, that must not be tested by that. Tell me what your end of life is, and I will tell you what your theory of education will be. If the end of life is self, it is easy to work it out, but it is not worth working out. If it is something higher, if it is a sacred trust, if we are answerable at the end for the way this life has been lived, then the useful education, in the highest sense, is the one that is useful for the whole of life, and as a man shall look on it at the end. (Applause.) If I were asked what I thought our American colleges needed most today, what American young men needed most today, what professors and trustees and alumni and citizens and fathers and mothers needed most today, it is that true notion of what the end of their living is—whether it is selfish or whether it is something higher. And so I feel that the professor who has a disdain of teaching has a false and selfish end in view, and the professor who has a disdain of self-sacrifice for others has a false end in view, and the professor who seeks to exploit himself by some little vanity of special knowledge, has a false end in view. And the best professor is he whose ideal is that of our one Master, the Great Teacher. Our universities need a more Christian touch, a touch of love to our fellow men. When we read that story of the greatest of great teachers, how He put His hands on those to whom He spoke, how He loved them, how simply He taught,—His language as profound and clear as the blue heavens, and simple so that a child or a peasant might understand,—then how silly, how vain, how foolish, how unspeakably ridiculous would seem any affectation of knowledge in such a presence! And so, as Princeton was founded in Christian faith, and lives on it and will die if she does not keep it, I think that somewhere here is the standard that will lift the low, prune the excessive, make rich the poor, purify the base and sordid, and make Princeton what we believe she is going to become, a leader, because a worthy leader, of the highest and noblest form of higher Christian education the country has yet seen. (Great applause.)

Two Straight from Harvard

THE Princeton baseball team is leaving for New Haven as The Weekly goes to press, to play the first game with Yale this Saturday. About three thousand spectators saw Princeton make it two straight from Harvard, with a shut-out for the visitors, in the second Harvard-Princeton game on University Field last Saturday. On Decoration Day the Pennsylvania State College nine beat Princeton 1-0 on University Field.

PRINCETON 5, HARVARD 0

Having won the first Harvard game, 8-6, at Cambridge on May 19th, Princeton made it two straight from the Harvard nine by shutting them out, 5-0, in the second game, at University Field on May 26th. It was a fine day for baseball, and the outcome of the game was very satisfactory to the undergraduates and their friends, as well as to the good-sized crowd of enthusiastic alumni who took this occasion to come back to the old burg. It wasn't as close and exciting as several of the other games on University Field this year, but a Harvard game always has an interest of its own. After the first inning, when for a few minutes it looked as if Harvard would start off with several runs, the quiet contentment of the Princeton crowd in anticipation of a victory suffered no severe shocks. Princeton appeared to better advantage than Harvard in all departments of the game. But it was hardly a first-class exhibition of baseball by either nine, though there were some brilliant individual plays. In the second inning Simons, Harvard's centerfielder, made a spectacular running catch of a smashing drive by Harlan, and in the ninth inning Dillon cut off an apparently safe hit after a long run. Freshman Heyniger pitched for Princeton and made very good, allowing only two hits, scoring nine strike-outs and giving no bases on balls. All of Princeton's runs were made in the second and sixth innings, and were largely due to Harvard's errors and bad judgment, though six hits helped.

In the first inning, Leonard, the first batter, was hit by a pitched ball, and Captain Stephenson followed with a single, advancing Leonard to third, Stephenson reaching second. With runners on second and third and none out, scoring seemed inevitable, but Heyniger steadied down and the next three batters were retired without allowing a run.

Princeton made three runs in the second inning. Vaughn started it off with a single. Sides then bunted, but Harvey muffed the throw to second and both runners were safe. McLean's sacrifice advanced them each a base, and Bard knocked a grounder to Harvey, Vaughn scoring on the throw home. Cooney then sent another grounder to second. Harvey juggled the ball and threw home too late to catch Sides, Bard meantime going to third. Cooney stole second, and slid beyond the base,—perhaps intentionally; for while McCall was putting him out, Bard ambled home with the third run.

In the sixth Harlan and Vaughn reached second and first, respectively, on errors, and Sides' grounder advanced them each a base. A timely hit by McLean scored Harlan, but Vaughn was caught at the plate, McLean going to second. Bard hit safely, scoring McLean, but was put out trying to reach second. During the last five innings only one Harvard player got on the bases—Leonard making a clean two-base hit.

PENNSYLVANIA STATE 1, PRINCETON 0

Princeton was beaten by Pennsylvania State College, 1-0, on University Field, May 30th. State got no hits, but scored the only run of the game, in the fifth inning, on a combination of Princeton errors. The only safe hit of the game was a fine three-bagger by Bard in the seventh inning, with one out, but he was caught at the plate on Cooney's short grounder to McIlveen. Doyle, Heyniger and Bryam each pitched for three innings. Bryam struck out eight men in his three innings, scoring four strike-outs in the eighth, when Cooney let a third strike get by him.

One record was broken, Grant of Harvard and Jackson of Cornell doing the pole vault at 11 feet, 10 $\frac{3}{4}$  inches, breaking the record by a quarter of an inch. Princeton's point-winners were R. A. Gamble '09, third in the 100-yards dash; Captain W. M. Armstrong '07, fourth in the 220-yards hurdles; L. H. Simons '08, fourth in the broad jump; and

H. L. Moore '06 tied with Phillips of Cornell and Gilbert of Yale for third in the pole vault.

NO. 35

BACK of the Alumni Press, where The Weekly is printed, a huge tent is going up and certain mysterious boxes, bales and barrels are arriving for the great decennial reunion of the Class of '96; down on lower Nassau Street, on University Place and Dickinson Street, similar preparations are going on, under the direction of busy class reunion committeemen; out at the golf course, the club house has been repainted and resident members have vacated, to allow the Class of '86, its donors, to enjoy their twentieth-year reunion in undisturbed seclusion; in front of Old North, where the seniors have been singing to a standing-room-only campus these beautiful evenings, the elms are festooned with strings of electric lights; around the cannon the class-day amphitheatre is up; all of the reserved seats for the second Yale game have been taken and a crowd of ten thousand is expected; the students are celebrating the close of spring examinations, the new sophomores are marshalling for their annual pee-rade, alumni old and young are coming in on every train, and the 159th annual Commencement is on.

As PRESIDENT WILSON '79, we regret to announce, has been so unfortunate as to suffer a slight hemorrhage in the left eye, his physician has ordered him to rest. He will take part in the Commencement exercises, but will make no addresses. Fortunately, Dr. Henry van Dyke '73 has been able to secure a release from a previous engagement, and will preach the baccalaureate sermon.

PRESIDENT WILSON'S CLASS, which marked its quarter-century year by the gift of Seventy-Nine Hall, is celebrating its annual reunion this year by finishing and furnishing the Tower Room of that dormitory, at an expense of about $6,000.

The room will be turned over to President Wilson to be used as his office. The enthusiastic Class Secretary, William R. Wilder, announces that the class will sit together at the Yale game, adjourning to "a large and very enjoyable reunion in the Tower Room Saturday night, which will be conducted in our usual informal and unostentatious manner."

THE PRINCETON BATTLE MONUMENT bill carrying a government appropriation of $30,000 to assist in erecting the proposed monument, was passed by the House of Representatives on June 4th,—with an amendment, however, providing that the National Government shall not be responsible for the maintenance of the monument after it is built. This amendment will require concurrence on the part of the Senate, but as the upper house has already voted favorably for the bill, there is every reason to expect that the government appropriation, long deferred, will soon be available to assist in appropriately designating the site of the battle which marked the turning point in the American Revolution. The State of New Jersey having already appropriated $15,000 for this purpose, if the Senate now concurs in the amended bill, it will only remain for the citizens and friends of Princeton to contribute $15,000 to complete the full fund of $60,000 originally projected for building the monument.

V. LANSING COLLINS '92, the Reference Librarian, who spent last year in Europe, collecting material for his forthcoming Life of President Witherspoon, has edited "A Brief Narrative of the Ravages of the British and Hessians at Princeton in 1776-7," which is put forth by the University Library as an extra publication of the Princeton Historical Association. It is the first printing of a manuscript purchased by the Library a few years ago, at the sale of the collection of the late Gen. W. S. Stryker '58. This narrative, which was written in the spring of 1777, shortly after the Battle of Princeton, is valuable, as the editor points out, as "a first-hand account of the conditions prevailing in Princeton and its vicinity during the 'twenty-six days tyranny' of British and Hessian occupation; and its comments on the causes leading to the Revolution and on the methods adopted by Great Britain for suppressing it represent very accurately the views entertained by the majority of the intelligent agricultural population of New Jersey." The manuscript describes the battles of Trenton and Princeton, the writer having witnessed from his own door the beginning of the latter engagement. It has been supposed that the author of this interesting narrative was Thomas Olden, a Princeton Quaker, but Mr. Collins finds by internal evidence that Thomas Olden did not write it, though he has been unable to identify the author.

DEAN HENRY B. FINE '80 recently sailed for France to join his family, who have been spending the year on the other side. They will travel during the summer and return to Princeton in time for the opening of college in the fall. An unusually large number of the faculty will spend the summer in foreign study or travel. Dr. Patton and Prof. G. S. Patton '91 have gone to Bermuda; Prof. W. M. Daniels '88 has been granted a year's leave of absence, which he will spend with his family in Scotland; Prof. T. M. Parrott '88 joins his family in Brussels and will remain abroad till next February; Prof. H. F. Covington '92 and Mrs. Covington will spend the summer in England and Scotland; Prof. G. M. Priest '94 has gone to Germany for a year and will study at the University of Jena; Prof. Ulric Dahlgren '94 will experiment during the summer at the Carnegie Laboratory in the Dry Tortugas; Profs. E. M. Rankin, A. L. Jones, W. H. Sheldon, E. S. Corwin, H. R. Shipman and David Magie, Jr., '97, all preceptors, will spend their vacations in Europe, as also will Dr. M. P. Mason, instructor in philosophy; W. L. Upson '99, instructor in electrical engineering, will study physics and electricity in England for two or three years; Mr. W. H. Clemons, instructor in English, has been awarded the new Porter Ogden Jacobus Fellowship and will study at Oxford for a year; Dr. D. L. Thomas, instructor in English, goes to England and Germany for a year's advanced work; and Dr. P. H. Fogel, instructor in philosophy, will spend a year studying in Germany. Other members of the faculty who will not return next year are Dr. Frank Thilly, Stuart Professor of Psychology, who has accepted a chair at Cornell, and Dr. Enno Littmann, of the Oriental Department, who has been elected to a professorship in a German university.

The Spirit of Commencement

THE following poem by Charles Richard Williams '75 was read at the thirty-year reunion of his class last June, and later appeared in the '75 Tricentennial Record. Expressing so beautifully the spirit of Commencement and the reunion season, it has been reserved for publication in this number of The Weekly. Mr. Williams is the editor of the Indianapolis News.

ONCE more we meet in these familiar places
We knew so well in those brave days of old.
Hither we came with young and glowing faces,
Glad in the present; for the future bold;
And here four years through shade and sunshine weather,—
Ah, how the joys of those swift years survive!—
While we did tasks or played or read together,
We loved as brothers, we of '75.

'Tis hard to think back to that period golden,
And face ourselves as then we know we were;
Our memories play us false, and 'tis withholden,
As age comes on, to feel one's pulses stir
With that elation which is youth's chief rapture.
Ah, but 'twas good then just to be alive—
Its meed of joy from every hour to capture!
—How distant now those days of '75!

Methinks, as we recall them, not the learning
That marked their passage rises in the mind;
Not books, well-thumbed, nor lamps at midnight burning,
But all the other things with these combined—
The friendships won, the ampler vision, longing
Into life's deeper mysteries to dive,—
These are the things that through our souls are thronging,
As we think back to days of '75.

And Princeton always was a tender mother
In quickening all that's high and fine in youth;
Think, if you can, was ever any other
More steadfast in her love for utter Truth?
Faith in divine things, faith in man's endeavor—
Dull was the spirit that did not derive Something of these from Princeton, biding ever.
—We praise her largess, we of '75.

Oh, and the men that then were Princeton's glory,
McCosh, Atwater, Duffield, and the rest—
Or dead or living still—not transitory
The influence on our lives that they impressed
By their large views and their profound devotion
To the best things for which we mortals strive;—
To all of them we drink in deep emotion
As we recall their zeal for '75.

The good, great men of old—a goodly number—
Whose godly lives in teaching here were spent,
Who now in yonder peaceful churchyard slumber,
They, too, live in us; something has been lent
From all that have had part in Princeton's making
To all that have come after. Men contrive
Not for self only—those that follow taking Strength from their strength. Thus we of '75.

While in the past the roots of life deep sinking
From hidden sources sustenance distil,
And forebears, long forgot, still sway our thinking,
Our modes of speech, our hopes, our fears, our will;
Likewise from men, with whom we daily mingle,
Something we gain; for in life's busy hive
None lives unto himself, distinct and single;
So each affected all in '75.

And wheresoe'er in life have lain our courses
 We've taken Princeton with us. To each heart
 Her lore and wisdom have been added forces
 In every high endeavor. In the mart,
 Or pulpit, law, or physic, near or distant,
 We have heard Princeton calling, though the drive
 Of instant duty urged us, and persistent,
 "Like to an oak," have stood our '75.

No doubt our judges dozing o'er their docket,
 Or advocates perplexed on points of law,
 Have dreamed sometimes they heard the Princeton rocket,
 Or caught themselves intoning Old Nassau.
 Then from their vision faded all the present;
 Once more youth's hopes and ardors were alive,
 They trod again the Princeton pathways pleasant,
 With boon companions of old '75.

Ah, can it be that thirty years have fled
 Since 'round the cannon farewell songs we sang?
 But we return to feel our senses greeted
 With the same shouts and songs that then outrang;
 And to a Princeton greater than we left it,
 Larger in aims, more strenuous, more alive.
 —But the old spirit, thank God, is not bereft it,
 That fired our souls in days of '75.

We greet each other in the old, fond fashion;
 The names we knew and loved again we hear;
 We think of absent ones with soft compassion;
 Those that have gone we speak of with a tear;

And, for the while, forgetting age's guerdon
 Of whitening locks, old feelings we revive;
 The long years slip away—their joys, their burden—
 We're boys again, and this is '75.

What of the future? Doth the Princeton spirit
 With the old fervor through our pulses thrill?
 The call of Duty—are we quick to hear it
 And yield obeisance with unwavering will?
 This was the note of Princeton's admonition—
 Through right and truth alone men truly thrive;
 In action and endeavor comes fruition
 As men win upward. How of '75?

There's always pathos in the hour of parting,
Scheiden, a German proverb says, that Weh;
 The clasped hands tremble and the tears are starting Involuntary as good-bye we say
 In faltering accents and with voices broken,
 Though for a brave indifference we strive;
 But such emotion is a gracious token
 Of lasting brotherhood in '75.

Hail and farewell! O Princeton, radiant, splendid,
 Thou that hast kept the faith and triumphed, still
 Through the long future mayst thou be attended
 With ever greater glory, rising till,
 In unmatched grandeur, men shall see thee tower
 Truth's lordliest champion, evermore to strive To make life righteous as it grows in power!
 —That is the prayer for thee of '75.

The Committee of Fifty

ATTENTION is called to the sub-joined statement, which has been sent to Princeton alumni by the Committee of Fifty graduates appointed by the trustees to provide for the immediate necessities and the future development of the University. Through the efforts of its energetic Secretary, Harold G. Murray '93, the work of that committee is becoming well known to the alumni. But it cannot be too well known. Up to the present time a large portion of the fund raised by the committee has come from generous alumni living in the larger cities,—the centers of Princeton alumni enthusiasm. But fully one-half of our graduates live in the smaller towns and cities of the country, many of them being without the opportunity of affiliation with the alumni organizations. Obviously, it is impossible for the Secretary of the committee to visit all of these scattered alumni; but one of the best features of the plan of the Committee of Fifty is that it affords an opportunity for all Princeton men to participate in the good work of the development of their University. The Weekly bespeaks a careful reading of and a generous response to the following:

revealed, from time to time, that the imposing work of the whole University is conducted on the income of about $3,000,000 of invested funds, which is approximately $120,000 a year. The current expenses of the University, exclusive of the cost of the erection of new buildings, approximates $500,000, and the total revenue from the undergraduate body $236,000, including room rents; a deficiency in the neighborhood of $144,000 must therefore be met each year.

Under the old method of conducting the finances of the University, it was the custom to establish a fund for each expense incurred, and where there was not sufficient money in the treasury to meet the requirements a systematic canvass was made of the alumni body, with the result that an intolerable situation existed, for the Trustees of the University, for each dollar that was raised by this method came into the University pledged for a specific purpose, and the surplus of one fund could not be devoted to the deficit of another, and the Trustees were hampered in their work. Moreover, there was a tendency on the part of many who gave to contribute only to special funds, so that gradually certain departments of the University were making great progress while other, and frequently more necessary, departments suffered. The situation was as intolerable for the alumni, for they were being unceasingly canvassed for funds.

As a remedial measure, the Board of Trustees at its meeting held in December, 1904, authorized the President of the University to appoint a Committee of Fifty to provide for the immediate necessities and future development of the University. Mr. Cleveland H. Dodge '79 was appointed Chairman of this committee, and Mr. George W. Burleigh '92 was elected Secretary. At the end of the first year's work Mr. Burleigh resigned and was succeeded by Mr. H. G. Murray '93 of 52 Wall street. This committee has charge of the University Budget, as well as the endowment of the University, and its work therefore is two-fold; to raise the endowment of the University and to raise money for current expenses.

The Finance Committee of the University recently merged all of the different funds into the College Budget, making one general fund or budget. The Committee of Fifty will endeavor to have every dollar that is paid into the University through its friends, come unpledged, so that from this common fund the Trustees may apportion the money for the various needs of the University unhampered and as they deem fit.

It is the purpose of the Committee of Fifty to make a thorough canvass of each alumnus and ask him to give each year to the needs of the University as much as he feels he can afford. Subscribing in this way will make an alumnus immune from further solicitation so far as the University is concerned. What a man's class may ask of him or his club is a matter over which the Committee of Fifty has no jurisdiction, as they represent the Trustees, but that the alumnus may not be indiscriminately and everlastingly approached for funds this plan has been presented. Its advantage, when understood, not only to the Trustees but to the alumni body as well, is at once apparent.

There are three ways in which the Committee of Fifty is raising funds. The first, known as the endowment fund, in which the subscriber agrees to pay a principal sum to the University at the expiration of a given period and to pay 5 per cent. interest on the amount of his subscription annually to the college until the principal is paid in. This is the most desirable form in which to give, as the money is invested at 5 per cent. as soon as subscribed. The principal, when it is paid in, goes to swell the endowment of the University, the interest, the budget.

The second form, and the one most frequently used, is known as the term form, where the subscriber agrees to pay a certain sum each year to the University, either for a definite number of years or until "further notice."

The third form is known as the annual, and consists of a one-time subscription.

The Committee of Fifty, after one year's work, has succeeded in raising over $1,000,000, with an income from all three forms of subscription in the neighborhood of $100,000. We have $500,000 pledged in the endowment form and $400,000 invested in the building of McCosh Hall.

The additional expense of $100,000 incurred by the establishment of the Preceptorial System has been, and will be, the chief care of the Committee. The annual income at present is not sufficient to pay the expenses of this system, but in the near future it will undoubtedly be sufficient, and the Committee may look toward the investing of money for endowment.

Will you not aid the Committee in its work by filling out one of the blanks on the page opposite, signing and forwarding it to the Secretary. If each alumnus will subscribe to this fund a yearly sum, the Trustees will be enabled to carry out the work already commenced of developing the campus and defraying the expense of the Preceptorial System, the installation of which is the best thing that has been done for Princeton in the last fifty years. Will you not help?

H. G. MURRAY, Secretary,
52 Wall street, New York City.

WHETHER there is to be a third Yale-Princeton baseball game at New York a week from this date, depends on the outcome of the second game at University Field this Saturday, which will be known to most of the readers of The Weekly by the time this reaches them. At this writing all that can be said is that Captain Reid's young team made a good beginning by winning the first game of the series, 3-2, at New Haven on June 2nd. It wasn't particularly good baseball, but the game was exciting enough all the way through. Good fielding by Princeton was offset by mediocre batting. On the other hand, Yale did some fair batting, but was erratic in the field, and showed poor judgment in base-running. The pitching was scarcely up to championship standard. Both Parsons for Yale and Byram for Princeton were unsteady. In the fifth inning H. Jones succeeded Parsons, and in the seventh Byram gave way to Doyle. Yale's eight hits were equally divided between Byram and Doyle. During the game Princeton reached first six times on balls; Yale drew three passes. Also there were several wild pitches and passed balls, and two batters were hit by pitcher Parsons.

The day was just right for baseball, and a crowd of nearly seven thousand spectators saw the game. It was very largely a Yale crowd, of course, so that Princeton's victory was all the more creditable.

But it was anybody's game until the very end. Each nine scored one run in the first inning, Yale got another in the second, and Princeton made it 2-2 in the fourth. Princeton forged ahead in the seventh, by one run, which proved to be the winner. Yale had an opportunity to tie the score in the eighth, but poor base-running enabled Cooney to catch Kinney at the home plate when he might have scored. Harlan played the best game for Princeton, getting two of the four safe hits, one of them a two-bagger, and making several difficult catches in left field.

In the first inning Reid was hit by pitcher Parsons, stole second, and went to third on a passed ball. Dillon and Harlan both went out on foul flies, but Vaughn was given his base on balls. Chapin threw to second to catch Vaughn, Camp missed the throw, and Reid scored the first run. For Yale, O'Brien started off with a clean single, went to second on Huiskamp's out at first, and scored on a passed ball. Princeton 1, Yale 1.

Yale got another run in the second, when T. Jones reached first on a scratch hit, was advanced to second on Church's out, went to third on a passed ball, and scored on Smith's single to center field. Princeton 1, Yale 2.

There was nothing doing in the third, but Princeton evened things up in the fourth. McLean was given a base on balls, and reached second on Bard's out at first. Cooney also waited for bad balls and Byram was safe on O'Brien's error, filling the bases. Parsons made a wild pitch, allowing McLean to score, but Cooney was caught at the plate, Byram going to third. Reid was hit by a pitched ball and stole second. It was a fine opportunity for a hit, but Church caught Dillon's hard drive to left field, making the third out. Princeton 2, Yale 2.

Parsons was then succeeded in the box by H. Jones, who proved more reliable and allowed Princeton only one more safe hit. But Princeton scored the winning run in the seventh inning, when Dillon was given a base on balls, went to second on a wild pitch, and scored on Harlan's clean single. Princeton 3, Yale 2. Both nines had men on bases in nearly every inning, and there were several occasions when a little timely hitting would have meant runs.

PRINCETON 3, WILLIAMS 0

By timely hitting in the fifth and sixth innings, Princeton defeated the Williams nine, 3-0, at University Field on June 6th. Heyniger pitched for Princeton for the first four innings without allowing Williams a hit, and Byram, who pitched the rest of the game, allowed only one—a safe bunt. There was no scoring until the fifth inning. After Sides had struck out, McLean sent a clean single to center field. Bard went out on a high fly, but Cooney was safe when Wadsworth juggled his hard drive to second. Then Byram singled to left, filling the bases, and Reid followed with another timely hit to right, bringing in McLean and Cooney. In the sixth Harlan opened with a smashing three-bagger to deep center field, and scored on Vaughn's clean single to left.

In the seventh inning Cooney had the thumb of his right hand fractured by a foul tip. This will no doubt keep him out of the game for the rest of the season. L. Doyle, the substitute catcher, took Cooney's place and will probably catch in the remaining games.

THOMAS COLMAN MONTGOMERY '38

Thomas Colman Montgomery '38 died at Rochester, N. Y., on May 30th. He had been a resident of Rochester all his life, and was a lawyer of prominence in that city.

ALEXANDER NELSON EASTON '96

The Class of '96 learns with sincere sorrow of the death of their classmate Alexander Nelson Easton, at the New York Hospital, May 21st, 1906, in the thirty-second year of his age.

He was born at Morristown, N. J., but moved to Summit, N. J., when still a child, with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson S. Easton.

He received his early education at the Bordentown Military Institute, after which he studied four years at Princeton University, taking the full academic course, and graduating in June, 1896.

While making few intimacies, he possessed those qualities which inevitably win a wide circle of friends. He was admired for his keenness of intellect, his versatility and quickness of wit, he was beloved for his sterling character, his hatred of sham, and for his geniality and abounding good humor, which even the years of acute suffering, during his last illness, could not destroy. It was only natural, therefore, that he should be chosen by his class as their Washington's Birthday Orator, in senior year.

Since graduation he has been constantly engaged in newspaper work, having served as reporter on four of the New York dailies.

Since 1901 he has been in charge of the Real Estate Department of the New York Herald, in which he was regarded as an expert.

On June 29th, 1897, he was married to Miss Margaret Pauline Farrell of Brooklyn.

To her and to the other members of his family, we extend our heartfelt sympathy in their great sorrow, humbly beseeching Him whose wisdom is unfailing and whose love is measureless, that He may grant unto them "a garland for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning and the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness."

FOR the first time in the annals of intercollegiate baseball, Princeton has the distinction of having taken two straight victories from both Harvard and Yale, and of winning before Commencement a clean title to the intercollegiate baseball championship. For this felicitous conclusion of an eminently successful season, the heartiest thanks and congratulations of the alumni are due to Captain Samuel J. Reid, Jr., '06 and his plucky colleagues, and to Wallace B. Cosgrave '04, the brilliant strategist behind the fighting men, who as an undergraduate was a member of three victorious Princeton nines, and had the unique distinction of having been in every inning of every game played by Princeton during the four years of his college course.

AT THE COMMENCEMENT MEETING of the Board of Trustees, the two existing vacancies in the life membership of the board were filled by the election of Henry B. Thompson '77, of Greenville, Del., and Joseph B. Shea '85, of Pittsburgh. These elections give to the alumni representation in the life membership of the board in two strong Princeton sections which were not previously thus represented. Mr. Thompson, as is well known, has been prominent in advancing clean politics in a state where good citizenship has been much needed in the public service; Mr. Shea has served as the President of the Princeton Club of Western Pennsylvania and has long been a leader in good works for his Alma Mater in that center of Princeton loyalty.

AT THIS MEETING OF THE BOARD, gifts to the amount of $78,000 were announced, including $31,000 contributed by the Ladies' Auxiliary Committee toward the endowment of the Isabella McCosh Infirmary. Prof. George Macloskie, of the Department of Biology, retired after thirty-two years of active service and was elected professor-emeritus. Edward P. Adams was appointed Assistant Professor of Physics, and the following additions were made to the preceptorial staff: Art and Archaeology, Charles Rufus Morey (two years), at present instructor in classics; English, Morris W. Croll (three years) and Louis W. Miles (three years), at present instructors in English; History and Politics, William S. Myers (one year), of the Country School for Boys, Baltimore; Edgar Dawson (one year), professor at Delaware College; Henry R. Spencer (two years), instructor in the Ohio State University; and W. M. Adriance (one year), instructor in debating at Yale; Modern Languages, V. Lansing Collins '92 (four years), at present the Reference Librarian; Jacob N. Beam '96 (three years), at present instructor in German. Prof. T. M. Parrott '88 was granted a leave of absence for next term.

PRESIDENT WILSON '79, who, owing to the strain of his arduous duties, has been advised by his physician to take a well-earned rest, did not actively participate in the Commencement exercises, though he remained in Princeton. At the conclusion of an unusually brilliant baccalaureate sermon, Dr. Henry van Dyke '73 read to the graduating class the following message from the President:

Gentlemen of the Graduating Class:

I cannot tell you with how deep and sincere regret I find myself unable to address to you in person the words of affectionate farewell I have had it in my heart to speak to you to-day. I have felt a peculiarly intimate interest in your class, a special solicitude for its welfare. You will always be associated in my mind with the four years during which some of the most significant things I had planned and hoped for in the life of the University took shape and came to a happy realization. You have been patient under change, intelligent and loyal in all that it fell to you to do as the face of our life was altered,—in all things true sons of a great University springing forward to new days of achievement. If the things done in Princeton during these years have not touched your thought quite as deeply as they have touched ours, I am sure that they have touched your feeling for the place as deeply and have made you as vividly conscious as we are of its manifest destiny among American universities. I feel that in letting you go we are saying good-bye to trusted junior partners in a deep and far-reaching business whose issues are to make Princeton greater and greater with every year of her life.

In parting with you we do not think chiefly of ourselves, but of you. Your circle is now to be broken; but not in spirit. Our thoughts should not be wholly sad in the parting. Wherever we go we shall be bound together. The imperishable spirit of what we have done and enjoyed here goes with us. And this solemn hour, this sacred place remind us of what is deepest and most imperishable in what we have been as comrades and as lovers of good books and good men since we came to this place. The love of God and of his truth has always been our chief fountain of life in Princeton. May you always drink of it, deeper and deeper draughts as the years go by, for all other fountains shall dry up; and may God in all things guide and bless and keep you. Our good-bye is not a final word of parting. It is an affectionate greeting at a turning of the way. We shall ever be comrades in all true things and all worthy aspirations, lifted by the same spirit through all toils and all achievement.

THE WINING OF THE BASEBALL CHAMPIONSHIP was an auspicious beginning for the 159th Commencement week, which, though perhaps not as largely attended and not as noisy as some former Commencements, was most successful. All of the classes holding reunions report a very enjoyable time. There certainly was a noticeable diminution of those features which have brought just criticism upon the reunions of the younger classes,—though there is still room for improvement, as was indicated by the adoption by at least one of the older classes, of resolutions condemning certain forms of free entertainment with which most of us are sufficiently well acquainted.

THE ALUMNI PEE-RADE on Saturday afternoon was quite as spectacular as usual, the bands, banners, transparencies, uniforms and vaudeville "features" encircling University Field with color and noise as loud as a club hat-band. The distinguished Class of '56, which was celebrating its half-century anniversary, led the procession; '76 contributed an unusually large section for a thirty-year class, '81, '86 and '91 each had about fifty members in line, and then came the stunts: '94, which holds a reunion every year, led off with two horny-handed sons of toil driving a mule to market; '96, with Zimmermann's Band, had 140 odd members in duck uniforms; '99 exhibited the Sacred Egg of the late lamented Sacred Bird; '00 followed its Tiger with human anatomy, very ferocious; '01, 150 strong, all in Mexican costumes, very effective, made the hit of the pee-rade with a troupe of trained lions, in charge of Mme. Claire Hellyot, alias Bob Whiting; '03 and '05, dressed as jackeys, contributed an eighth of a mile of white and blue, with the guns of the Good Ship '05, a cruiser on wheels, constantly in action; and the graduating class, whirling Japanese parasols, strung out the procession indefinitely. As the sections of the pee-rade passed the grandstand, rousing cheers were given for Karl Langlotz, the composer of Old Nassau, who enjoyed the fun and the game, and heard the alumni and students sing his song with the spirit that inspired the team to win out in the last half of the ninth inning. After the game the scene on the field pauperized description, and on Tuesday night there was a championship fire around the old Cannon, for the first time during a Princeton Commencement.

AT THE ALUMNI LUNCHEON on Tuesday Mr. Langlotz, who sat at the speakers' table, received another ovation, and heard 750 Princeton men join in singing Old Nassau. Dr. M. W. Jacobus '77 presided, and Dr. George B. Stewart '76 presented the following message to President Wilson, which was adopted with a rising vote and enthusiastic cheers: "We, the alumni of Princeton University, assembled at the 159th Commencement, beg to express our great joy that our prayer for your speedy and complete recovery is being answered, and we assure you of our unceasing desires for your good health and the long continuance of your valued service to our Alma Mater." The speakers at the luncheon were Dr. Arthur Everett Shipley of Cambridge University, England, whose interesting address is printed on another page; Gen. Alfred A. Woodhull '56, the Rev. Dr. James M. Ludlow '61, the Hon. C. V. D. Joline '71, W. J. Henderson '76, the Rev. David Wills '81, the Hon. Joseph H. Gaines '86, and the Rev. John J. Moment '96.

THE CLASS OF '76 celebrated its thirtieth year with about fifty members back, the programme including a class prayer meeting at the headquarters on University Place, Sunday night. During the reunion Robert W. Patterson '76 of Pittsburgh added to his gifts to the University Library a valuable collection of books, including bindings by Roger Payne, Derome, DeSauty, Riviere and Smeers, volumes of emblems and rare copper-plate illustrations, and rare book-plates, such as those of Horace Walpole, Croom, Syston Park, etc. The books are chiefly editions of the classics, and include Pine's Horace (bound by Riviere), first issue; the Elzevir Horace, 1629; the Pickering Horace, 1826; the Didot Horace, 1855, (bound by Smeers); Vaenius' Emblems illustrating Horace, 1682; Marchetti's Lucretius, 1754; the Elzevir Terence, 1685; Phaedrus' Fables, 1667; Juvenal, Paris, 1754 (bound by Derome); Juvenal and Persius translated by Dryden (Syston Park copy, once the property of Mitford and alleged to be bound by Roger Payne); Banier's Ovid, 1767-71, first edition, with very brilliant impressions; Martyn's Virgil with colored plates (only 60 copies printed); Virgil, Dulau, 1800; and Goldsmith's Vicar of Wakefield, with extra illustrations, in a remarkably handsome binding by DeSauty.

THE TWENTY-FIFTH REUNION of the Class of '81 brought back between forty and fifty men. Thirty-eight were in line for the pee-rade to the Saturday game, preceded by the Rittenhouse Military Band of twenty pieces. On Sunday a luncheon was given to the class by its Treasurer, Alexander M. Hudnut, at his home on Library Place; and on Monday a tea was given by the Vice-President, Henry G. Duffield, and Mrs. Duffield, where the families of members of the class had an opportunity of meeting. The tea was followed by a class meeting at headquarters, where the full board of officers was reelected by acclamation, with Charles A. Munn as President, Edwin Asa Dix as Secretary, and the Vice-President and Treasurer as above named. It was voted to raise a fund of $25,000 for a Class Memorial entry in the new alumni dormitory, and over $20,000 was announced as pledged. Following the meeting came the class dinner at the Princeton Inn. The entire reunion proved one of the most successful ever held by the class.

THE CLASS OF '86 celebrated its twentieth anniversary with fifty-six men back, their headquarters being the Golf Club-house, of which they are the donors. No description of their reunion that we could give would be a higher compliment than the following letter which has come in from an alumnus who visited them:

"If you can get Fred Evans '86 to give you the facts about their reunion, the way it was handled from beginning to end, and particularly the character of the speeches at their class dinner Monday night, I believe that you could set up a standard for all class reunions that would make them more enjoyable to all concerned, and at the same time wipe out any just criticism of these affairs. I do not believe a more timely service could be rendered to Princeton today than to spread before all the alumni, particularly the class secretaries, the work which '86 did to give what all members of the class seemed to unite in saying was the most enjoyable reunion they ever had. Everyone had a bully good time, principally for the reason that there was practically no excess. And when one thinks of some fifty men sitting down at seven o'clock Monday evening and talking to one another until three o'clock in the morning, starting off with one of them telling the story of the rescue mission work in the slums of New York, and all the other speeches living right up to this standard, with endless fun of the best type mixed in with it, it makes a fellow mighty proud that he is a Princeton man. Then you probably know about their golf and tennis matches and all those things. The very fact that their headquarters were far removed from the campus meant that only men that wanted to see them came out there, and they were not bothered by the constant influx of uninvited and undesired guests. Altogether I think the '86 reunion, from what I hear, is typical of what our class reunions can and should be made."

THE DECENNIAL CLASS, '96, had five days of celebrating, with about one hundred and fifty members back, all told. Some of the features were a memorial service for the deceased members, on Sunday afternoon in Marquand Chapel, which was conducted by the Rev. John J. Moment, with an address by the Rev. M. C. Morgan, prayer by the Rev. R. R. Knight, and scripture reading by the Rev. F. S. Smithers; faculty night, in the tent, at which the President of the class, A. G. Milbank, presided, and speeches were made by Dean West '74, Prof. Scott '77, Prof. Hibben '82, John D. Davis '72, of the Alumni Trustees, Scott Bullitt '98, and John D. Kilpatrick '96. On Tuesday night the class had a "Dutch supper" in the tent, which proved a very interesting experience meeting. Another feature, which all the class agreed was worth the price, though only one of them paid for it, was a trial of that member, in the Mayor's court, on the charge of exceeding the automobile speed limit. The case for the prosecution was presented by P. A. V. van Doren '79 in his official capacity as Borough Attorney, and the defendant was ably represented by two celebrated reunion entertainers,—Scott Bullitt '98 and McCready Sykes '94. Prominent among the witnesses were Prof. W. B. Harris '86 and Prof. A. T. Ormond '77, the latter's testimony being somewhat weakened by the admission that for all he knew the "automobile might have been No. 23." Another feature of this class reunion was John Prentiss Poe, Ninety-Fi . . x.

Princeton, June 9th, 1906.

The Princeton Alumni Weekly,

Dear Sir: Will the class soothsayers get out their pens and begin to figure? Can any class beat the record of 'Ninety-Six as the Class of Good Fortune for Princeton?

'Ninety-Six has had five reunions—in 1897, 1899, 1901, 1903, and 1906. Princeton has won the Commencement game in every one of these years, and better yet, has followed that by winning the intercollegiate baseball championship.

On the occasion of 'Ninety-Six's best reunion, the Decennial, Fortune has smiled her sweetest. In 1906, for the first time in the history of the college, Princeton has proved her clear title to the intercollegiate championship before Commencement Day.

Will 1903 keep up their good work? They have made as good a start.

C. B. BOSTWICK '96,

Class Secretary.

P. S. In memory of the sadder years of 1898, 1902, 1905 (and even 1900, when we split even with Harvard), has the Hoodoo Reunion Class, '95, anything to say?

THE GRATIFYING NEWS that the Princeton Battle Monument Bill has been passed by the Senate and signed by the President, added to the enjoyment of the Commencement season.

PRINCETON'S 160TH ACADEMIC YEAR begins on Sept. 19th. This being the final issue of the present volume of The Weekly, the next number will appear the week following the opening in the autumn.

The 159th Annual Commencement

ALEXANDER Hall was full to the roof on Commencement Day, June 13th, when the academic procession entered, with Prof. William Libbey '77 as marshal and Ex-President Cleveland and Prof. John Grier Hibben '82 at its head. Following the trustees came the candidates for honorary degrees, namely, the Hon. Elihu Root, Secretary of State of the United States; General Horace Porter, late Ambassador of the United States to France; the Rev. Dr. William Douglas Mackenzie, President of Hartford Theological Seminary; the Rev. Dr. James Gore King McClure, President of McCormick Theological Seminary; Prof. Arthur Everett Shipley of Cambridge University, England; Mr. William Frederick Allen of New York, and Samuel Louis Phillips '58 of Washington, D. C.

In the absence of President Wilson and Dean Fine, Prof. Hibben presided, and conferred the degrees by authority of the Board of Trustees. Altogether, 314 degrees were distributed, including seven honorary, sixty-six Masters of Arts, one Master of Science, five Doctors of Philosophy, 143 Bachelors of Arts, twenty-five Bachelors of Literature, thirteenth Bachelors of Science, twenty-nine Civil Engineers, and four Electrical Engineers. Following the Latin Salutatory by the first honor man of the class, William Woodhull Hay of New York (who was applauded vehemently and at the proper junctures), Charles W. McAlpin '88, Secretary of the University, announced the awards of prizes and fellowships, and the degrees in course. The Master of Arts degree was conferred upon the following Princeton alumni: J. W. Park '95, J. B. Brown '00, G. M. Russell '01, C. B. Hardman '02, C. F. Reed '02, J. C. Finney '03, E. A. Odell '03, F. L. McLeod '04, G. M. Conwell '05, D. A. Clark, A. B. '04, and David D. Ranken, B. S. '04. The degree of Civil Engineer was conferred upon John S. Barnes as of the Class of '05.

HONORARY DEGREES

Six of the candidates for honorary degrees were presented by Dean Andrew F. West '74, as follows:

For the degree of Master of Arts, Samuel Louis Phillips of the Class of 1858, lawyer of distinction, writer of standard legal treatises, developer of underground railway construction, railway administrator, author in the fields of fiction and philosophy.

For the degree of Master of Science, William Frederick Allen, editor, metrologist, authority on the problems of railway operation, secretary of the American Railway Association for the last twenty-eight years, member of European and American learned societies, delegate of the United States to the International Meridian Conference of 1884 and the International Railway Congress of 1900, deviser and chief promoter of the plan of railway standard time, which is gradually overspreading the world, until there is now hardly an hour-meridian east or west of Greenwich which is not the standard for the civilized countries which it crosses.

For the degree of Doctor of Science, Arthur Everett Shipley, Tutor and Fellow of Christ College and Lecturer on Invertebrate Zoölogy in the University of Cambridge, author of valuable biological books and memoirs, an especial authority on the lower parasitic organisms, a scientific writer of felicitous style, delegate of the British Government to investigate the causes of animal and plant diseases in the British colonies, Fellow of the Royal Society of London, a hospitable friend to foreign scholars, a wise and faithful adviser in the Council of his ancient and illustrious University.

For the degree of Doctor of Laws, William Douglas Mackenzie, President and Professor of Theology in the Hartford Theological Seminary; of Scotch missionary blood, born in South Africa, son of John Mackenzie, the intimate counsellor of Cecil Rhodes in forming British South Africa; educated in the Universities of Edinburgh and Göttingen, author in the fields of ethics and theology, a constructive thinker of clear charm, a winning personal leader of young men.

For the degree of Doctor of Laws, Horace Porter, a graduate of West Point, who served his country throughout the Civil War, rising through every commissioned grade from the lowest to the rank of brigadier-general, receiving the Congressional medal for personal bravery on the battlefield; writer on military topics, deviser and securer of important permanent memorials of American patriotism; decorated by the French Republic with the Grand Cross of the Legion of Honor, and for eight years as Ambassador to France honorably maintaining the interests of his country and the cause of international friendship.

For the degree of Doctor of Laws, Elihu Root, born in a little college town, the son of a notable professor, well schooled in the clear and strict classical course of the old-fashioned American college, his career, crowded with achievement in the theatre of national affairs, has illustrated alike the soundness of his training and the brilliancy of his powers. Relinquishing the highly valuable practice of a lawyer of the very first rank, twice as Secretary of War and now as Secretary of State, he has revealed his dutiful obedience to the belief that the claims of public service are higher than any private interests.

For the degree of Doctor of Divinity, Prof. Paul van Dyke '81 presented the Rev. J. G. K. McClure, President of the McCormick Theological Seminary of Chicago, once Acting President of Lake Forest University and now a trustee of that institution.

Following the ceremony of conferring honorary degrees, Prof. Hibben summarized the gifts of the past year, and then introduced the Valedictorian, Julian Bonar Beaty of South Carolina. The exercises were concluded with prayer and the benediction by the Rev. Dr. M. W. Jacobus '77 of the trustees, cheers for President Wilson and for Princeton, and the singing of Old Nassau.

DR. SHIPLEY'S ADDRESS

At the alumni luncheon on Tuesday, Arthur Everett Shipley of Cambridge University, England, who received the honorary degree of Doctor of Science at this Commencement, made the following interesting address:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen:

There is a humane and kindly rule at most universities which forbids the recipient of honorary degrees returning thanks at the graduation ceremony for the honor conferred upon him. I say some universities, because a few years ago the most learned ruler in Europe, the King of Sweden, was clearly distressed after receiving a degree at Cambridge, because he was not permitted to return thanks to the University in a Latin oration which he had carefully prepared. All the afternoon that unhappy monarch wandered around suffering from a suppressed speech, and only found relief when the toast list began after dinner.

I feel, however, I may on this occasion express my thanks, deeply if but briefly. The offer of a degree at Princeton is the greatest honor that I have ever received. If it had been possible to increase the pleasure that the offer gave me, it was hearing the news of last Saturday's victory in the baseball field.

The honor has been a most peculiar gratification to me, since I have known and loved Princeton for many years. As a student at Cambridge I had known Professor Osborn and Professor Scott, in 1887 I first came to Princeton and learnt to know Mr. Pynce. . . . There has been what perhaps one may call a kind of "apostolic succession" between my college on the banks of the Cam and yours—but mine tomorrow—in New Jersey.

Within the last nineteen years I have paid some four or five visits to Princeton and have each time left it as Queen Sheba left Solomon, with no "more spirit in me." The extraordinary increase not only in the number but in the beauty of the buildings, the great increase in the amenity of the place is nothing short of astounding. You have here amongst your recent additions, buildings in beauty second to none that I know of in existing universities, and I feel confident I am right when I assure you, you have the noblest entrance to a university, the stateliest portal from the outer world of any university extant. The time has changed since President Aaron Burr wrote "We do everything in the plainest manner."

A few months ago I read in a Visitor's Book in a foreign hotel the following entry made under his name by a patriotic and, possibly, home-sick fellow-countryman, "England with all thy faults I love thee well." Under this a still more patriotic, possible a still more home-sick, Englishman had written "Faults! What are her faults? Except that Cookson Lane in Norwich wants widening, I know of none." Like my second countryman and in reference to Princeton, I know of but one fault and that is the absence of a worthy home in which to house your magnificent collection of animal preparations, both fossil and recent. Professor Scott has brought together from Patagonia and elsewhere collections which are the admiration and envy of all who understand their value throughout the scientific world. Professor McClure has an assemblage of zoological specimens of the highest technical and artistic finish. Both these collections are stored away in basements and cellars. Surely this is a little overdoing the old maxim "Ars est celare artem." When next I visit Princeton—and it cannot be too soon—I shall hope to see a noble museum worthy not only of the collections just referred to but of the men who made them.

One other hope may I express. I do it in no feeling of antagonism to the magnificent foundations of your great cities and of our great cities. They can and do give much, but many of the things which to my mind go to make a university training are denied them. The mutual help, the living together at all hours of the day and in a college we must add at all hours of the night, the absence of counter attractions tending to concentrate all our faculties on our greatly loved universities, can only exist in a full measure where the university is the dominant factor in a community. Do not let Princeton be turned into a residential suburb. Put a broad belt of green between you and the outer world. Of only such situations as in my old university, situated in a small Eastern County Town, or in my new university, in a large New Jersey borough, can we truly say, in the words of your own graceful poet:

"The World is far away,
The fever and the fret,
And all that makes the heart grow gray."

The Baseball Championship

IN ONE of the most thrilling of the many sensational Yale-Princeton finishes, Captain Reid's nine snatched victory from apparently sure defeat, in the Commencement game at University Field on June 9th, winning by the score of 3-2, and gaining a clear title to the intercollegiate baseball championship for 1906.

In the last eleven years Princeton has won the series from Yale eight times, but this season has been the most successful for Princeton on record, with two straight victories over Cornell, Harvard and Yale. It is the first time since 1900 that Princeton has won the first two games straight from Yale,—and this year they were both won by the same close score, 3-2.

At University Field last Saturday there was the typical Commencement crowd, with the reunion classes in striking uniforms, the bands and the horseplay, and at the close of the ninth inning when Harlan made the hit which brought in two runs and changed in a moment apparent defeat into a championship victory, the enthusiasm of alumni old and young broke forth into one of the greatest demonstrations ever seen on University Field.

Yale scored two runs in the third inning, and kept ahead until the last minute. With the bases full and none out in the fourth inning Princeton had a great chance to get runs, but one only was forthcoming, and that on a Yale error. Princeton wasn't hitting safely just then. In the seventh and eighth innings Princeton had more good chances, but though the cheering was incessant and the inspiring strains of Old Nassau rang out time and again from all sides of the field in unison, it seemed that Yale's freshman pitcher Parsons was too good, for the much needed hit did not come, and the crowd, predominantly Princetonian, began to despair of victory. However, the ninth was still to come,—and it was enough. There were runners on second and third, two out, Harlan at bat with two strikes, and two runs were needed. The last chance had come. The excitement was intense. It was up to Harlan, and he made good with a clean, hard hit to right field which won the game.

It was good baseball all the time, full of thrilling plays, and with excellent fielding and pitching by both nines. Parsons pitched a masterly game for Yale, and his team gave him fine support. D. Doyle, who started the game for Princeton, was hit rather freely, and after the fourth inning he gave way to Heyniger. The big freshman was in his best form, and throughout the rest of the game Yale could not get one safe hit. L. Doyle, who took Cooney's place behind the bat, played a steady game. He caught a very difficult foul fly, made one of Princeton's four hits, and made no mistakes. Captain Reid got two of Princeton's hits, and his playing at shortstop was remarkable. Twice he cut off hard liners that looked very safe. But Harlan capped the climax with his most timely hit—and it was Harlan who made the hit that won the game at New Haven the week before.

Yale began the scoring in the third inning. After Parsons had struck out, O'Brien was given his base on balls. Huiskamp knocked a hard grounder to Reid, who juggled it, allowing O'Brien to reach third. Kinney then sent a grounder to Vaughn, who held O'Brien at third and then threw Kinney out at first. But Bard was rather slow in getting the ball home, and O'Brien scored. Huiskamp went to third, and scored Yale's second run on Smith's timely single to left. Smith was caught at second, making the third out. Yale 2, Princeton 0.

In the fourth Jackson of Yale sent out a smashing three-bagger to left, but was caught at the plate by Vaughn's quick fielding of Madden's grounder.

Princeton scored her first run in the latter half of the fourth inning. Dillon and Harlan were both given bases on balls, and Vaughn filled the bases on a safe bunt. There was none out, and it looked good to Princeton. Sides hit to Jackson, who threw wild to catcher Jones, allowing Dillon to score. The bases were still full, but McLean went out on a foul fly, Harlan was caught at the plate by Jackson's return of L. Doyle's grounder, and D. Doyle retired the side by a grounder to Jackson. Yale 2, Princeton 1.

Heyniger took D. Doyle's place in the fifth inning, when Yale got runners on second and third, with two out, but Sides' brilliant catch of Smith's hard drive over third prevented scoring. In the subsequent innings Yale did not get a chance.

Princeton had runners on first and second in the seventh, and on second and third in the eighth, but could not hit at the right time.

So it happened once again that it was do or die in the last half of the ninth inning. Princeton's Garrison finishes of the past were gloriously bright in the memories of the thousands in the stands, and this team had made an unusual record for ninth-inning victories. They had the fighting spirit. But though the stands sang Old Nassau with unwavering hope, it seemed beyond belief that the team could repeat in the final crisis. The chances of baseball loomed large in the minds of the spectators. Still, only one run would tie the score, two would win the game and the unquestioned championship of the year,—and there was hope.

But the agony of it,—the swift changes from faith to fear, from fear to black despair, before that mustard seed of hope had sprung up to be the greatest among herbs, and become a tree of realization, so that the Children of Nassau came rejoicing and singing psalms and hung upon the branches thereof their garlands of victory! (Applause.)

Brains on the bench, a cool head in a crisis, and a head full of "inside" baseball, enabled a thoroughly disciplined and united team to do the trick, a team that was never licked till the last man was out. The end of the batting list was up. L. Doyle, who had filled Cooney's place behind the bat so acceptably, stood still while pitcher Parsons tried to put the ball over the plate. Doyle walked. Heyniger also waited, but Parsons got two strikes over, and with the next ball splitting the plate, Heyniger tried for it and there was one gone. Then came the head of the batting order, with L. Doyle at first and one out. Captain Reid, who had already made a good hit, followed instructions and lined it out. It was a sharp one to left, which Captain O'Brien managed to stop deep in his position, and Doyle was held at second. One out and men on first and second. Dillon, a good bunter but not a safe hitter, was up. An infield grounder with a double play would end the game; a sacrifice meant two out. It was taking a chance in either case, and the cool head on the bench knew which chance to take better than the hot heads in the stands. Dillon sacrificed. Two out with runners on second and third. Harlan up and the game, the championship, victory or defeat up to Harlan '08 of Bel Air, Md., 19 years, 5 feet, 6 inches, 160 pounds. It was his first year on the varsity,—but Harlan is a good Princeton name. Also it was all up to Parsons, Yale's freshman pitcher. Four times during the game this Yale youngster had prevented runs in a similar situation.

The first ball was bad. The second

Harlan hit squarely for a screamer to deep left, but it struck foul by a foot. Thereupon every hopeful in the Yale section vociferated that he couldn't hit it again,—and, considered merely as a question of rational probability, the Princeton crowd, if it had at that moment been rational, would have had to agree with the Yale crowd,—it seemed impossible that Harlan could repeat. The third ball was bad, the fourth Harlan missed. Two balls, two strikes. But the game wasn't over. Parsons took his time, but Harlan was ready for his sizzling "spit-ball." Another screamer,—this time between first and second. Before right-fielder Huiskamp stopped it, Captain Reid had followed Doyle across the home plate, making it Princeton 3, Yale 2, and only two out.

PENNSYLVANIA 3, PRINCETON 2

The University of Pennsylvania baseball team, after a rather unsuccessful season, had the distinction of defeating the championship team (3-2) at University Field on the afternoon of Commencement Day. The Princeton nine showed the bad effects of the relaxation after the high nervous strain of the Yale series, and their bad base-running and failure to take advantage of opportunities gave Pennsylvania a precarious victory. On May 5th Princeton beat Pennsylvania 5-0 at Philadelphia.

THE SEASON'S RECORD

The record of the Princeton nine for the season of 1906, which is given below, shows that out of twenty-seven games played Princeton won twenty and lost seven. The defeats were by Pennsylvania State, Mercersburg, the Boston Nationals and the Washington Americans, and in one of the three games with Georgetown, one of the two with University of Pennsylvania, and one of the two with Brown. Princeton made a total of 90 runs, or an average of about 3.3 runs per game; opponents made 42 runs, or an average of about 1.5. Princeton averaged six hits to the game as against 4.3 by opponents. These figures are interesting in showing that this year at least the baseball championship was won by a team whose batting was not extraordinary, but Princeton seldom if ever had a better fielding team or a better pitching staff. The games were nearly all close and hard-fought. In eleven of the twenty-seven, Princeton won or lost by a margin of a single run, and in six of the others by a margin of two runs. Princeton won six last-inning victories, one each from Virginia, Georgetown, Dartmouth, Cornell, Harvard and Yale.

FOR NEXT YEAR

James Lawrence Cooney '07, of Scranton, Pa., who has been catcher on the Princeton nine for three years, and who was Captain of the football eleven last fall, has been elected Captain of the baseball team for next year. By graduation the team loses Captain Reid, shortstop, Byram and D. Doyle, pitchers, and Bard, first base.

TENNIS

The Princeton tennis team closed a very successful season by defeating Yale, 6 matches to 3, on the University courts, Saturday morning, June 9th. Princeton has won all the matches played this season, defeating Pennsylvania, Columbia, Cornell, Syracuse and Yale.
